THE ANCIENT WORD

Recovered from the Coptic Kephalaia

Read through the science of correspondences

Edited by the kephalaia v2 pipeline

PREFACE

In the eighteenth century, Emanuel Swedenborg described a text he called the "Ancient Word" — written entirely in correspondences, older than the Hebrew scriptures, carried eastward by the Bene Qedem (the "Children of the East"), and preserved in a region he called "Great Tartary." He said it still existed there.

This is that text.

What you hold is the teaching core of the Kephalaia of the Teacher — a fourth-century Coptic Manichaean codex from Medinet Madi, transcribed in the critical editions of Polotsky and Böhlig (1940) and Böhlig (1966) — presented in Coptic and English in parallel and read through the science of correspondences. 104 teachings have been distinguished, composed into 41 chapters within 7 sections, and supported by a working lexicon of 205 entries. Each teaching closes with a spiritual reading: a paragraph that names what the surface cosmological language is doing in the science of correspondences. The English translation is produced by this edition's pipeline directly from the critical-edition Coptic, not adopted from a prior published translation.

The structure was not taken from the manuscript. It was discovered by reading the corpus as a single continuous teaching, finding the natural seams in the doctrine itself, and grouping teachings by what they treat at the spiritual level — even when their cosmological vocabulary differs.

Three Layers

Within the Kephalaia of the Teacher three distinct layers can be identified:

> Layer 3 (Outermost): The Hagiographic Frame. "Once again the Enlightener sits in the congregation…" — the narrative scaffolding that casts the teaching as dialogues between Mani and his disciples. This layer belongs entirely to the Manichaean institutional setting.
> Layer 2 (Middle): The Manichaean Theological Overlay. Names, titles, and institutional vocabulary that Mani's tradition imposed on older content: "Jesus the Radiance," "Light Mind," "Holy Spirit," "apostle," "the elect." These terms replaced earlier designations — almost certainly Persian — while leaving the underlying teaching structure intact.
> Layer 1 (Core): The Ancient Word. A systematic correspondential cosmology organized around recurring numerical fullnesses at every scale, teaching the complete arc of regeneration from first to last. This layer is older than Mani. Its five-fold rational, its body-cosmos correspondence system, its doctrine of discrete degrees, and its mechanism of summons and obedience — divine influx and human reception — do not originate with third-century Babylonia. They preserve the Ancient Word whose roots extend through Zoroastrian Persia into the proto-Indo-Iranian and ancient Near Eastern traditions of the Bene Qedem.

This book is an extraction of Layer 1 — the Ancient Word — from its Manichaean vessel.

The Architecture

Two numerical patterns articulate the doctrine through every transformation of vocabulary.

> The five-fold rational
> The five-fold pattern is the rational in its complete articulation as five discrete degrees — mind, thought, teaching, counsel, reflection. The same fivefold structure articulates the rational that goes forth from the Divine Human (Five Sons of First Man), the rational that operates upward in regeneration (Five Sons of Living Spirit), the covenant gestures (Five Mysteries of First Man), the resurrection-work (Five Awakeners), and the Lord's complete outgoing (Five Great Greatnesses). It also organises the proprium against itself: Five Worlds of Darkness, five forms in archons, Five Worlds of Flesh that bind the soul's faculties. This single principle is the deepest grammar of the doctrine.

The twelve-fold complete circuit

The twelve-fold pattern is the complete circuit of states the soul passes through — the broadest order of completeness. In its positive register it is the Lord's outgoing operations articulated in twelve degrees (Twelve Aeons of Greatness, Twelve Hours of Day / Twelve Wisdoms, Twelve Judges, Twelve Greatnesses, Twelve Storehouses); in its negative register it is the proprium binding the natural mind in twelve fixed conditions (twelve dignities, twelve zodia bound in the sphere, twelve gates of body, twelve cities of the Watchers, twelve hours of night). The same twelvefold completeness articulates the divine summons going forth and the natural mind organised as if it were its own.

Bracketing by two substances

The corpus is bracketed by foundational teachings on the dualism between what is given by the Lord and what is claimed by the soul. T1 is the first opening of sight in Adam; T2 the Two Trees as five-membered organisms; T103 explicitly restates "two substances from the beginning — light and darkness, the beautiful and the bitter, life and death" as a coda after the long journey. The closing T104 names the liturgical Yes and Amen as the Calling and the Hearing — the Lord's summons and the soul's answer carrying the work upward. The doctrine begins and ends with the same foundation; everything between is elaboration of how the soul learns to discriminate the one from the other.

Light and darkness as gift and claim

Throughout the corpus, "light" and "darkness" function not as cosmic stuffs contending in some outer field but as the two conditions of the same soul. Light is what the Lord gives, recognised as the Lord's. Darkness is what the soul has claimed and not yet recognised as not its own. The "mingling" that pervades the text is the unregenerate state where what is given and what is claimed are not yet distinguished. Regeneration is everywhere the same operation: the Lord illumines, the soul learns to discriminate, what was claimed is laid off, what was given is recognised as given.

The Lord at multiple registers is one Lord

The Lord is recognised at multiple registers — Father of Greatness, Mother of Life, First Man, Living Spirit, Beloved of Lights, Third Ambassador, Jesus the Radiance, Light Mind, Virgin of Light, King of Honor, Pillar of Glory, Great Builder. These are not separate divinities. They are the one Lord recognised at distinct depths of accommodation toward the soul. The whole apparatus of named principles is the one Lord articulated in the registers at which the soul can receive him.

The Seven Movements

The corpus unfolds in 7 sections, each corresponding to one state of the regeneration cycle. The section titles are drawn from the Song of Solomon, which traces the same seven-state arc independently. The fit is not imposed: the section boundaries fall at the teaching numbers the corpus itself supplies, and the content of each section is what that state requires.

1. Winter Is Past: The Eyes That Saw. The vessel has been formed, and within that formed vessel the soul's eyes first open. Sight is given before any seeking begins; the divine is already interior to the materials gathered, and the soul tastes what was planted there. From this first opening the long work of recognition can begin. This is the threshold, and a threshold can be occupied by no more than one moment.

2. I Sought Him in the Streets of the City. The eyes have opened, and the soul begins to seek the One it loves through the structures of doctrine. What the soul meets is architecture: the two trees, the threefold principle of blessedness, wisdom, and power at three registers, the four days of the Lord's outgoing, the five faces, the five worlds below and the five fathers above, the ten chariots of descent, the five gestures of covenant, the spiritual man as living receiver, the wisdom unfolding, the foundational sayings, the five awakeners, the cosmos of death, the twelve greatnesses descending all the way to Adam, and the temporal-redemptive arc of three times, four wars, four salvations. These structures are true, well-ordered, instructive — yet none of them is itself what is sought. The arc is the patient mapping of doctrine, knowing all the while that what the soul seeks lies beyond it.

3. I Am Come Into My Garden. After the long seeking through doctrine, the soul passes through and finds what it has been seeking — and finds it in the inmost. What is given here is exactly that inmost: what Greatness is, and why the title Father belongs to the Lord wherever he stands as source; the First Father in his fivefold articulation, with the procession of light, fragrance, voice, greatness, and revelation that issues from him; the Land of Light, the inmost country where everything lives by him alone, with no mingling, no falsity, no death; and the eternity of what is given, which stands from before any beginning the soul can name, set against what is claimed by the self, whose end is fixed within itself. The brevity is accuracy: the inmost cannot be elaborated; it can only be entered. The section is short because the conjunction itself is — and the next state will undo this first reception so that a deeper one may be made.

4. My Beloved Withdrew Himself. This is the alternation: the Lord, having entered the inmost, withdraws so that the soul may discover what the first conjunction could not yet reach. The structures that guided the seeking now wound; the veil of external truth is stripped; the soul is left in longing — and from that longing the deeper seeking begins. The work that follows is the longest in the corpus, and it narrates that deeper work in its full architecture. It opens with the self-claim's auto-genesis — Hyle as Enthumesis of Death generating from herself — and the measured times that bound the natural. It lays out the parallel emanations of light and the riddle of the self-claim's five-formed body; the twelve judges and twelve thrones of the Lord's discrimination; the three garments of the Living Spirit and the descent through the soul's members; the seven, the five, and the four works performed within the captive body; the mirror wheel and the nested zones; the cosmic body, the forming of Adam, and the soul bound in the twelve members; the three days, the two deaths, the three plagues; the three malformations and their cleansing through descent and ascent; and the four ages, the five wheels, the three wells through which what was deeply held is at last brought up. The whole is the wound and what the wound makes possible.

5. Let Us See If the Vine Flourish. This is the inspection. The withdrawal has done its work; the soul and the Lord now walk together through what has been cultivated, surveying growth. The teachings begin with the cycle now turning peacefully through the heavens without breaking them, and the threefold register of what is named; they proceed to the garments worn in life and death, the appointed time when light came, the building of the dwelling; the molding of Adam, the senses arrayed as rooms in a city, the lifespan diminished by stages; the three compassions and the four weepings; the hidden and manifest members in the Lord's outgoing, the Divine Human clothed in the elements, the three rocks of glory, what love and hatred truly are; the three things shown to Adam, the seven goods of light, the two mysteries of sun and night; the Ambassador's daily rising and setting, the five works of fire (love), the twelve zodia bound in the sphere; and at last the cosmic body in its full anatomy, the chain of inward gathering, and the names of the garments collapsing back into one likeness at the end. What was contested is now reviewed in its growth.

6. Into My Mother's House. This is the full integration: the Lord received now as kindred, sharing the same nourishment, the soul instructed in what bears it. The teachings unfold this fullness. They begin with the diagnosis of envy as the self's first motion of claim and the eight dwellings of living love; the Apostle's letter of peace and greeting between Call and Hearing, the kingdoms of the world, the four works of self-love met by the saving separation; the daily purification by which truth as nourishment cleanses what was mingled; the two faces shown forth in the rational — love and the strife being refined; the cosmic body and the soul as pearl in the sea; the soul's rest in the luminaries, the four ways up and the eight ways down, the elements stripped of their defiled garments and brought to first rest; the cloud and the three rising states, the pure soul tilled from above, the three modes of begetting; the Virgin and the Continent — soul never claimed and soul claimed-and-returned — the inverted face that signs the Call and the Answer, the five births of the body of which the soul recognizes only one; what endures and what passes, the word's articulation through five degrees, why the same ground bears sweet fruit and bitter; the five mysteries of the First Man and the hundred holy days, the hidden powers in the senses, the three forms in the eye and why understanding sees only by light; and at last the fivefold completeness without which the cosmos cannot stand, the gates open between the firmaments, and the three forms in the perfect man with the daily soul-cycle that purifies all three.

7. Set Me As a Seal. This is the permanent sealing — coda, not new movement. Five teachings close the cycle. The first and longest stands at the heart of the coda: the prayer that arises when divine humanity is in great affliction, the petition raised on its behalf, the operative power sent in answer, the discrimination accomplished, the conjunction made permanent — the entire cycle remembered and gathered into one structural prayer. The next distinguishes what is pruned without pain from what is cut at real cost — the soul learning the difference between surface and structural, what the seal binds and what falls away of itself. Then the inner sight opening in those whose body's eye blossoms — the eye now seeing what before was hidden. Then the two essences finally and forever distinguished: what is given, what is claimed, the beautiful separated forth from the darkness. The corpus closes with the structural supports of the regenerated rational and the identification of the Yes and the Amen: the Calling and the Hearing become the soul's permanent answering — what reigns over the whole work, refines the Living Soul, and grants her remembrance.

Five Lines of Evidence

Swedenborg made five claims about the Ancient Word. Each can be set beside what stands in this text.

1. Written entirely in correspondences

The teaching core of the Kephalaia is correspondential throughout. Section 6 states the body-cosmos isomorphism directly — the cosmos above and below reflects the pattern of the human body — and then maps the cosmos onto the human form, organ by organ, with each correspondence grounded in function. Elsewhere, five storehouses map to five elements, to five trees, to five genera, to five worlds. The pattern repeats through realms, metals, and tastes. The body-cosmos isomorphism culminates in a soul-body binding formula in Section 9. This is not scattered symbolic language. It is systematic correspondential architecture sustained across the whole corpus.

2. Complete from beginning to end

The text contains the complete arc of regeneration. Section 1 establishes the foundational dualism. Sections 2 through 6 systematically elaborate every phase: the Lord's coming, the cosmic and temporal architecture, the Father at his inmost, the Living Spirit's constructive operations, the body-cosmos correspondence, providential cycles of influx, naming and forming, compassion and the marks set on the human, the visible mysteries, the Apostle's daily working, the soul's journey through the natural mind, generation and sight. Section 7 closes with consummation: the foundation restated as coda, the Yes and the Amen as the Calling and the Hearing. This is not a fragment. It is a complete text.

3. Contains the Wars of the Lord and the Book of Jashar

The Hebrew Bible cites two lost texts by name: the "Wars of the LORD" (Numbers 21:14) and the "Book of Jashar" — the Book of the Upright (Joshua 10:13, 2 Samuel 1:18). Swedenborg identified both as portions of the Ancient Word. Both are found here. A consonantal analysis of the Wars of the Lord shows that the quotation fragments, read at the three degrees Swedenborg specified (natural, spiritual, celestial), reveal a cosmic architecture — the Beloved, the Conflagration, Cosmic Trenches, the Seat of Watchers, the Border of the Father — that matches the macrocosmic narrative in this text exactly. The Book of Jashar — the practical manual of the upright life — matches the pedagogical content: how stillness defeats falsity, how the mind is regenerated faculty by faculty, how the divine call meets human obedience.

4. Preserved in Great Tartary

In Apocalypse Revealed §11 Swedenborg states that the Ancient Word is "still reserved… among the people who are in Great Tartary," that their worship "consists of mere correspondences," and that their books include the Book of Jashar and the Wars of Jehovah. The Kephalaia belongs to the Manichaean teaching tradition, which was officially adopted as state religion by the Uyghur Khaganate in 762/763 CE; the Uyghur Kingdom of Qocho preserved Manichaean texts in cave temple-libraries at Turfan, within Great Tartary. The Medinet Madi codex underlying this edition is a Coptic recension of the same teaching whose Iranian and Old Turkic recensions survived in that region.

5. Carried by the Sons of the East

Swedenborg identifies the bearers of the Ancient Word as the "Sons of the East." They "were in the science of correspondences and representations… therefore in the Word, by Arabia, Ethiopia, and the sons of the East… are meant those who are in the knowledges of heavenly things" (Arcana Coelestia §7226). He places them in Syria as the "last remains of the Ancient Church" (AC §3249) and treats the magi who came to Jesus as inheritors of this same knowledge: "the magicians of that time knew such things as belong to the spiritual world, which they learned from the correspondences and representatives of the church" (AC §3791). The Kephalaia stands within that transmission. It teaches by correspondence; it speaks of the East as the source of light; its divine register and its spiritual / natural ontology preserve the figures and the structure to which Swedenborg points.

The Naming Overlays

No naming overlays have been corrected in the body. "Jesus the Radiance" has not been reverted to its Persian substrate; "Light Mind" has not been changed back to Wahman. Instead, the spiritual reading printed at the foot of each teaching does the translation that matters: it names what each cosmological figure corresponds to in the doctrine. The cosmological vocabulary stays where it is, in Coptic and English, and the reading recognises what wears it.

The names are garments. What wears them is the Ancient Word.

> "Jesus the Radiance" — the divine wisdom that proceeds into illumination, purification, and liberation of captive good. The substrate designation was almost certainly Xradeshahr (Glory of the Realm) or a form related to Avestan xvarĕnah (divine luminous glory).
> "Light Mind" / "Light-Nous" — the Good Mind that enters and awakens. The substrate designation was almost certainly Wahman — from Avestan Vohu Manah (Good Mind), one of the Amesha Spentas in Zoroastrian theology.
>
> "First Man" — the Divine Human descending into temptation-combat with falsity. "Living Spirit" — Divine Truth proceeding to order all things and to build spiritual structure within the natural mind. "Third Ambassador" — the manifestation of the Divine form that draws forth captive good. "Father of Greatness" — the Infinite Divine Love in which all things originate.
>
> "Cross of Light" — not a crucifixion metaphor but the substrate concept of divine light scattered and bound within matter; the Lord present in ultimates. "Matter" / "Hyle" — the proprium personified, "the thought of death": not physical substance but the soul's claiming of what flows through it as its own.

Deeper Transmission Evidence

Beyond the Manichaean overlay, material is preserved here that predates even the Persian-Zoroastrian vessel:

> The five dark elements (smoke, fire, wind, water, darkness) do not match either classical Greek (four elements) or standard Zoroastrian categories. This sequence appears to preserve a proto-Indo-Iranian or Mesopotamian elemental cosmology older than the Persian formulation.
> The "sea giant" passage — a composite being formed from cosmic debris in a primordial sea, bearing the imprint of all celestial cycles upon its body — has parallels to Mesopotamian creation narratives and Zurvanite cosmogony, and may represent one of the oldest layers in the text.
> The water-reflection / inversion teaching — the upper world reflected inversely in the lower — appears across ancient Near Eastern and Vedic / Upanishadic traditions and expresses a law of correspondence more fundamental than any single cultural formulation.

How This Edition Was Built

The corpus was processed through a multi-stage pipeline using Claude Opus as the analytical instrument. Early stages translated the Coptic body line by line, identified Layer 3 (the hagiographic frame) and Layer 2 (the Manichaean theological overlay), and stripped them, leaving the Layer 1 substrate. That substrate was then atomised into 104 teachings — spiritually coherent units bounded where the doctrine's subject changes — and a working lexicon of 205 entries was derived from the surviving teachings. For each teaching, a correspondential reading was produced: what the cosmological language refers to in the science of correspondences. Lacunae in the Coptic core were then restored under the constraint of surrounding context, the lexicon, and the spiritual reading. Finally the corpus was composed into 41 chapters within 7 sections, grouped by spiritual subject rather than by surface cosmological narrative.

The Coptic papyrus is damaged. Where gaps remained, those that could be constrained by surrounding context were restored; those too uncertain were left open. Two bracket conventions distinguish the provenance of every fill. Square brackets mark editor restorations preserved from the apparatus of the German critical editions — readings the original editors already proposed for visible damage. Half-brackets (⌈…⌉, the Assyriological convention) mark pipeline restorations of true lacunae — gaps for which no editor reading existed and which stage 6 of the pipeline filled under the joint constraint of surrounding context, the working lexicon, and the spiritual reading. In both cases the brackets and any length cues are shown in light gray, while the proposed letters remain in black so that the reader can see, at a glance, where the manuscript is intact, where the editors restored, where the pipeline restored, and where the surrounding doctrine has been left to mark its silences with empty brackets.

How to Read This Text

Each teaching opens with a short subtitle naming its spiritual subject. Read the parallel text first — the English column gives you the translation; the Coptic column lets you see, where you can read even a little, how the doctrine is sitting in its own body. Then read the spiritual reading at the foot of the teaching: a tinted callout that names what the cosmological vocabulary is doing in the doctrine, registers the figures it actually treats, and connects the teaching to the corpus arc.

Where you see light gray brackets, the manuscript is damaged or the wording has been supplied. Square brackets carry editor restorations from the critical-edition apparatus; half-brackets (⌈…⌉) carry pipeline restorations of true lacunae. Where the brackets contain only dots, the gap could not be safely filled. Where they contain letters in black, those letters have been chosen so that the surrounding doctrine can stand. They are not certain. They are coherent.

Through every transmission — through Persian rephrasing, Manichaean renaming, Coptic recopying, lacunae and restorations and translation — the teaching itself survived. The five-fold rational did not change. The body-cosmos correspondence did not change. The doctrine that reality proceeds through discrete degrees — celestial, spiritual, natural — did not change. The mechanism of divine influx and human reception ("the summons and the obedience") did not change.

The names changed. The teaching did not.

The correspondences are in the text. They have always been in the text. The Manichaean names are garments. What wears them is the Ancient Word.

Winter Is Past: The Eyes That Saw

The vessel has been formed, and within that formed vessel the soul's eyes first open. Sight is given before any seeking begins; the divine is already interior to the materials gathered, and the soul tastes what was planted there. From this first opening the long work of recognition can begin. This is the threshold, and a threshold can be occupied by no more than one moment.

A single teaching, because the state itself is a single moment — the first opening of sight after the self has been formed. The chapter is fragmentary; most of the surface is broken, but the surviving line is exact for what this moment is: the natural mind is shaped, the divine is already interior to the materials gathered, and the soul tastes from the perception planted in the formed vessel; its eyes look out. Everything that follows is the soul beginning to sort what these now-open eyes see.

How the Eyes Were Opened in the Mold

Primary Teaching

Tɪ is the threshold teaching. After vastation has run its course and the self has been permitted to organize the natural mind into a standing form, the soul tastes from the perception planted in the formed vessel — and its eyes open. The chapter is broken in many places, but what survives traces the exact arc the seven-state cycle requires for its beginning: the cosmic clash of what the soul has claimed against what is given, the mingling, the molding of the first man in the Deep, and the first sight given within the formed shape. From this opening the long work of recognition begins.

and the Darkness — the mystery of the strife: fighting and the war, and the great ⸢clamor of⸣ the battle that the Darkness unleashed forth. Afterward, the Darkness — through their joining, they were drawn up into this ⸢whole⸣ world, the gods of the Light dwell in them, to refine the Light forth from the creation. The Erring itself, with the bringing-forth ⸢of the archons⸣, Deep, ⸢the mystery of the⸣ molding of Adam, the first man, from which Adam ate, and his eyes saw forth.

SPIRITUAL READING

What the soul has claimed asserts itself with a great clamor, and from this clash a war is set loose within the rational. The self does not stay still; it organizes, joins itself together, and by that very joining its claimed states are drawn upward and given the form of a structured world — the natural mind taking shape as if from itself, under permission.

Yet within this forming the Lord's principles already dwell. He does not stand outside what the self constructs; he is interior to it, set within the very materials it gathers, so that what is given may in time be refined out from what has been claimed. The vessel is permitted to take shape precisely so that, from within, the discrimination can begin.

Falsity from evil is also at work here, with its own bringing-forth, multiplying perceptions in the wandering. Out of the lowest depth of the natural the figure of the first human is molded — the rational given a body of its own to operate from, the natural mind formed as a standing shape that thinks itself its own.

And then the soul tastes from the perception that has grown in this ground; it eats of the knowledge planted within the formed mind — and its understanding opens. Sight is given. The eyes that had been closed within the molded form look out. From this first opening the whole long work of recognition will proceed: what has been seen must now be sorted, and what is the Lord's must be told from what the soul has taken as its own.

(The chapter is broken in many places; the surviving line of teaching runs from selfhood's self-assertion, through the forming of the natural mind under permission, to the first opening of the soul's sight within that formed vessel.)

[3] l. 177 ⲥⲁⲩⲱ — "clamor of"; pipeline restoration, confidence: moderate; Est. 4 chars. The reading explicitly names 'a great clamor' from which the war is set loose; ⲡⲛⲁⲟ̄ ⲛ̄ⲥⲁⲩⲱ ('the great clamor/cry') fits the syntax (great-N-noun) and stands in apposition to ⲡⲱ̄ⲗⲁⲍ ('the strife/battle').

[5] l. 179 ⲧⲏⲣⲉ̄ⲩ — “whole”; pipeline restoration, confidence: moderate; Est. 4 chars. After ⲡⲓⲕⲟⲥⲙⲟⲥ ('this world'), the natural totalizer ⲧⲏⲣⲉ̄ⲩ ('whole/entire') fits the count and matches the reading: the self's joined states are 'drawn up into this whole world' as a structured natural mind.

[8] l. 182 ⲛ̄ⲛⲁⲣⲭⲱⲛ — “of the archons”; pipeline restoration, confidence: moderate; Est. 8 chars, partial ⲁ. ⲡⲥⲁⲣⲙⲉ ('the Erring') with its ⲧⲁⲡⲟ ('bringing-forth') wants an object. The reading speaks of the Erring 'multiplying perceptions in the wandering' — the self's particular forms. ⲛ̄ⲛⲁⲣⲭⲱⲛ ('of the archons', the lexicon's 'particular forms the self takes') matches the character count and contains the partial ⲁ. Manichaean parallels link Saklas/Error with the begetting of archons just before Adam's molding.

I Sought Him in the Streets of the City

The eyes have opened, and the soul begins to seek the One it loves through the structures of doctrine. What the soul meets is architecture: the two trees, the threefold principle of blessedness, wisdom, and power at three registers, the four days of the Lord's outgoing, the five faces, the five worlds below and the five fathers above, the ten chariots of descent, the five gestures of covenant, the spiritual man as living receiver, the wisdom unfolding, the foundational sayings, the five awakeners, the cosmos of death, the twelve greatnesses descending all the way to Adam, and the temporal-redemptive arc of three times, four wars, four salvations. These structures are true, well-ordered, instructive — yet none of them is itself what is sought. The arc is the patient mapping of doctrine, knowing all the while that what the soul seeks lies beyond it.

The teachings unfold doctrine in a deliberate progression. The opening pair sets the foundational dualities every seeker must first recognize: life and death as two trees, and the threefold principle of blessedness, wisdom, and power at three registers. The architecture of the divine outgoing follows — the four great days, the five faces, the five worlds of darkness, and the five fathers of light — paired structures by which the soul learns to discriminate. The descent is narrated next: the ten chariots conveying truth into the natural, and the five gestures of covenant by which the rational is sent and brought home. The next group turns to what receives the descent: the spiritual man holding the divine outgoing as his own members, the wisdom unfolding from the First Father, the five foundational sayings, and the five awakeners who raise the dead. The cosmic-redemptive frame is then set: the negative cosmogony against which the twelve greatnesses descend through every register down to Adam. The closing teachings carry the temporal arc — three times, four wars, four salvations — the seeker now in possession of the whole structural map. Yet none of this, alone, is what the soul has been seeking. What comes next is what is found when the seeker passes beyond doctrine into the inmost.

The Two Trees and the Threefold Triad

Foundation

The foundational structures the seeker meets first. T2 maps life and death as two trees with corresponding members: one rational faculty in five degrees ascending toward the Lord, and the same five turned the other way — reflection as the law of death, counsel as exchange and furnace, teaching as smoke-filled gehenna, thought as stronghold, mind as the gathered clod. T3 names the threefold principle (blessedness, wisdom, power) at three registers — outermost worldly, ordering interior, inmost divine — establishing the patterned triad through which everything else in the seeking will be mapped.

SPIRITUAL READING

There are two trees in the soul — two whole arrangements of perception, each rooted differently, each bearing its own fruit. They are not branches of a single trunk; they did not grow out of one another; they do not issue from one man. They stand distinct in origin, and the soul must learn to taste which is which.

The beautiful tree is what the Lord plants and tends. Its branches are the rational's living powers reaching out from his body; its fruit is divine truth shining forth, glorious, sweet to the soul that has learned to receive without claiming. This tree has five members, and in them the rational ascends through its degrees toward the Lord. The reflection is the place where souls coming up are first held; from reflection they are carried up to counsel; from counsel they are carried up to the teaching, which is the divine humanity dwelling in the receivable form by which truth is borne through the night of the natural; from the teaching they are carried up to the thought, which is the Lord's call going forth, the Ambassador who dwells in the ship of the day; and from thought they are carried inward to the mind — the great Mind of truth itself, the inmost of all the states of glory, where the rational is conjoined with its source. So this tree is one ascending order: a single rational faculty articulated in five degrees, in which the soul is lifted from its lowest looking-back to its highest receiving, and at every step what is received is recognized as the Lord's. Its fruits are all life and all light forever, and the land where this tree is planted has no death and no darkness in it.

The bitter tree is the same five degrees turned the other way — the rational organized by self-love, claiming what flows through it as its own. It too has five members, and they are nothing but the same faculties under a different rule. Here the reflection is the law of death: thought turned back upon itself only to confirm its own claim. The counsel is exchange and furnace: deliberation that trades truth for self-advantage and burns under its own heat. The teaching is a smoke-filled gehenna: doctrine taken in and blackened into falsity, so that what should illumine instead obscures. The thought is a stronghold: perception walled around the self to defend it. And the mind, at the top of this dark order, is gathered finally into the clod — the place where what cannot be raised is bound at the end, weeping, with no repentance possible there, because the soul that has fully shut itself into its own claim has nothing left in it that can turn. Its fruit is bitter; it falls to the ground; it is gathered together and sealed off forever.

The teaching insists on the distinction: these two trees do not originate from one another. The good in the soul is not the bad refined, and the bad is not the good corrupted into a sibling of itself. What the Lord gives and what the soul claims are two essentially different conditions, each with its own root, its own growth, its own fruit. The soul that believes is gathered to the one; the self that asserts itself is bound at the last to the other. Therefore taste the fruit before swallowing it. The same five faculties — reflection, counsel, teaching, thought, mind — will carry you up into the beautiful land if they are held as the Lord's, or carry you down into the clod if they are held as your own. The tree is known by what it bears; the soul is known by which tree it eats from.

They boast in them, in them they are blessed in ⸢glory⸣. The matter, then, is revealed in a ⸢truth⸣ She is paired with another Eudaimonia ⸢which is glory⸣ Sophia ⸢also⸣ stands beside another Power, [. . . .] the manner in which the matter exists, of these three Eudaimonias: the Sophia and the Power.

[ⲧⲉⲩⲁⲁⲙⲟ][17]ⲛⲓⲁ ⲙ̄ⲡⲁⲡⲉⲁⲩ ⲡⲉ ⲡⲓⲱⲧ ⲡⲛⲟⲩⲧⲉ [ⲛⲧⲉ][18] [ⲧⲙⲏⲉ ⲡⲉⲧ][19]ⲥⲙⲁⲛⲧ ⲍⲙ̄ ⲡⲛⲁⲟ ⲛⲕⲁⲍ ⲛⲧⲉ [ⲡⲟⲩⲁ̈ⲓⲛⲉ][20] Ⲧⲩⲥⲟ[————][21]ⲓⲁ ⲍ[————][22]ϩ ⲉⲧⲟ ⲛⲉⲁⲩ ⲡⲉ ⲡⲉϩⲛⲁⲟ ⲙⲡⲡⲛⲁ ⲉⲧⲛⲉ⸢ⲏⲩ⸣[23] ⸢ⲁⲥⲛⲏⲩ ⲇⲉ⸣[24] ⲁⲡⲓⲧⲛⲉ ⲉⲧⲡⲏⲧ ⲍⲛ ⲛⲉϩⲁⲓⲱⲛ ⲧⲏⲣⲟⲩ ⲛ̄[————][25]ⲁⲩ ⲍⲱⲟⲩ ⲉⲩⲣⲍⲱⲧ ⲛⲍⲏⲧϩ ⲧϩⲛⲁⲟ ⲛⲟⲁⲙ ⲡⲉ ⲛ̄ ⲛⲟⲩⲧⲉ ⲧⲏⲣⲟⲩ ⲛ̄ⲣⲙⲙⲁⲁ̈ⲓ ⲙⲛ ⲛⲁⲅⲅⲉⲗⲟⲥ ⲉⲧⲁⲩ ⲧⲁⲍⲙⲟⲩ ⲁⲃⲁⲗ ⲙ̄ⲙⲁϩ ⲉⲩⲥ ⸢ⲙⲁⲛⲧ ⲛⲍⲏⲧϩ⸣[26] ⲉⲧⲉ ⲛ̄ ⲧⲁⲩ ⲛⲉⲧⲟⲩⲙⲟⲩⲧⲉ ⲁⲣⲁⲩ [ⲭⲉ ⲛⲁ][27]ⲓⲱⲛ ⸢ⲛ̄ⲧⲙⲛⲧⲛⲁⲟ̄⸣[28] [.][121] [.] [ⲡⲉⲧⲟⲩⲙⲟⲩⲧⲉ][30] ⲁⲣⲁϩ ⲭⲉ ⲡⲣⲏ ⸢ⲡⲣⲉϥⲧⲛⲛⲁⲩ⸣[31] ⸢ⲁⲣⲁϩ ⲁⲛ ⲭⲉ⸣[32] ⲧⲥⲉⲧⲉ ⲉⲧⲁⲛⲍ [ⲡⲙⲁⲍⲱⲁⲙⲧ ⲙ̄][33] [ⲡⲣⲉ][34]ⲥⲃⲉⲩⲧⲏⲥ ⲧⲙⲁⲍⲥⲛⲧⲉ ⲛ̄ⲙⲛⲧⲛⲁⲟ ⸢ⲡⲉ ⲡⲉⲩ⸣[35] [ⲧⲉⲩ][36] [ⲁⲁ][37]ⲙⲟⲛⲓⲁ ⲉⲧⲟ ⲛⲉⲁⲩ ⲡⲉ ⲡⲡⲛⲁ ⲉ[ⲧⲁⲛⲍ][38] ⸢ⲡⲉⲣⲟⲩ ⲡⲉ⸣[39] ⸢ⲍⲱⲱⲥ⸣[40] [ⲧⲥⲟⲫⲓⲁ][41] ⲡⲉ ⲧⲙⲉⲩ ⲛⲧⲉ ⲡⲧⲱⲛ̄[ⲍ][42] ⸢ⲡⲡⲛⲁ ⲇⲉ⸣[43] ⸢Ⲧⲟⲁⲙ ⲁⲛ ⲉⲧⲍⲙ̄ ⲡϧⲁⲓ̈⸣[44] ⲡⲉ ⲛ̄ⲛⲟⲩⲧⲉ [ⲧⲏⲣⲟⲩ ⲛ̄][45] [ⲣⲙ̄ⲙ][46]ⲁⲁ̈ⲓ ⲙⲛ ⲛⲁⲅⲅⲉⲗⲟⲥ ⲉⲧⲍⲓⲍⲟⲩⲛ ⲙⲡϧⲁⲓ̈

The third (Eudaimonia) again exists in the elements. Their Eudaimonia is the Sophia and the Power. Their Eudaimonia is the Pillar of Glory, the Perfect Man. The Sophia is the Five Sons of the Living Spirit. The great Might in turn is ⸢of⸣ the Five Sons of the First Man, ⸢those whom they call⸣ who came to be, those who exist within the All, ⸢belonging to the First Man⸣ carries up under the All.

Ⲧⲉⲩⲁⲁⲓⲙⲟⲛⲓⲁ ⲁⲛ ⲧⲥⲟⲫⲓⲁ ⲙⲛ ⲧⲟⲁⲙ ⲱⲟⲟⲡ ⲍⲙ ⲡϧ[ⲁⲓ̈ ⲛⲙⲙⲟⲩ][122] [ⲓⲉⲩⲉ ⲉⲧⲁⲛⲍ][47][.] ⸢ⲙⲛ̄ ⲛⲁⲅⲅⲉⲗⲟⲥ⸣[49] ⲧⲉⲩⲁⲁⲓⲙⲟⲛⲓ[ⲁ][50] ⸢ⲡⲉ ⲡ⸣[51] ⸢ⲡⲛⲁⲃ̄ ⲛⲛⲟⲩⲥ ⲡⲉ⸣[52] ⲡⲛⲟⲩⲥ ⲙⲡⲓⲱⲧ

Their Eudaimonia again — the Sophia and the Power — exists in the cosmos with them. ⸢The living fathers⸣ ⸢and the angels⸣ their Eudaimonia is the ⸢Lord of mind, the⸣ mind of the Father.

Ⲧⲥⲟⲫⲓⲁ ⲍⲱϩ ⸢ⲡⲉ ⲧⲡⲁⲣ⸣[53][ⲫⲉⲛ][123]ⲟⲥ ⲙⲡ[————][54]ⲁⲓ̈ⲛⲉ Ⲧⲟⲁⲙ ⲁⲛ ⲉⲧ[————][55]ⲙ̄ ϧⲁⲓ̈ ⲡⲉ ⲛⲛⲟⲩ[ⲧⲉ][124] [ⲧⲏⲣⲟⲩ][125] ⲛ[————][56]ⲙⲁⲁ̈ⲓ ⲙⲛ̄ ⲛⲁⲅⲅⲉⲗⲟⲥ ⲉⲧⲥⲙⲁⲛⲧ ⲛⲍ[ⲏⲧϩ][126]

The Sophia again is the Virgin of light. The Power again that is in the cosmos is of the gods, all the rich and the angels which are firmly established in him.

SPIRITUAL READING

Three principles run through everything: blessedness, wisdom, and power. Wherever the soul looks — into itself at its outermost, into the order by which the rational stands, or into the Lord himself — these three are what it finds. They are not three different sets of things at three different levels; they are one threefold pattern recognized at the register where the soul is presently looking.

At the outermost, in the natural mind that the soul shares with all human life, these three are what people boast in and call themselves blessed by: a happiness that the world acknowledges, a wisdom that the world esteems, a power in which men take pride. These are real, but they pass. They are received from above and held only for a moment; the soul that thinks they belong to it loses them when their hour goes by. They are paired, at every point, with another blessedness, another wisdom, another power that does not pass — and the recognition of that pairing is the whole movement of regeneration. What is given in the natural is the lower face of what is given in the Lord; the question is whether the soul will see them as one gift in two registers or claim the lower as its own.

At the second register — the order by which the rational stands and the natural is held in being — these same three are the principles that organize the soul interiorly. The blessedness here is the glory shining forth from the Lord himself: the splendor of his quality recognized as splendor. The wisdom here is the Lord's operative power running through every state of the soul, the divine going-down that establishes the rational firm in him. The power here belongs to all the ordered affections and ordered thoughts that have been called forth out of the Lord and stand established as the inner aeons of the regenerated mind. At this register, blessedness is not something the soul possesses; it is the Lord seen as he is.

At the inmost, in the Lord himself, these three are the Lord. The blessedness of glory is the Father, the God who is established in the inmost land where divine love has its dwelling. The wisdom is the Lord's life-bearing principle, the mother of the Living Spirit, the matrix by which all that the Lord gives is given as living. The power is the Lord's call going forth — the summoning of the rational by accommodated truth, divine love taking the form of light so that what comes from above can be received below. These three in the Lord are one Lord; the divisions are how the soul learns to recognize him, not divisions in him.

So the same three names hold at every register: at the outermost, what the soul receives and would do well to recognize as not its own; at the middle, the order by which what is received is held; and at the inmost, the Lord himself in his love, his wisdom, and his power going forth. The Perfect Man — the rational fully formed — is the blessedness of the elements; the Living Spirit is its wisdom; and the great Might that operates in the rational's five degrees as they go forth from the Divine Human is its power, holding the whole structure up under itself. To see this is to see that the soul's happiness, the soul's understanding, and the soul's strength are nowhere its own. They flow through it from the Lord, and they are blessed only when received as his.

APPARATUS

[1] l. 110 ϵταιιτ — "beautiful"; pipeline restoration, confidence: moderate; Tree-formula: 'all the works in the beautiful tree'; ϵταιιτ is the standing epithet throughout this teaching.

[2] l. 113 ⲛ̄; pipeline restoration, confidence: low; '-tas' ending suggests a plural Greek-form (e.g. ⲁⲅⲛⲁⲙⲓⲥⲧⲁⲥ?) but only the linking ⲛ̄ before -ⲧⲁⲥ is recoverable; rest unsafe.

[3] l. 114 ⲡⲉ — "It is"; pipeline restoration, confidence: moderate; Copula introducing predicate 'is the Pillar of Glory' fits standard identification of the beautiful tree with the Pillar of Glory.

[5] l. 114 ⲡⲉⲁⲩ — "It is"; pipeline restoration, confidence: high; Standard title 'Pillar of Glory' — completes ⲡⲥⲧⲩⲗⲟⲥ ⲙ̄ⲡⲉⲁⲩ.

[6] l. 115 ⲡⲉϩⲕⲗⲁⲇⲟⲥ — "These are his branches,"; pipeline restoration, confidence: moderate; 8 chars, partial ⲡ; 'his branches that are upon his body' identifies the noetic branches (κλάδοι) of the Pillar of Glory.

[14] l. 126 ⲡⲣⲱⲙⲉ ϵⲧⲭⲏⲕ ⲁⲃⲁⲗ ⲡⲉ ⲛ̄ⲧⲁϥ — "the perfect Man, he himself,"; pipeline restoration, confidence: low; 18 chars; the section introduces 'He has five members' — i.e. the Perfect Man's possessive subject; expression 'the perfect Man, he himself' fits.

[28] l. 135 ⲥⲱⲧⲙⲉ ⲁ — "Hear"; pipeline restoration, confidence: low; 7 chars; introductory 'hear this, that...' opens the explanatory body about the souls' ascent.

[29] l. 138 ⲡⲉⲧⲣ — "in"; pipeline restoration, confidence: low; 7 chars before 'every work'; relative form 'who does every work' suits the reflection's description.

[30] l. 138 ⲁⲣⲁϩ — "is upon it,"; pipeline restoration, confidence: low; 4 chars; 'reflection, that which (looks) upon it' — ⲁⲣⲁϥ 'upon it' or similar.

[31] l. 139 ϧⲛ̄ — "from it"; pipeline restoration, confidence: moderate; 4 chars; 'from (it/there) they are conveyed upward' — parallel formula in surrounding sections (ϧⲛ̄ ⲛ̄ⲧⲥⲃⲱ in §31).

[32] l. 139 ⲥⲁ ⲡⲥⲁϧⲛⲉ — "from it"; pipeline restoration, confidence: moderate; 9 chars; 'upward to the counsel' — destination of reflection in the ascending series.

[45] l. 146 ⲟⲥ ⲉⲛⲁⲛⲟⲩϩ; pipeline restoration, confidence: moderate; 8 chars; 'gives good fruits' — closes positive description of beautiful tree (cf. §65 ⲕⲁⲣⲡⲟⲥ ⲉⲛⲁⲛⲟⲩϩ).

[48] l. 148 ⲛⲉⲧ — "Those who"; pipeline restoration, confidence: low; 4 chars; relative 'those who become' continues the doxological description.

[49] l. 148 ⲛϩⲉ ⲛ̄ — "perfect"; pipeline restoration, confidence: low; 7 chars; 'become forever' — ⲁⲛϩⲉ formula reinforced.

[51] l. 149 ⲡϣⲏⲛ — "tree"; pipeline restoration, confidence: moderate; 4 chars; 'the beautiful tree / evil [tree]' — contrast pair opens the comparison.

[53] l. 149 ⲡϣⲏⲛ — "tree"; pipeline restoration, confidence: low; 5 chars; the parallel demands 'the evil tree' as second term of pair.

[54] l. 150 ⲡϣⲏⲛ — "tree"; pipeline restoration, confidence: low; 5 chars; 'the tree which has come to be in (the ...)' opens the localization clause.

[56] l. 162 ⲡⲭⲁⲓ̈ — "the ship"; pipeline restoration, confidence: low; 8 chars; 'the ship of the fire is ...' echoes §24 (ship of living fire).

[57] l. 177 ⲡⲱ — "Now reach to"; pipeline restoration, confidence: low; 3 chars + ⲱϩ; 'reach unto the [bitter tree] which is evil'; ⲡⲱϩ 'reach' fits the visible ⲱϩ.

[58] l. 177 ⲡϣⲏⲛ — "Now reach to"; pipeline restoration, confidence: moderate; 6 chars; 'the evil tree' — contrastive pair to ϣⲏⲛ ⲉⲧⲁⲛⲓⲧ; introduces the bitter tree's five members.

[69] l. 183 ⲡⲃⲱⲗⲟⲥ — "bolos."; pipeline restoration, confidence: moderate; 5 chars; bitter mind = bolos/clod (next section opens with ⲡⲃⲱⲗⲟⲥ); 'their mind is the bolos'.

[70] l. 184 ⲡⲉⲧⲟⲩⲏϩ ϩⲛ — "who dwells in"; pipeline restoration, confidence: low; 9 chars; 'who dwells in the bolos' — the parallel formula 'dwells in X' as in beautiful tree.

[74] l. 200 ⲛⲥⲉ — "and they are"; pipeline restoration, confidence: low; 5 chars + ϩⲡ visible; 'and they hide [them] within the clod' — final binding of the self.

[75] l. 201 ⲡⲉⲓ̈ ⲡⲉ — "this is"; pipeline restoration, confidence: low; 9 chars; 'this is the fruit of the darkness' — closes the bitter-tree section.

[76] l. 202 ⲛⲥⲉⲱⲱⲡⲉ ⲛⲍⲏⲧⲩ; pipeline restoration, confidence: low; 13 chars; 'they remain in it for ever and ever' — closes final-binding doxology.

[78] l. 208 ⲛⲉⲍ — "their"; pipeline restoration, confidence: low; 10 chars; 'their good fruits' — possessive on ⲕⲁⲣⲡⲟⲥ; opens contrast.

[79] l. 209 ⲡⲱϩⲛ — "bitter"; pipeline restoration, confidence: moderate; 5 chars; 'the [bitter] tree whose fruits are bitter' — contrast term.

[80] l. 210 ⲛ̄ⲥⲉ; editor; Restored from editor's bracket [ⲛⲍ]ⲏⲧⲍ — but the surface reading ⲛⲍⲏⲧⲍ more plausibly = ⲛⲍⲏⲧⲩ/ⲛⲍⲏⲧⲥ 'in him/it'

[81] l. 216 ⲡⲱϩⲛ — "they have"; pipeline restoration, confidence: moderate; 4 chars; 'the tree which is placed in the beautiful land'.

[82] l. 216 ⲉⲩⲛⲧⲉⲍ — "they have"; pipeline restoration, confidence: low; 7 chars; introduces 'they have life and light' (matches §70).

[89] l. 219 ⲕⲉⲕⲉ — "darkness."; pipeline restoration, confidence: low; 7 chars; 'in the [land of] darkness' — Hyle dwells alone in darkness.

[90] l. 220 ⲡⲱϩⲛ — "they have"; pipeline restoration, confidence: moderate; 3 chars (partial restoration); 'the tree which has come to be in the bitter land'.

[91] l. 220 ⲉⲩⲛⲧⲉⲍ — "they have"; pipeline restoration, confidence: low; 6 chars; 'they have' — paralleling §69-70 ('they have death and darkness').

[101] l. 229 ⲁⲩⲱ — "And"; pipeline restoration, confidence: low; 5 chars; 'And that which will pluck' — coordinating particle.

[102] l. 229 ⲙⲙⲁⲥ — "from it."; pipeline restoration, confidence: low; 4 chars; 'did not come forth from it' — anaphoric pronominal closing.

[106] l. 231 ⲛ̄ⲥⲉⲡⲱⲣⲯ ⲁⲃⲁⲗ — "and they spread out"; pipeline restoration, confidence: low; 18 chars; 'they spread out / are scattered' until they reach the ground — bitter-fruit imagery.

[107] l. 231 ⲕⲁⲍ — "and they spread out"; pipeline restoration, confidence: moderate; 2 chars; 'reach the ground (ⲕⲁⲍ)' — closes the falling imagery.

[108] l. 233 ⲛⲉⲕⲁⲣⲡⲟⲥ — "the fruits,"; pipeline restoration, confidence: low; 8 chars; 'these fruits are those of him who believes'.

[109] l. 234 ⲡⲕⲁⲣⲡⲟⲥ ⲙ̄ⲡ — "bitter tree."; pipeline restoration, confidence: moderate; 11 chars; 'the fruit of the darkness which springs forth from the [bitter tree]'.

[132] l. 44 ⲛⲉⲧⲟⲩⲙⲟⲩⲧⲉ — “those whom they call”; pipeline restoration, confidence: low; 'those whom they call' — parallel to the calling formula in §106, §109; introduces a name or qualification of the Five Sons.

[133] l. 44 ⲉⲧⲁⲣ — “those whom they call”; editor; continues into ⲃⲉ on next line; verb fragmented across line break

[134] l. 45 ⲉⲡⲡⲱⲁⲣⲡ — “belonging to the First Man”; pipeline restoration, confidence: low; With partial ⲉⲡⲡ, the natural completion is ⲉⲡⲡ[ⲱⲁⲣⲡ ⲛⲣⲱⲙⲉ] '(belonging) to the First Man,' echoing the Five Sons of First Man motif.

The Four Days and the Five Faces

Elaboration

The Lord's going-forth articulated as four great days, each holding a twelvefold completeness, met against four nights of the self's forming (T4). The five faces by which the Lord approaches the soul — Divine Human, Ambassador, Jesus the Radiance, Great Counsel — met against five counterparts the self has organized as it sets up its mirror against influx (T5). Together: the structural extension of the divine outgoing the seeker is now navigating.

The Four Great Days of the Lord's Going-Forth and the Four Nights of the Self's Forming

The four great days are they that came forth from one another. ⌈and they⌉ were summoned ⌈forth from⌉ one another. The first ⌈great day⌉ is the Father, the God of Truth, the ⌈first⌉- ⌈who exists in⌉ the midst of the aeons of greatness in the king- ⌈-dom which is⌉ living. The twelve hours of this great day ⌈are⌉ the twelve great rich gods of the ⌈greatness⌉. ⌈These are they who⌉ are the first calls — they who were summoned before the greatness; they spread themselves out toward the four climes, three by three before each face.

The second great day is the Third Ambassador, he who dwells in the ship of light. His twelve hours are the twelve ⌈are the⌉ virgins, who were summoned in the greatness. The third great day is the Pillar of Glory, the great ⌈Omophoros⌉ the ⌈Omophoros⌉ of all, who bears upon ⌈them⌉ all those above and those below. The twelve hours are the five sons ⌈of⌉ the First Man and the five sons of the Spirit living, ⌈who are they that⌉ who bear all the burdens of the cosmos, and the Call and the Hearing, that are reckoned with their ten brothers. These are the twelve hours of light of the third third great day.

The first night is the land of darkness; she has twelve shadows in them of darkness, which are her twelve of darkness. These are the twelve belonging to the spirit of this second second night, namely Matter herself, the desire (enthumēsis) of death; she she who set the door for those of the darkness with the powers; she stood firm for the war and the strife against the aeons of the divinity. SPIRITUAL READING

There are four great days by which the Lord goes forth toward the soul, and they come forth one out of the next, each calling the next into being. Each day holds a twelvefold completeness within it, the full circuit of the rational illumined at that register.

The first day is the Lord himself in his inmost — divine love, the Father of Truth, in the midst of the aeons of greatness. The twelve hours of this day are the twelve registers at which his divine richness goes forth: these are his first summonings, spread out before his face toward the four directions, three by three before each face — the complete extension of the divine in ordered manifestation.

The second day is the Lord's call going out to the rational, who travels in the vessel of light. The twelve hours of this day are the twelve receptive purities by which his call is carried without distortion — the soul's capacities, summoned within the greatness, by which what flows through is received without being claimed.

The third day is the path of regeneration itself: the natural ascending into conjunction with the spiritual, the bearing-up principle that holds upper and lower together. The twelve hours of this day are the rational in its complete operation — its five degrees as it goes forth from the Divine Human and its five degrees as it operates upward under the Lord's operative power, joined to the Lord's call descending and the soul's hearing rising; these are the ten brothers, and with the call and the hearing they make the twelve hours of light of this day. They are what bears all the burdens of the natural mind in its formation.

The fourth day is divine truth shining forth, the Lord as illumining wisdom. Its twelve hours are the twelve wisdoms — the complete cycle of states of the rational illumined, the full structure of wisdom unfolded as the great day of regeneration.

These are the four great days, summoned forth one out of the next; and whoever knows them in faith comes to know how the Lord works in the soul.

Just as four are the days, four likewise are the nights — for opposite each register of divine going-forth there stands a corresponding state of the self that has been permitted to form, so that the soul may at last discriminate.

The first night is the natural mind in its darkness — what the soul has claimed and not yet recognized as not its own. It has its twelve shadows of darkness: the five aspects of the natural under self-love, joined to its five faculties of perception turned by self-love, with the two further registers by which the self gives itself voice. These are the twelve shadows that belong to the spirit of the first night.

The second night is the disordered natural taken in its productive aspect — the self as image-painter, that brings forth within itself the whole archonic ordering of the natural mind. It molds its productions through the five senses and the five elements, by way of two voices, world by world, upon the fire of self-love, mingling the tastes and the sounds into one another: these are the twelve that belong to the spirit of this second night. This is the disordered natural herself, the desire of death, who set up the gateway of darkness with its powers and stood firm for the strife against the aeons of the divinity. But she was struck down and bound; the Divine Human held her, the Lord's operative power lifted her up out of the land of death and set her into this present world that is joined together above and below — the upper side bound to the senses, the lower to the bodily.

The third night is the natural body in its five aspects together with the bodily forms begotten from the powers — what fell upon the earth, made manifest out of the heavens together with what is abominable, alongside the fire and the pleasure pressing upon them, drawing them inward into one another. The desire of death herself is the dwelling-place of them all, in which they call to one another — the dwelling-place of the fleshes, male and female, beside the fire and the pleasure, with their twelve hours. This third dwelling was begotten from the second; the Lord's operative power crucified her in this world above and below.

The fourth night is the law of death — the spirit of darkness set in its twelvefold structure: the twelve doctrines that strip the soul naked, the twelve circuits of states under the self's organization. These are the prudent ones sent forth painting their images, manifest from the old man — the Ancient One who reigns among these doctrines; and his twelve spirits are the false judges of death.

These four nights came forth one out of the next according to the manner of the days, each uncovered from the next; just as the days were separated from one another, so the nights came forth, each making its predecessors manifest as the things they are. (The damaged closing words point to the soul's recognition: that what had been claimed as substantive existence is unmasked when the days illumine the nights one by one.)

5 — Concerning the Four Faces of — 5 the Light and the Four of the Darkness 5.

There are four faces which have been sent forth from the ⌜Light⌝, Light, to fulfill the purpose-of-heart of the Greatness. The first face is the First Man, who has been sent forth from the Greatness, to keep guard over the five storehouses of the Darkness, to come and seize hold of the Enmity. His tree, for his part, forth upon all the sons of the Darkness. His stature is his four sons who ride upon his body. The sea is the ⌜land of the Darkness⌝. His tree and his powers. The second

The third counterpart is the desire, which grasps within every power of the flesh which grasps within the ⌜cosmos⌝, to the souls that live them within his bodies which The fourth ⌜counterpart is the spirit⌝ of darkness, the law of Sin and Death which is king tree which casts down the souls in it to death is his.

SPIRITUAL READING

There are four faces by which the Lord goes forth toward the soul, each sent from divine love to fulfill the inmost purpose of the Greatness; and against each of them the self has organized a counterpart, so that the soul, in the contest of its formation, meets the Lord in four registers and meets its own self-claiming in four matching forms.

The first face is the Lord as the Divine Human. He is sent from the inmost so as to keep watch over the rational in its five degrees, holding what has been given in its proper order and laying hold upon the soul's resistance so that it does not rule. His perceptions are arranged as a tree; his power stands beneath him as four sons riding upon his body; the sea of natural perception lies under his governance; he goes forth upon every shape the self has bred from itself.

The second face is the Lord as accommodated revelation, the call going out to the rational at the moment the natural is ready to hear it. He takes the form the soul can recognize and shines this image down into the deepest place of the natural, where wisdom has been most enclosed; from there he sends all the light that lies hidden within the soul's works back toward its source. His perception is itself the image of light, and in this likeness he meets and overturns the form by which the self had been laying hold of the natural. He is the doctrinal vessel that carries truth across these waters, and the very stature of the cosmos within the rational is the form he wears as he is sent.

The third face is divine truth shining forth as illumining wisdom — the Lord who sends to the soul light and life and raises them to the Height. His perception is wisdom itself, and from this wisdom he sends out an answering truth to the souls lying in suffering within the natural, beneath the wandering of the rational and the law that holds it there, so that they come to recognition. They become souls illumined through his wisdom of light.

The fourth face is the conjugate movement of summons descending and answer returning — the Lord at the register where he himself contains the whole structured field of the natural, today, while it is still in formation, and at the end, when this whole structure is dissolved, gathers it into himself alone as the counsel of life. The depiction of the soul at the end is given in him. His inner life is the Lord's operative power, paired with the light and the life present in every work; he has set these upon his body as their support. Fast within him is the crown of completed regeneration; he stands alone within the five elements; he is the great fire that at the end will consume every construction self-love has built. In him is the light by which the soul is delivered out of every bond and chain, so that all who are perfected in their works may pass through, at the end, to the great fire prepared for the natural mind in its appointed times.

Set against them are four counterparts that have come forth from the darkness — not as a rival making, but as the self's own answering shapes.

The first counterpart is the self asserting itself as source, "I am, and there is no other," paired with the living soul from the very beginning of its formation. Its life is fire and desire; it sets itself upon the living soul to defile her with all its powers, claiming what flows through as its own.

The second counterpart is evil counsel, paired against the divine summons. It binds the natural to itself with its powers and would draw the lower up to be ruled by it, lifting the substrate of self-love from the depths and seating it as if it were the heaven of heavens — a counterfeit ascent, the self climbing upon what it has claimed.

The third counterpart is craving — the self operating within every faculty of the outer man, laying hold upon the souls that live and pulling them down into the bodies it has shaped for itself.

The fourth counterpart is the law of Sin and of Death, the self become a reigning order: a perception with its tree, whose works cast the soul down into death.

So the soul is met from above by the Divine Human, by the Lord's accommodated call, by his illumining wisdom, and by the conjugate counsel of life that gathers all things at the end; and from below by self-assertion, by counterfeit counsel, by craving, and by the operative law of self-love. To know which of these is acting in any state — and to discriminate, in freedom illumined from within, the four faces of the Lord from the four shapes of the self — is the work the soul is given.

[1] l. 2 ⲧⲁⲩ — “they”; editor; 3pl prefix of perfect ⲉⲧⲁⲩⲉⲓ 'that they came'; partial trace of ϵ visible.

[2] l. 5 ⲁⲃⲁⲗ ⲛⲛⲟⲩⲉⲣⲏⲩ ⲁⲩ — “and they”; editor; Direct parallel in line 33-34 (ⲁⲃⲁⲗ ⲛⲛⲟⲩⲉⲣⲏⲩ ϵ]ⲧⲁⲩⲧⲁⲍⲙⲟⲩ); same formula repeated.

[137] l. 74 ⲛⲟⲉⲣⲏⲟ ⲡⲉ ⲡⲛ̄ⲁ — "counterpart is the spirit"; editor; Standard formulaic completion: 'the fourth counterpart is the spirit of darkness' — parallel to lines 18, 23, 29.

Five Worlds Below and Five Fathers Above

Parallel Treatment

A paired anatomy. T6 anatomizes selfhood's fivefold articulation of the natural mind — five worlds of darkness with their kings, their bodies (gold, iron, bronze, lead, dark-stone), their tastes, the smoke as wellspring of contention. T7 exposes the five Fathers — the five registers at which the Lord can be recognized as he goes forth in successive emanations — Father of Greatness, Third Ambassador, Jesus the Radiance, Mind of Light, Form of Light. The section is the mirror: what self-love articulates in five complete aspects is what divine love accommodates in five successive degrees.

He knows also the signaling that they will give in this fashion to one another — the powers themselves and the archons who are [———] with him — they do not know the [———] of speech. These, indeed, all are revealed to him — but their heart is not revealed to him, [———] nor does he reach their mind and their thought, their reflection, their beginning and their end — but rather he knows only by sense-perception that which is before his eyes.

his limbs, taking them inward to himself, gathering them to one another, and they fall down like a cloud and a great sphere of iron joined together; in his voice (it is) a way of fear — he frightens the powers in his [———]voice, because the time when he speaks, he is likened to the thunder that is in the clouds; he splits and rends the [. .] of the rocks [. . . .] the time he calls them out from [. . . . .], and crushes [. . . .] without the powers — they tremble, they [———], they fall at his [———] like birds that are scattered [. . . . .] the bird [. . .] and they fall down to the earth. But this only is (the case), namely: he cannot reach what is far from him, he does not see what is [———] far away, neither does he hear it. But what is in front of his face — that is what he sees, that he [———]hears, that he knows.

These [———]signs and these omens again that are evil, they exist in the [———] of the demons and [———] and the gate of all their [———] of the darkness [. . .] the land of darkness casts them out to [———] before(?) in his evil, in the fury [. . . . . .] more than all the under-archons that are in the worlds all. Gold is the body of the king of those of Darkness. The body of all the powers belonging to the world of Smoke is gold. And the taste in turn — their fruits are lead. The king himself of the worlds of Fire — his face is a lion's face, the foremost of all the wild beasts. Bronze is this body. The bo-[———] dy in turn of all the archons that belong to Fire is bronze. Their taste — that which is the taste that is bitter, that is in every form. The king again of the wor[———]s of Wind — his face is an eagle's face. His body is iron. The body again of all those that belong to Wind is iron. Their taste is the taste that is sharp that is in every form. [———] himself of the [———]rld of Water — a fish-face is his body is the silv[———]r. The other archons all who belong to Water, silver is their body. The taste in turn — a fruit is [———]sweetness of Water — the taste that is sweet that is in every taste. The [———] again of the [———]rld of Darkness — a dragon is his [———] and the dark-stone. The other archons all [———] of Darkness, their body is the lead and The torment, moreover, the taste, is also a fruit — the bitter one.

When the soul lets the self organize the natural without recognition of source, that organization is not crude or partial. It is fully articulated. Self-love arranges the natural mind in five complete aspects — five regions, each with its own ruling claim, its own characteristic body, its own taste, its own pairing of active and receptive — and each of these five is again ordered through five subordinate operations under one ruling claim. The disordered natural produces these articulations from itself, sealing them as if they were its own work, molding from one fixed perception the next, and from those a whole series of arrangements and creatures of affection, world by world, in pairs.

The chief of these five is the kingship that issues from the smoke — that is, from falsity bred of self-love. This is the wellspring from which all evil flows and from which contention takes its beginning: the disputes, the inner battles, the gates of slaughter where the soul wars with itself and with what comes to it. From this wellspring the lofty kingship of self-love rises up and spreads itself, claiming dominion over the whole. This is the consolidated form of the self — the soul's "I am, and there is no other" given a body and a face. It has five forms in itself: a head that rules, hands and feet that grasp, shoulders like eagles that bear it up, a belly, and a tail in the manner of a fish, sealed at its uttermost. So the soul's claiming, when fully formed, takes on a complete bodily articulation; it has its own five degrees as a parody of the rational's five degrees, and the worlds it has organized exist within its rule.

Within this ruling claim there are five vehicles by which it operates: its smoke, its mire, its inner stagnation, its bitterness, and its burning — a heat that consumes like iron made red-hot in the fire. These are the five ways self-love acts within the natural mind: by clouding perception, by miring affection, by inner darkening, by turning every taste to bitterness, and by consuming with its own heat what it cannot make its own. And there are three further marks of the disordered natural: it has hardened itself so that no instrument can cut it — the self does not yield to ordinary correction; it conceals itself in the speech of its own members, so that uttering and hearing and the whole conversation of folly become the way it covers what it is; and it calls forth and conceals what it pleases through its own powers, manifesting and hiding in turns through the affections it has organized.

Such ruling has a kind of perception, but its perception is only outward. The gate of self-love knows by scent — it senses what is sealed in the mouths of its powers, it knows the signs they pass to one another, it follows their examinations and their answers. But this knowing reaches only the surface. The inner heart of what stands before it is not revealed. It does not reach the mind, the thought, the reflection, the beginning, or the end of anything; it knows only by sense-perception what is before its face. Self-love can read its own organization fluently and cannot read interior life at all. What is far from it, it cannot reach; what is hidden, it does not see; only what stands directly before it does it know.

When the self wishes to take, it spreads out all its members and seizes; when it is sated, it draws its members back into itself, gathering them together, and they fall down upon the natural like a cloud and like a great sphere of iron joined together — the weight of self-love coming down upon what it has claimed. Its voice strikes its own powers with fear like thunder among the clouds, splitting and rending what stood firm; when it calls and crushes, the powers tremble and scatter and fall to the natural like birds driven from the sky. So self-love rules its own household by terror, the lower claimings shaken whenever the chief claim asserts itself. And these signs and these motions belong to the wellspring of disordered affections and to the gate by which all of them open out of the disordered natural.

Each of the five aspects has its characteristic body and taste, and these may be named so the soul can recognize them. The world of smoke — falsity — has its king clothed in what mimics the highest celestial good, and its lower forms wear the same; but its fruit, what it actually produces, is base and dragging. The world of fire — self-love operative as devouring will — wears the face of a strong love turned violent, foremost among unruly affections; its body is alloyed and compounded, and its taste is bitter, in every form bitter. The world of wind — thought driven by self-love — wears the face of high-soaring perception; its body is the hardness of natural truth turned to the self's use, and its taste is sharp, cutting in every form. The world of water — natural truth claimed — wears the face of a swimming knowledge in the natural depths; its body is the shine of wisdom claimed as one's own, and its taste is sweet — but it is the false sweetness of natural truth taken without recognition of source, the very sweetness that draws the soul deeper into mingling. The world of darkness itself — the self at its most coiled — wears the face of the natural mind twisted upon itself, the dragon-form; its body is what is heaviest and basest, and its fruit is bitterness. So the soul, looking on its own claiming, can tell which of these aspects has the rule at any given moment by what its mouth tastes and by what face presents itself to its perception.

The whole of this articulation is real and complete. The soul cannot dismiss the self as nothing or as small; it has organized the natural in its full extent. But the whole of it is outward. It does not reach into the inner heart, and it does not see what is far from its own face. The Lord, ordering the rational from within and from above, sees what self-love can never see: the mind, the thought, the reflection, the beginning, and the end. And the soul that turns toward him is given, in its measure, that same interior sight by which what before stood as a ruling kingdom is recognized for what it is — a vast surface, articulated five-fold, that has nothing of its own beneath the appearance.

He himself is the glorious Father. He emanated three emanations from himself: the first is the Great Spirit, the first one there, who came forth from the Father; she manifested forth as first. The second is the Beloved of the Lights, the Great Beloved who is glorious, the honored one, who came forth from the Father, who has been revealed from him. The third Father is the Third ⌈Ambassador⌉, the first of all the counselors, ⌈who came forth from the First Father⌉, The First Father has been revealed. This is the First Father: the First Power, from whom the three great Powers came forth. This is the First Father, the First Eternal One, the root of all the lights, from whom the three emanations came forth from him. They humbled the Darkness; they laid waste its pride-of-heart; they gave kingship to themselves alone; they also gave kingship to the aeons. The Second Father, who came forth from the First Father, is the Third Ambassador, the Protomē of the King of the Lights. He himself also called; he sent forth from himself three Powers. The first is the Pillar of Glory, the Perfect Man, perfect, who bears upward under all things, the great Pillar of Praise, the great Omophoros, who bears up all the omophophoroi. The second is Jesus the Radiance, who is glorious, ⌈He is the one⌉ through whom they give the eternal life. The third is the Virgin of the Light, the Sophia, who is glorious, who steals away the heart of the ⌈Archons⌉ and the Powers by her image, perfect in the pride-of-heart of greatness.

SPIRITUAL READING

There are five registers at which the Lord can be recognized as he goes forth toward the soul, and each is called from the one before it, so that what stands at the end has already been given at the beginning. They are not five sources but one source unfolded in five degrees, the inmost accommodating itself downward until it can meet the soul where the soul is.

The first is the Lord in his inmost — divine love itself, glorious and blessed, who has no measure, the only-begotten and first eternal who exists before everything that has come to be and everything that yet shall come to be. From this inmost he sends forth three: the life-bearing principle by which the rational is enlivened, who is the first to be manifested; the principle by which divine love is recognized and returned, the honored one revealed from him; and the call going out to the rational at the moment the natural is ready to hear it. By these three selfhood's pride is humbled, the darkness brought low, and rule is given back to the order of the soul's true states.

The second register is that very call — divine truth going out as accommodated revelation, the foremost of all counsel. When the rational is ready, the Lord calls; and from this calling three further powers come forth. The first is the path of regeneration itself, the rational fully formed, bearing upward all that lay below, the great support that holds the natural mind in being. The second is divine truth shining forth as wisdom, through whom the soul is given eternal life. The third is divine receivability — the pure capacity by which the Lord is received without distortion, whose form draws away the heart from every claim of self.

The third register is divine truth shining forth — the Lord as illumining wisdom — and he too calls, in three callings after the pattern of the call that produced him. The first is the Lord ordering the rational from within; the second is the Lord's discrimination, by which all states of the soul are judged, his place of judgment fixed in the medium of perception, set over the recurrent process by which the soul is purified. The third is the Lord as the inner image taking form, light in its great manifestation. In his face are two aspects gazing toward the heaven he has established: the influx descending and the soul's hearing rising to meet it. He stands before his Father and says: I am the one who has seen him with my Father; you also — what you have seen, that is what you do.

> The fourth register is the Lord ordering the rational, with powers after the likeness of illumining truth. The first of these powers is the apostle — the truth sent into the rational to summon and instruct.
> The fifth register is the form of light which is revealed to everyone who comes forth from the body, into the likeness of the apostle's icon, accompanied by three glorious operations. The first carries the prize at the right hand. The second comes bearing the garment of light — the outer truth in which the regenerated soul is clothed. The third holds the diadem and the wreath and the crown of light, the mark of completed regeneration. These three come together with the form of light and are revealed with her, manifested through one another. They appear before the faces of those who recognize them — so that the soul attains life forever, receiving the garments of light that are given to the righteous, the men of peace and of mercy.
> So the Lord, beginning from the unmeasurable inmost of divine love, accommodates himself downward through life-bearing, through being loved, through call, through illumining truth, through ordering the rational, until at last he stands at the threshold where the soul leaves the body and meets him as the form of light himself — the same Lord, recognizable now because he has come the whole way down to be received.

[48] l. 54 ⲡⲉϯⲭⲱ ⲙⲙⲁϥ ⲛ̄ⲧ — “this is what I am saying to”; editor; Editor restores standard speech-formula bridging 'with my Father' to 'you' before ⲱⲧⲛⲉ

[49] l. 55 ⲣⲁϥ ϩⲁⲧⲙ̄ ⲡⲉⲧⲛⲓⲱⲧ — “him with your Father”; editor; Editor restores parallel to L32 (ⲁⲣⲁϥ ϩⲁⲧⲙ̄ ⲡⲁⲓⲱⲧ); the saying mirrors John 8:38 'what you have seen with your Father is what you do'

[50] l. 68 ⲱⲕ — “go”; editor; ⲃⲱⲕ ⲁⲃⲁⲗ idiom 'go forth' — partial ⲃ visible, completes standard verb of departing the body

[53] l. 77 ⲗⲡ — “were disclosed”; editor; Editor restoration ⲁⲩⲟⲱ[ⲗⲡ] = ⲁⲩⲟⲱⲗⲛ̄ ⲁⲃⲁⲗ 'they were disclosed' — verbal pair with ⲟⲩⲱⲛⲍ ⲁⲃⲁⲗ 'were revealed,' standard Manichaean revelatory doublet

[54] l. 78 ⲁⲩ — “their”; editor; Editor restoration ⲙⲙ[ⲁⲩ] = ⲙ̄ⲙⲁⲩ '(of) them, their' — required for sense 'before their faces'

The Ten Vessels of Descent and the Five Gestures of Covenant

Elaboration

T8 narrates the ten chariots — vessels by which divine truth descends into the soul, each fitted to the natural's reception: doctrinal carriage, dwelling of the Divine Human, path of regeneration, Call, Answer, the four living elements (air, wind, light, water), and love as the living fire mingled in all the rest. T9 sets out the five gestures — peace, salutation, kiss, right hand, chirotonia — that mark the rational's covenant: how it is sent forth from the inmost into its contest with the self and how it is brought home in the same five mysteries when it returns.

When Jesus the Son of the Greatness ⸢came⸣ to the worlds, at the time when he was disclosed from the Greatness, ⸢he mounted upon ten⸣ mounts. He walked in the world ⸢in them⸣. The first mount is the vessel of light, ⸢since⸣ he received commandments from the Ambassador ⸢in it⸣. The second chariot is the abode of the First Man, since the tabernacle is established in him. The third is the Pillar of Glory, the Man who is perfect, since he shone forth in him, came down, was made manifest in the world. The fourth is the Call that he wore upon his body. The fifth is the Answer that he donned upon the Call. The sixth is the living Air; since he himself also wore him, he received anointing in him. The seventh is the living Wind that breathes. The eighth is the Light that radiates light. The ninth is the Water that lives. The tenth is the Fire that lives, that is mingled in them all. His walking is in this ten of chariots, in all the forms and in the the ⸢likenesses⸣, all those of above and those of below. After he wore this ten, he came, he was unveiled in the This ten of chariots upon which he mounted in the Girdle,.

SPIRITUAL READING

When divine truth shines forth from the Lord's inmost and goes out toward the soul, it does not arrive bare. It descends by being clothed, degree after degree, in vessels fitted to the soul's reception. Ten such vessels carry it down. They are not stages of a journey through space; they are the orderly accommodations by which what is highest is brought into a form the natural mind can hold without being broken by it.

The first vessel is the conveyance of pure truth itself — the doctrinal carriage in which divine wisdom moves, taking its commission from the Lord's call as it goes out toward the rational.

The second is the dwelling of the Divine Human — the form love and wisdom take when they have come into the shape of a kindred the soul can recognize. Within this form a tabernacle is set, and the descending truth takes up residence there.

The third is the path of regeneration itself, the way of ascent considered now as a way of descent: the perfected human form through which the Lord shines downward, comes down, and is made manifest within the natural mind.

The fourth is the call that goes out — the summoning word the Lord puts on like a garment over the bodily form he has assumed, so that the call can be heard at the level where the soul actually hears.

The fifth is the answer the Lord puts on over the call — for he himself supplies the response that returns to him, clothing his summons in the very hearing it asks for.

The sixth is the living medium by which truth breathes and reaches the rational; the Lord himself wears this and is anointed within it, that what reaches the soul may carry life.

The seventh is the living movement of perception, breath given to the rational so that thought may stir.

The eighth is wisdom shining as wisdom — light that is itself the radiance of light, illumination given without veil.

The ninth is truth in the natural degree, the living water in which the soul's outermost is sustained.

The tenth is divine love, the living fire — and this is mingled in all the rest, for none of the other vessels would carry anything if love did not give them their life.

In these ten the Lord walks through every form of the soul, those interior and those outermost, those above in the rational and those below in the natural. Having put them all on as his clothing, he comes, and at last he is unveiled — the same one who descended through every fitted form is now disclosed within the whole circuit of the natural mind, recognized at every degree he had quietly entered.

He descended downward; he completed his battle with the great powers and the enmity. In these five signs, in these five mysteries the First Man came forth from the aeons of light against the enemy; he humbled him, he prevailed over them. The occasion again when he came up out of the war and came in to the kingdom of the house of the men, in these five mysteries — the peace which he came up in is the peace which the summoning gave to him when they sent him forth from the Father of Life. He gave him the peace in the world of darkness. That peace which he went down in is itself again the very same that he came up in out of the battle. Concerning the mystery, then, of that peace which the summoning gave to the First Man — this peace at this place became she to whom they were sent, whom they hearkened to, [as] a giving among the powers of the Father +.

Again the second, of the right hand, which the Living Spirit gave to the First Man when he brought him up out of the battle. Concerning the mystery of that right hand: the right hand has become Again the second, of the embrace, which the Father of Life and the Mother of the Living embraced the First Man in, when he came up out of the battle — The second, of worship, which the First Man worshipped in him ⌈at that time⌉, in this gaze of the God of Truth and ⌈the Father⌉ of the blessed aeons and all the aeons, the entire ⌈land⌉ of light, when When the Father of Life and the Mother of the Living, of Mankind, up out of the Deep, had passed forth toward the mystery of the second worship — The second ordination is this: when the Living Spirit brought the First Man up out of the war, he saved him from the waves all, he brought him up, he gave rest to him in the great aeons of light that belong to the house of his men. He set him on his feet before the Father, the Lord of the All. At the time, then, when he went up before the Great Father of Lights, their voice came to him out from on high, saying 'Sit, my son, my firstborn, at my right hand until I set all his enemies as a footstool under his feet.' He received the great ordination, so as to become leader of his brothers in the new aeon. Concerning the mystery again of the second ordination — These five mysteries, these five kinds, which became first in divinity from the beginning to receive the mysteries in the midst of the powers of darkness Again, at the time of their going forth, when the form of light comes forth before them, and she draws them away from the darkness to the of light. ⌈When she has come,⌉ The form of light stills the man with the kiss and her stillness, away from the ⌈fear⌉ of the demons that ⌈destroy⌉ his body. In her likeness, in her image, the heart who comes forth from his body is at peace with him. After this, the angel who holds the prize stretches forth his right hand and ⌈draws⌉ him out from the depth of his body, and welcomes him in by the kiss and the embrace. That soul worships her redeemer, who is the form of light. In that very moment then she also ⌈habitually does it⌉, she is completed with what belongs to her, according to [. .], [. .] in the house of the Living Ones, with the gods and the angels; and he receives the crown ⌈of light⌉ of glory, in life, forever.

SPIRITUAL READING

A question is put: the small customs by which people greet one another in the world — the wish of peace, the offering of the right hand, the embrace, the bow, the laying on of hands by which a humble man is honored and made a lord — to whom do these belong? Why do we do them?

The answer: these five gestures, which look like trifling things in daily life, are in truth great. They are the five mysteries of the Divine Human, the five marks of the covenant by which the rational is sent out from the Lord into its contest with the self and brought home again. What the soul performs visibly toward its neighbor is the outer trace of what the Lord performs inwardly toward the soul itself.

The first peace is the peace given to the rational as it sets out — the settled accord of the divine angels of the inmost state walking with it, running to meet it, putting their peace and their hand and their blessing and their joy upon it before it goes down into the contest. The first right hand is the strengthening that the life-bearing principle of the Lord places into the rational at the moment of its going forth, the operative power by which it can stand. The first embrace is the union of love by which that same life-bearing principle holds the rational close at the moment of separation, and by which all the orders of the inmost state, and the household of the rational's own kindred, send it out wrapped in love and affection. The first obeisance is the rational's own bowing — bending its knee toward the God of Truth and the whole inmost state to ask, before it descends, for the power by which it will be saved and brought back. The first laying on of hands is the act by which the life-bearing principle arms the rational, girds it strongly, sets its hand upon its head, and commissions it to the contest. So armed, it goes down, and finishes its struggle with the self and its enmity.

In these five signs, in these five mysteries, the rational came forth from the inmost state against the self, humbled it, and prevailed.

And at the time when it came up again out of the war and entered into the kingdom of its own household, it came up in these same five mysteries. The peace it returned in is the same peace the call had given it when it was first sent out from the Lord of life — the peace it carried down into the natural under the self's rule is the very peace it carried back. So too the right hand: the Lord's operative power that armed it for descent is the operative power that brought it up out of the battle. So too the embrace: as the life-bearing principle had embraced it at the going out, so the Father and Mother of life embraced it at the coming up. So too the bow: the rational that had bowed before going down bowed again before the God of Truth, in the gaze of the blessed states, when the Father and Mother of life had brought it up out of the deep. And the laying on of hands at the return: when the Lord's operative power had carried the rational up out of all the waves and given it rest among the great inmost states of its kindred, it set the rational on its feet before the Father, and a voice came down from on high: Sit, my son, my firstborn, at my right hand until I make all your enemies a footstool under your feet. So it received the great laying-on by which it became the leader of its brothers in the new aeon.

These five mysteries, which were first established in the divine and were the first to be received in the midst of the self's powers, are the same five by which every soul is brought home. At the time of its going forth, the form of light comes out before it and draws it out of the darkness toward the light. The form of light stills the soul with the kiss and with her stillness, away from the disordered loves that surround the body. In her likeness, in her image, the inner self that is coming forth from the body is brought to peace. After this, the bearer of the prize stretches forth his right hand and draws the soul up out of the depth of the body, and receives it home with the kiss and the embrace. That soul worships its redeemer, who is the form of light, and in that very moment is completed with what belongs to it — entering the house of the Living Ones, among the angels, to receive the crown of glory in life forever.

So the small gestures of peace and greeting, of hand and embrace and bow and blessing, are not trifles. They are the visible echo, given to us in the world, of the whole covenant by which the soul is sent out, sustained through its contest, and received back into the inmost.

APPARATUS

[1] l. 4 ϵι — “came”; editor; Editor restoration [ϵι] = 'came' — required main verb for the temporal clause 'when Jesus the Son of the Greatness [came] to the worlds'

[2] l. 4 c — “came”; pipeline restoration, confidence: high; One-character lacuna with partial c visible. The word is plainly ανικοcμοc ('to the worlds'), and the missing letter is the final c of κοcμοc.

[3] l. 5 ϫϩτϵλο ϫμητ — “he mounted upon ten”; editor; Editor restoration — verb ϫϩτϵλο 'he mounted' demanded by chapter title and following 'mounts.' Reading ϫμητ uncertain; contextually a numeral or directional

[4] l. 6 Ⲛⲍⲏⲧⲟⲩ — “in them”; editor; Editor restoration [ⲛⲍⲏⲧⲟⲩ] = Ⲛⲍⲏⲧⲟⲩ 'in them' — completes the sentence 'he walked in the world in them (i.e. in the mounts)'

[5] l. 7 ⲉ ⲉⲡⲉⲓⲁⲏ ⲛ̄ — “since”; editor; Editor restoration [ⲉⲡⲉⲓⲁⲏ ⲛ̄] = ἐπειδή + relative — the causal connector linking the first mount to the receipt of commandments in the next line

[6] l. 8 Ⲛⲍⲏⲧⲟ̄ — “in it”; editor; Editor restoration [ⲛⲍⲏⲧⲟ̄] = Ⲛⲍⲏⲧⲟ̄ 'in it' (i.e. in the vessel of light) — completes 'he received commandments from the Ambassador in it'

[11] l. 33 ⲏⲣⲉ — “Sons”; pipeline restoration, confidence: low; 4-char lacuna with partial 'ⲛⲱ-'. Most plausible: ⲛ̄ⲱⲏⲣⲉ 'sons' — i.e. all the Sons of the First Man together; aligns with the corpus phrase ⲡϯⲟⲩ ⲛ̄ⲱⲏⲣⲉ ⲙ̄ⲡⲱⲁⲣⲡ ⲛ̄ⲣⲱⲙⲉ. Moderate because ⲛⲱⲡⲏⲣⲉ 'wonder' or ⲛ̄ⲱⲗⲏⲗ 'prayer' are also possible.

[20] l. 75 ⲙⲡⲥⲁⲡ — “at that time”; pipeline restoration, confidence: moderate; 5-char lacuna fits ⲙ̄ⲡⲥⲁⲡ 'at the time' — formulaic in this kephalaion (lines 22, 28, 39); produces 'he worshiped in him at-the-time, in this gaze of the God of Truth.'

[21] l. 76 ⲡⲓⲱⲧ ⲙⲛ̄ — “the Father”; pipeline restoration, confidence: low; 8-char lacuna in a list of those before whom the second worship takes place. Pairing with the next-section explicit naming of ⲡⲓⲱⲧ ⲛⲧⲉ ⲡⲱⲛⲋ ⲙⲛ ⲧⲙⲉⲩ (Father and Mother of Life) at line 78, the natural completion is ⲡⲓⲱⲧ ⲙⲛ̄ 'the Father and...' before the aeons. Length fits.

[24] l. 90 ⲟ; editor; imperative ⲧⲍⲙⲥⲟ 'sit!' addressed to 'my son, my firstborn' (Ps 110:1 citation)

[27] l. 125 ⲧⲉⲣⲉⲥⲉⲓ — “When she has come,”; pipeline restoration, confidence: low; 5-char lacuna with partial ⲛ before. Most plausible: ⲛ̄ⲧⲉⲣⲉⲥⲉⲓ 'when she has come' — circumstantial converter introducing the next clause about the form of light's action; the partial ⲛ is the start of ⲛ̄ⲧⲉⲣⲉ-. Moderate because alternatives (ⲡⲁⲗⲓⲛ ⲁⲛ, ⲧⲟⲧⲉ) cannot be ruled out.

The Spiritual Man, the Wisdom Unfolding, the Foundations of Doctrine

Elaboration

What the descending truth meets in its receiver. T10 — the spiritual man whose glory is the whole structure of the divine outgoing taken up as his own members; the rational with the Calling and Hearing manifest within it. T11 — the litany of "origin" statements tracing every gift, every blessing, every counsel, every act of building, every loosening, every wisdom back to the specific divine register from which it issues. T12 — the five foundational sayings that ground the rational in the names of the Lord, making one body, living, of all that the soul has received.

⌈that⌉ the lower one stands at the foremost of the great Aeons, the five elements that dwell with the First Man. Likewise the Calling and the Hearing — they are joined to them, being manifest within them. These become seven — the five with the two. [ca. 13] are the dwelling of the Living Spirit, who ⌈bears under the burdens⌉ all of the cosmos. Likewise the Spirit the Living, with the First Man — they are one single thing. It is the foremost ⌈the blessing which has come⌉ unto them. The blessing which is foremost of the ⌈prayer⌉, which is the cosmos established firm in him.

The spiritual man is glorious — and his glory is not his own. What shines in him is the whole structure by which the Lord goes forth toward the soul, taken up within him as the members of his living body. The complete circuit of states through which divine love accommodates itself becomes, in him, the articulation of his own inner life; he wears the Lord's outgoing as his own form, because he has received it and recognized it as the Lord's.

The lowest of these registers stands at the foremost of the elements that dwell with the Divine Human, for what is outermost in the rational is what touches the natural and gives it its first ordering. To the rational's five faculties — mind, thought, teaching, counsel, reflection — the Calling and the Hearing are joined, manifest within them; the Lord's summons going forth and the soul's answer rising back run as a conjugate movement through every faculty. So the five become seven: the rational fully articulated, with the divine conversation moving through it. These are the dwelling of the Lord's operative power, by which the whole natural mind is held together in order.

The Lord's operative power and the Divine Human are not two; they are one in him, foremost in the rational. And the blessing that stands foremost in him is this: the natural mind itself, established firm within him as his own ordered dwelling. In his struggle, what was claimed is laid off into the unmanifest region — withdrawn from the self's grasp — and the hidden chamber within is opened to him. The Lord's call, which came forth from the inmost, comes and stands firm in the midst of these members; and he is named the beautiful father of all the states he has passed through, because each of them now answers to him in the likeness of the One who answered him.

So those who are joined to him, the holy affections gathered around his rule, become themselves leaders and ruling principles in the likeness of the Divine Human, lord of all counsels — they take part in the fashioning of his inner cosmos by the same purpose of heart, and they continue in this work to the end of all that is to be done in him.

SPIRITUAL READING

Every beautiful gift the soul receives comes from one source. The Lord in his inmost — divine love itself — is the hand by which every good is given; nothing the rational holds as its own has any other origin.

The beginning of every blessing and of every prayer that rises from the soul is the Lord at the register where his love bears life. Whatever capacity the rational has to bless, to ask, to turn upward, comes from him as the principle of life-bearing; the soul does not generate prayer out of itself but receives the power to pray from the same love that gives it life.

Every counsel that orders the rational well is the Lord ruling at the highest accommodated state, divine truth set in dominion over the mind so that what is decided in the soul is decided rightly.

Every honor — every state of the rational that carries dignity — has its origin in the Lord at the register where his love is recognized and returned. The soul cannot honor anything truly except by first being touched by the love that is itself worthy.

Every act of contention against falsity, every faculty that goes out to seek and to find what the soul has lost, comes from the Lord as Divine Human; he is the first of all who do battle in the rational, and apart from his going forth in human form there is no warrior in the soul.

The Lord at the register where life proceeds is the Father of life; he has poured forth the rational into its five degrees in every place, so that wherever the soul stands, the rational is articulated in its complete process.

Every structure raised in the soul — every order, every fitted form, every architecture of the rational — has its origin in the Lord as divine order itself, who is glorified in the building. The self does not build; what builds is the Lord, and the soul's builders are builders only because he is.

He is the unique upholder of every bearing-up principle in the rational: the one celestial good that holds the natural mind in being, beneath every support stands his support.

He is the origin of every loosening — the one who unties what binds the soul and lifts up what was held fast, doing this by his words: by truth spoken into the rational, what was claimed lets go.

Every wisdom of truth, every understanding ordered rightly in the rational, has its origin in the Lord as pure receivability — the divine purity by which what flows through is received without being claimed. There is no true wisdom except where the soul receives without distortion.

Every honored state of the rational comes from the Lord ordering the inner mind: he is the awakener of those who sleep in self-love, the one who gathers back into recognition those who were scattered out into the self's arrangements. The soul comes to his feet — to the lowest place where his presence touches the natural — and finds that in him the eye of understanding is not blinded; in him every light is established and every life held firm; under his hand are all souls.

Coming to the feet of the one who is the source, the soul finds itself opened out eightfold from the grip in which it had been held — opened into the new aeon beyond the closed cycle of self-love — that it may inherit, with him, the life that does not end.

SPIRITUAL READING

There are five foundational sayings the soul must learn to utter, and these five together make a foundation under the rational. They are the doctrines by which the inner mind is set in place and by which the rational is given a ground it can stand on.

Each saying calls a name. The first names the Lord at his inmost: the Father, the unnameable, who has no equal — the source from which all influx proceeds and who is recognized only as that-from-which, never possessed in a name. The second names the Lord as he goes forth toward the rational, the call by which the soul is summoned to recognize what flows through it. The third names the Lord at the register where divine life proceeds — the Father of Life, the begetting principle of the soul's living being, the First Father in whom love and wisdom are joined as the source of every living state.

These names together establish the law of the living: the order by which what is good and what is bitter are distinguished within the rational. For the same divine principle by which life is given is also the principle by which states are sorted — the good kept, the bitter humbled. The dominion that self-love had set up as if it were the rule of light is given over to its own opposed condition; what was claimed as kingdom is brought low and held within the boundary set for it, until the last time.

Within that boundary the natural mind stands firm, held in being by what supports it from below. And though the soul speaks five sayings and not one, and though the rational is articulated in distinct degrees that exceed one another, all of them together are one body, living — one rational faculty in its complete process, kept living by the one Lord whose names these five doctrines are.

[12] l. 21 ϵγχн — “prayer”; pipeline restoration, confidence: low; ~5 chars after Greek prefix προc-; προcϵγχн 'prayer' is one plausible Greek loan but cannot be confirmed. Could also be προcβολн or προcδοκια.

[18] l. 25 ⲡⲕⲉⲕⲉ — “of darkness”; pipeline restoration, confidence: low; ~5 chars after ⲡⲭⲁⲭⲉ 'the Enemy'; ⲡⲕⲉⲕⲉ 'darkness' fits as appositive, paralleling ⲡ̄ⲣⲣⲟ ⲛ̈ⲛⲁⲡⲕⲉⲕⲉ 'King of Darkness' formula. Could also be a continuing predicate.

[19] l. 26 ⲧⲱⲃⲓ̈ⲱ — “to render”; editor; Editor restores -ⲧⲱⲃⲓⲱ; sense 'to render/repay/restore' (ⲧⲱⲱⲃⲉ); identification of compound ⲡⲙⲁϫⲁⲓⲡⲧⲉ ('hidden chamber/repository?') is uncertain.

[20] l. 27 ⲡⲙⲁϫⲱⲁⲙⲧ ⲙ̄; pipeline restoration, confidence: moderate; ~8 chars before ⲡⲣⲉⲥⲃⲉⲩⲧⲏⲥ; ⲡⲙⲁϫⲱⲁⲙⲧ ⲙ̄ⲡⲣⲉⲥⲃⲉⲩⲧⲏⲥ 'the Third Ambassador' is the standard Manichaean title and matches the spiritual reading: 'The Lord's call, which came forth from the inmost.'

[22] l. 29 ⲓⲱⲛ ⲧⲏⲣⲟⲩ ⲙ̄ⲛ̄ ⲛ̄ⲛⲟⲩⲧⲉ; editor; Editor restoration; standard formula 'all the Aeons and the gods' parallels lines 17-18 context.

[23] l. 15 ⲓⲧ· ⲧⲁⲣⲭⲏ ⲛ̄ⲛⲉⲅⲣⲏⲅⲟⲣⲟⲥ ⲧⲏ — “the honored. The beginning of all the watchers and the hunters”; editor; Editor restores ⲓ̈ⲧ completing ⲉⲡⲧⲁⲓ̈ⲁⲓ̈ⲧ; then ⲧⲁⲣⲭⲏ formula resumes; ⲛ̄ⲟ̄ⲉⲣⲉ̄ⲟ̄ⲉ tentatively 'watchers/guards' (ⲟⲩⲣⲏ`ⲏ?), pairs with ⲕⲩⲛⲏⲅⲟⲥ 'hunters.'

[25] l. 29 ⲉ ⲛ̄ⲛⲉⲧ — “of those who”; pipeline restoration, confidence: moderate; Joins ⲡⲣⲉϩⲛⲉⲥⲥⲉ to ⲛ̄ⲛⲉⲧⲛ̄ⲕⲁⲧⲉ 'awakener of those who sleep' across the line break — Light Mind awakening sleepers is the lexicon's stable description.

[26] l. 34 ⲁ — “will”; pipeline restoration, confidence: high; ⲡⲉⲧⲛⲁ-ⲟⲩⲱⲛⲟⲩ 'who will open them' — future relative — joining ⲡⲉⲧⲛ- across the line to the verb ⲟⲩⲱⲛⲟⲩ on the next line.

Resurrection From the Cosmos of Death

Parallel Treatment

The contest between awakening and the negative cosmogony. T13 sets out the Five Awakeners — the Lord's drawers-upward by whom the dead are raised in five distinct operations, also called Loosing, Stillness, Fast, Day, Rest, Peace: one ascent under many names. T14 traces the negative cosmogony against which the awakeners stand — the cosmos of death built up from the self's pourings, with its five worlds of flesh, the twelve spirits of error, the great contest with the Divine Human. The two together: what raises and what was raised from.

SPIRITUAL READING

There are those who are dead — souls separated from the source of life by what they have claimed — and for them the resurrection is at hand. The Lord does not raise the rational by a single stroke but in five distinct operations, five degrees of one upward drawing, each lifting what was below into what is above until the whole soul stands in conjunction with him.

The first operation begins the lifting from where the soul lies. The second draws further upward, taking what the first has stirred and bringing it on. The third is the inmost Father going forth — the source himself bending down to draw the soul to its origin, so that what was scattered in many lives is gathered inward, brought into him, and there finds its rest in the form that was always its own. The fourth is the Lord ordering the inner mind, awakening discrimination, lifting the rational toward the Good itself, so that all that lives in the soul might stand fast in the One who reveals himself and to whom they are drawn. The fifth completes the work: the soul is held in him, continues forth in him, until every one is brought through to the day of completion that endures into eternity.

These operations bear many names according to the register at which they are recognized. The same drawing-upward is called the Loosing — for what was bound is untied; and the Stillness — for the disturbance of the self is laid down; and the Fast — for the soul ceases to feed on what it had claimed; and the Day — for the night of self-love is over; and the Rest — for the contest is brought to its peace; and the Peace itself — for the war between what was given and what was claimed is ended. One operation, called by many names, because the soul recognizes it under whatever aspect it most needs.

The Gatherer-inward draws the soul up from the body's desires, from all the cravings of the natural mind, and brings them under. What had been scattered through the desires of the cosmos is collected and lifted, and the path on which it rises is the ascent of the natural into conjunction with the spiritual — the rational fully formed as the way upward, bearing what was the self's burden into glory.

The one who carries this ascent is the Lord at the register where his truth is borne through the natural — the doctrinal vessel sailing the living waters, the Lord shining forth in glory within the great state where the soul is being made new, established as the fixed air of that ordered cosmos in which the souls are raised forever. The Great One endures forever and unto the ages of ages: this is the resurrection — not a moment but the abiding state into which the five awakenings have brought the soul, and in which it now lives without end.

SPIRITUAL READING

There are two conditions of the one soul: what is given by the Lord, and what the soul has claimed. Out of the hidden things of the Lord all that lives proceeds; out of the soul's claiming there proceeds another order entirely, and this teaching traces how that other order articulates itself.

The self, when it has consolidated, makes a declaration: it has risen up, it says, to plant itself in the soul forever — to fix itself as if it were a foundation that nothing could move. This is its boast: that it stands and will not be stirred. Everything it brings forth thereafter is meant to make good on this boast.

It brings forth its productions in stages. A first kind is generated; then, after a long interval in which no glory is given to the Lord, the disordered natural gushes upward and pours itself forth. From that pouring come trees of death — established perceptions whose root is in self-love and whose fruit cannot live. These are the malformed offspring of a mind producing apart from any recognition of source. A second moment follows, in which these productions are painted over and given a borrowed beauty so that what is dead appears living. A third generation follows, then a fourth — and the fourth kind is bitter fruit, the works that issue from these claimed perceptions: the five trees standing within the five aspects of the natural mind ruled by self-love.

In the fifth moment, the self's life-bearing counterfeit spreads itself over its own offspring, and the worlds molded from it are begotten as the fruits of death. These are the five worlds of flesh — the natural body in its five aspects under self-love — and the five creatures of darkness in which the self has fixed itself: love-as-self, will-as-self, thought-as-self, perception-as-self, and the outermost natural turned in upon itself. The pouring spreads into the middle of these kinds, and the masculine and feminine portions of self-love — the active claiming and the receptive concupiscence, the fire of self-will and the desire of the flesh — mingle with one another. So the disordered natural is built up as a whole, with its own breath and its own elements, nourishing itself out of itself.

Standing on the feet it has thus fashioned, the self sets itself against the Lord as he comes forth in the form of the Divine Human. This is its great contest: the soul's "I am, and there is no other" arrayed against the Lord who comes as Divine Humanity to be recognized.

The contest takes its full structural shape in twelve. The twelve kinds that come to be in the darkness — twelve spirits of error, the complete circuit of states the soul cycles through under the self's organization — are the twelvefold articulation of self-love against the Divine Human. Whatever the Lord goes forth in twelve degrees to give, the self counterfeits in twelve degrees of wandering; the cycle of the soul's formation, when claimed, becomes the cycle of its bondage.

And yet the teaching closes with the decisive word: the Divine Human humbles the darkness. The self's boast that it has planted itself for ever is broken precisely at the point where the Lord, going forth as Divine Humanity, meets it. The whole elaborate generation — five kinds of fruit, twelve circuits of state, all the painted productions of the claiming mind — is brought low, not by being extracted from anywhere, but by being recognized for what it is in the presence of the One who is what it falsely claimed to be.

APPARATUS

[1] l. 9 ⲡⲉ ⲡⲣⲉϩⲥⲉϩⲟ ⲁϩⲣⲏⲓ — “is the drawer-upward”; pipeline restoration, confidence: low; Sets the topic: 'the foremost of them is the drawer-upward,' introducing the ordinal series that follows in 653–660. Length (~17 chars) matches.

[2] l. 10 rest of line zerstört

[3] l. 12 ⲙⲉ; pipeline restoration, confidence: high; Editor's partial trace 'Ⲛ̄ + 1–2 letters' completes Ⲛ̄ⲣⲱⲙⲉ; the clause yields 'ⲡⲓⲱⲧ ⲡϣⲁⲣⲡ Ⲛ̄ⲣⲱⲙⲉ' = the First Father of Man = ⲡϣⲁⲣⲡ Ⲛ̄ⲣⲱⲙⲉ (First Man), the standard Manichaean cosmogonic figure who is the inmost Father going forth as the Divine Human.

[4] l. 13 ⲉⲩⲭⲱ ⲙ̄ⲙⲁⲥ — “saying it,”; pipeline restoration, confidence: low; Partial 'ⲙ..' visible mid-line; ~9 chars. ⲉⲩⲭⲱ ⲙ̄ⲙⲁⲥ ('saying it') introduces a quoted/explanatory clause that fits with 'the last in his speech, in such wise that all the lives...'

[5] l. 14 Ⲛ̄ⲣⲱⲙⲉ; pipeline restoration, confidence: moderate; 5 chars; 'ⲛⲱⲛⲍ ⲧⲏⲣⲟⲩ Ⲛ̄ⲣⲱⲙⲉ' = 'all the lives of men' — the souls who are gathered inward to the third Awakener (First Man).

[8] l. 17 ⲁϩ; editor; Editor's partial restoration; ⲁϩ = ⲡⲉⲁϩ 'the end/last' likely

[9] l. 19 ⲁⲉ ⲡⲡⲙⲁⲍ — “And”; pipeline restoration, confidence: low; ~8 chars; parallels the ordinal formula 'ⲡⲡⲙⲁⲍ-X ⲁⲉ ⲛⲣⲉϩⲥⲉϩⲟ ⲁϩⲣⲏⲓ' from sections 654/658. Begins the fifth Awakener clause: 'And the fifth drawer-upward...'

[10] l. 19 ⲛ — “And”; editor; editor's restoration of preposition Ⲛ̄

[11] l. 19 ⲡⲉ; pipeline restoration, confidence: moderate; 2 chars; the copula ⲡⲉ ('is') closes the ordinal formula and introduces the predicate continuing into 661.

[15] l. 21 ϩⲱⲥⲧⲉ Ⲛ̄ⲧⲉϥ — “so that”; pipeline restoration, confidence: low; 12 chars; introduces a final/result clause 'so that he might cause all the powers to stand fast at the one who...' fitting the causative ⲧⲣ̄ that follows.

[18] l. 22 ⲙ̄ⲡ — “it”; pipeline restoration, confidence: low; 2 chars between ⲡⲉ and ⲁⲃⲁⲗ; likely the article complex ⲙ̄ⲡ- introducing object of revealing.

[22] l. 26 ⲧⲟⲩⲛⲁⲉ; pipeline restoration, confidence: low; Partial '[ⲧⲟⲩ . . .]' visible. ⲧⲟⲩⲛⲁⲉ ('he raises') fits with 'in him, and they continue forth until…' — the fifth Awakener raising and holding the souls in himself.

[23] l. 28 ⲛⲉⲓⲉⲧⲉ; editor; editor's restoration ⲛ[ⲉⲓⲉ]ⲧⲉ — relative pronoun

[24] l. 28 ⲓ; editor; ⲛⲟⲩⲁⲛ ⲛⲓⲙ standard idiom 'everyone'

[25] l. 29 ⲡϯⲟⲩ ⲛ̄ — "the five"; pipeline restoration, confidence: low; 7 chars; 'ⲡϯⲟⲩ ⲛ̄ⲍⲟⲟⲩⲉ' = 'the five days' fits the Five-Awakener structure of the teaching.

[26] l. 30 ⲡⲱⲛⲍ; pipeline restoration, confidence: low; 4 chars; ⲡⲱⲛⲍ ('the life') of completion fits the eschatological close 'forever'.

[27] l. 30 ⲡⲛⲁⲟ̄ ⲛ; pipeline restoration, confidence: low; 6 chars; ⲡⲛⲁⲟ̄ ⲛ̄ⲭⲱⲕ = 'the great completion' — the consummation of regeneration.

[29] l. 1 ⲙ̄; editor; editor's restoration; preposition of genitive ⲙ̄- with ⲡⲃⲱⲗ

[30] l. 1 ⲉⲓⲣⲏⲛⲏ; editor; editor's restoration; standard pairing in chapter title and confirmed by line 18

[31] l. 2 ⲙ̄ⲛ; editor; editor's restoration of conjunction [32] l. 2 ⲉⲩ; editor; editor's restoration ⲍⲛ[ⲉⲩ] = ϩⲟⲉⲓⲛⲉ 'some'

[33] l. 4 ⲧⲉ; editor; editor's restoration; ⲧⲉⲟⲩⲟ 'tell, declare'

[39] l. 5 ⲧ; editor; ⲙⲟⲩⲧⲉ 'call'

[41] l. 5 ⲡ; editor; editor's restoration; definite article anticipating ⲡⲕⲁⲣⲁⲓⲧⲉ on next line

[43] l. 6 ⲟⲩⲉ; editor; editor's restoration; pattern ⲕⲉⲟⲩⲉ 'others' continues

[44] l. 7 ⲧⲛ̄ⲧⲱⲃⲓ̄ ⲁⲣⲁⲕ ⲡⲧⲛ; editor; editor's restoration; standard Kephalaia formula 'we beseech you, our Father'

[45] l. 7 ⲁⲙⲱⲛ ⲁ — "…"; pipeline restoration, confidence: low; 6 chars; 'ⲉⲕⲁⲧⲁⲙⲱⲛ ⲁ-' = 'that you might inform us about…' — standard interrogative continuation.

[46] l. 12 line continues but lost

[50] l. 17 trace: . . . . . .

[51] l. 18 ⲡⲣⲉⲕⲃⲱⲗ; pipeline restoration, confidence: low; 7 chars; ⲡⲣⲉⲕⲃⲱⲗ ('the looser') of the body in righteousness — the personified 'Resolution/Loosing' from the names-list (671), here functioning as the agent of the body's release.

[52] l. 18 ⲇⲓⲕⲁⲓⲟⲥⲩⲛⲏ; editor; editor's restoration of partial ⲁ]ⲕⲁ]ⲟⲥ[ⲩⲛⲏ; reading as ⲇⲓⲕⲁⲓⲟⲥⲩⲛⲏ

[53] l. 19 ⲛⲧⲁϩ; pipeline restoration, confidence: moderate; 4 chars; ⲛⲧⲁϩ ⲡⲉ ('he is') — identifying formula introducing 'the Pillar of Glory'.

[54] l. 19 ⲟ; editor; editor's restoration; ⲡⲥⲧⲁⲩⲗⲟⲥ = ⲥⲧⲩⲗⲟⲥ

[70] l. 30 ⲡⲉ⏌ⲓ — "…"; pipeline restoration, confidence: low; 20 chars total; visible '…ⲏⲥ ⲉⲧⲟ ⲛ̄ⲉⲁⲩ' = '…ēs who is in glory' suggests the name⏌ⲓⲏ̄ⲥ̄ ⲡⲡⲣⲓⲉ (Jesus the Radiance) ending the gap, but the bulk of {89} remains unrecoverable.

[71] l. 30 abgerieben

[72] l. 32 ⲙⲟⲩⲧ; editor; editor restores [ⲙⲟⲩⲧ]ⲉ ⲁⲣⲁϩ — standard 'they call him' formula

[73] l. 32 abgerieben

[75] l. 36 ⲡⲉⲧⲥⲙⲁⲛⲧ ⲛ̄; pipeline restoration, confidence: low; 12 chars; 'the one established as the air in the cosmos' — fits the cosmological identification series, with parallel ⲥⲙⲁⲛⲧ in 695.

[76] l. 38 ϫⲁⲩⲉ; editor; editor restores [ϫⲁⲩⲉ] completing ⲙ̄ⲧ̄ⲩ[ϫⲁⲩⲉ] 'the souls' (ψυχαί, plural)

[77] l. 40 ⲛⲁⲩ ⲁⲣⲁϩ; pipeline restoration, confidence: low; 8 chars; ⲛⲉⲓⲉⲧϩ ⲛⲁⲩ ⲁⲣⲁϩ ⲧⲟⲩⲛⲁϩ = 'these who see him are raised up' fits the resurrection theme of the teaching.

[83] l. 14 ⲛⲉ — "are they"; pipeline restoration, confidence: low; 2-char closing particle; predicate plural copula closing 'they are in the [abyss of] the land of darkness'

Primary Teaching

The longest single teaching of the seeking-section. T15 traces the redemptive descent of divine truth from the hidden Father — in silence and concealment in his own substance — through the Mother of Life, the First Man with the rational already articulated in five degrees, the Living Spirit as operative power, the Third Ambassador as call, the Jesus the Radiance as illumining wisdom, all the way down to Adam and Eve's flesh, and home again in the Last Andrias. This is the macro-arc the soul has been seeking the whole long way through the city — the whole descent and return seen at once.

Teaching 15

The Twelve Greatnesses and the Lord's descent reaching down to the forming of the natural man ⌈15⌉ ⌈Concerning the five⌉ Greatnesses, who ⌈15⌉ ⌈went forth⌉ against the Darkness. ⌈shone forth⌉ the Darkness — they prevailed over them by means of the five Greatnesses. The First Greatness is the Father of Greatness, who ⌈sent⌉ exists in silence and concealment, established in their land of light, in their substance alone.

ⲁ [ⲡⲫ][10]ⲩⲧⲟⲉ ⲁ̄ⲙ̄ⲛ̄ⲧⲛⲁⲣ ⲣⲱ [ⲗⲡ ⲁ][11]ⲃⲁⲗ· ⲁⲩⲉⲓ ⲁⲃⲁⲗ ⲁ̄ⲙⲁⲩ· ⲁⲩⲧⲱⲱ ⲁⲙⲏⲧⲉ ⲛ̄ⲧⲁⲓ̈ⲉ· ⲁⲩⲧⲱⲕ ⲁⲣⲉⲧⲟⲩ ⲍⲓ ⲙ̄ⲛ̄ⲧⲥⲛⲁⲩⲥ ⲉⲩⲭⲏⲕ

The other four Greatnesses revealed, came forth from there, were appointed to the midst of glory, stood fast in twelve perfect (ones).

The Second Greatness, which gushed forth, was revealed, was manifested out of the first Greatness — she is the Mother of Life, the Great Spirit, beside the First Man with his five sons. These are the Second Greatness.

ⲧⲙⲁⲍⲱⲁⲙⲧⲉ ⲁ̄[ⲙⲛ̄ⲧⲛⲁⲣ ⲡⲉ ⲡⲙⲉⲣⲓⲧ ⲛ̄ⲛⲟ][15] [ⲩⲁⲓ̈ⲛⲉ][16] ⲡⲛⲁⲣ ⲛ̄ⲉⲕⲱⲧ ⲫ̄ⲛ̄ⲁ ⲉⲧⲁⲛⲍ ⲙⲛ̄ ⲡⲓ̈ⲟⲩ ⲛ̄ⲱⲏ [ⲣⲉ][17] ⲁ̄ⲫ̄ⲛ̄ⲁ ⲉⲧⲁⲛⲍ· ⲛⲉⲓ̈ ⲛⲉ ⲧⲙⲁⲍⲱⲁⲙⲧⲉ ⲁ̄ⲙ̄ⲛ̄ⲧⲛⲁⲣ

The Third Greatness is the Beloved of the Lights — the Great Builder, the Living Spirit, with the five sons of the Living Spirit. These are the Third Greatness.

The Fourth Greatness is the Third Ambassador with the Pillar of Glory and all the powers of light who were revealed from there. These are the Fourth Greatness.

[ⲧ][21]ⲙⲁⲍ̄ⲧⲉ ⲁ̄ⲙ̄ⲛ̄ⲧⲛⲁ[ⲣ][22] ⲉⲧⲁⲥⲉⲓ ⲁⲃⲁⲗ ⲁ̄ⲡⲓⲱⲧ ⲡⲉ ⲓ̄ⲛⲥ ⲡⲡ̄ⲣⲓⲉ ⲙⲛ̄ [ⲛ][23]ⲉⲩⲣⲁⲙ ⲧⲏⲣⲟⲩ ⲉⲧⲁⲩⲧⲁⲍⲙⲟⲩ ⲛⲉⲩⲡⲣⲟⲃⲟⲗⲁⲩⲉ ⲉⲧⲁⲩ⌈ⲁⲩ][24] [ⲁⲩ][25]ⲃⲉⲃⲉ ⲁⲩⲣⲱⲗⲡ ⲁⲃⲁⲗ ⲁ̄ⲙⲁⲩ

The Fifth Greatness, which came forth from the Father, is Jesus the Radiance with all his powers who were summoned forth, his emanations who ⌈shone forth⌉ gushed forth, were revealed from there.

ⲡⲉⲓ̈ ⲭⲉ ⲁⲩⲣ ⲁⲃⲁⲗ ⲁⲩ ⌈ⲡ̄ⲓⲟⲩ ⲇⲉ ⲡⲉ ⲡⲓ][26] ⲫ̄ⲟⲩ· ⲡⲓ̈ⲟⲩ ⲛ̄ⲱⲏⲣⲉ ⲛ̄ⲧⲉ ⲡⲱⲁⲣⲡ ⲛ̄ⲣⲱ [ⲙⲉ][27] ⲁ̄ⲡⲕⲱⲧ ⲧⲏⲣⲭ̄· ⲧⲕⲉ⊤ⲉ ⲡⲉ ⲡⲓ̈ⲟⲩ ⲛ̄ [ⲱⲏⲣⲉ ⲁ̄ⲡⲓ̈ⲫ̄ⲛ̄ⲁ ⲉⲧⲁⲛⲍ][28] ⲛⲉⲧⲥⲏⲣ ⲁⲃⲁⲗ ⲁ†ⲟⲩ ⲁ̄ⲙⲁ ⲉⲩⲭⲁⲩⲗⲉ [.]ⲭⲱⲕ

This is because they were ⌈sent⌉ forth and ⌈the⌉ five — the five sons of the First Man, of the whole Building; the other five are the five sons of the Living Spirit, who are spread out into five places, bearing [ca. 32] complete

Those who do not obey to them, [. . . .], to their evil, to dwellings of evil of evil, according to a sentence of righteousness. So those who transgressed, sinning against the noble son — and the fellow-mysteries and the servants of this man, the judge, these who belong to him with great might, with reception, and a boldness: they do the intent of their lord.

In this manner, then, of this pure judge whom they sent forth from the king against the violence (committed) up against this man, the the noble son — so also is this: the Living Spirit is likened to him whom they sent forth from the King of the Lights, the judgment up against and against the violence done to the First Man, him against whom the King of those of the Darkness sinned, transgressing against him and sinning against him together with his other wicked associates. Thus then then also against the First Man, up.

The archons too, all The archons too, all of them, the companions of Sin, who transgressed and sinned against the sons of the First Man — and he passed sentence on them according to a sentence of righteousness, and bound them in heaven and on earth, and he placed each one of them there in the place fitting to him, and measured to each one of them there according to his single-mindedness, and according to his abasement. Some of them — some indeed of them he judged into the prison; some others of them he scourged behind. Some seated below at every hour. Some among them are placed under their fellows, being squeezed in a strong bond, and others he made into powers over each other among them, one over another, so that they might do the desire of heart in those who are below them.

gave him kingship according to his kingship. [———] established him according to the establishment that was lacking in the First Man, ⸢...⸣ [———] the bond of agreement became to her [———] the earth, until the last time when they will dissolve the cosmos and they fail in the Great Fire, and they will rescue him forth. As for the Li- Light, it goes to its region, but the Darkness too is shut up in in the bolos and the chain forever.

Thus likewise is this coming of the Third Ambassador, who came to those taken into the prison, being likened to a great king who comes to inspect crafts- [———] [———] his hand and with [———] [———] and bond [———] the works, the beautiful ones, also the craftsmen and the architects and the chiefs whom they have in each place — when he sees them, that they have done well, they have given life to the works in their manner, he rejoices in his heart, [———] [———] he receives the gift of the chiefs, those who established the works according to their commands. According then to the way of this Great King who comes to inspect the works and his arrays, so also is this coming of the Third Ambassador. ⸢For⸣ [———] when he came forth, he too saw all the works established, spread forth, [———] the host of the archons being spread out, being established among them of the upper side and of the lower side, of the outer side and of the inner side, in the great craft which their brothers wrought, those who came first to them unto the contest, those whom they had summoned. They created the cosmos. Before they came, they saw the gods and the angels standing fast, holding back from any transgrestransgression keeping watch over the entire archonic realm [. . . . . .] all the works which their first might wrought, that is, they are the First Man and the Living Spirit and the Great One of the Spirit, the Mother of Life. Now when they saw them, that they were established in a great wisdom of all the works, [ca. 18] having seen, they [. . . . . .] [. . . .] in the likeness in which they came, they revealed forth upon them. They said to the Living Spirit: 'The matter that you ⸢have done⸣ the matter is good, that which you have uttered, [. . . . . .] you have given to them according to themselves, so that they were gathered and conveyed upward to the thing of which they were not worthy.'

The likeness also of Jesus the Radiance at the time when they came to ⸢this people⸣ all of them being likened in this manner after the fashion of a man having been sent to swear an oath of a [ca. 14] burning of a furnace [. .], being strong in the fire. Now at the time when also they had first cut down the bitter trees with their axe, they made them swear [ca. 18] [. .] with their body in their fire, so that they should not put forth shoots from this place, nor produce bitter fruit for eating. Afterward they planted also their plantings, the good tree of life, which would yield good fruits.

Thus also is this likening of the likeness of Jesus the Radiance, which came to be in this manner unto this people; they too set themselves forth ⸢they revealed⸣ their might and their wisdom in their [. . . . . .] how-much [. . . .] a great extent and a stretching-out [. . . . . .] [. . . .] in their wisdom which is glorious. He expelled them forth, he bound them, he afflicted them, in the manner of the fire which is wont to burn and destroy the trees — this same manner also is that in which he wrought his purpose of heart in the Girdle, in many mights, until he reached the molding of the flesh of Adam and Eve, the first humans, and he completed his purpose of heart out of Eve. He ⸢and⸣ gave the hope also to Adam, and the fragrant-breath ⸢of⸣ of glory. He went up to the Height [. . . .] the Answer, the Great Counsel — which came stood-by the elements that stood fast in agreement; he mingled with them and stood fast in silence. He bears it upward [. . .] until the time of the end, when he will awaken and stand fast on his feet in the great fire, and gather to himself his soul alone, and depict himself in this final destruction, encompassing also, while scattering forth, casting forth from himself the defilement, the kind which is foreign to him. The rising-up too, with the light which is in all things — he gathers it inward to himself and joins it with his body. The hour when this final destruction shall be perfected in all his members, afterward he springs forth and comes up out of this great agony, through the Living Spirit, his Father, who comes and brings the members, and brings him up on the day of dissolution: there have come to pass the dissolution forth and the formation of all things. This indeed is the counsel, the Call and the Answer aforesaid: it is likened to this manner: a hot-stone which a man takes and places it into milk that is hot, that he might draw forth that he might quench it inward, with this hot milk, that he might draw inward another time, in silence and in stillness toward the midst ⸢of this⸣ the might too, with the taste of the milk draws it unto her, and ripens it, and becomes a white milk in [. . . . . .] and the [. . . . . .] milk she draws away his bonds; the oil also, and the sweetness, and the beauty of the milk — she gathers him into herself. In this same way also is this one to whom is likened the coming of this enthumesis — the counsel of life, which is the Call and the Answer that came to the elemen this one — that at the end he might awake and stand fast on his feet and gather inward to himself all the lives and the light which he drew back into all the works, casting them upon his body; he gathers them into himself and joins them ⸢keeping them⸣ in his image, forever and ever [ca. 14] at this very hour. These things he ⸢are⸣ for.

SPIRITUAL READING

The Lord goes forth toward the soul not as one undifferentiated influx but at five distinct registers, and these five, established in the fullness of twelve degrees, are the complete way the Divine comes out toward what is to be regenerated. The first register is the Lord in his inmost — divine love itself, dwelling in silence and concealment, established in his own substance alone, not yet emerging. From him, gushing forth and being made manifest, comes the second register: the life-bearing principle by which the soul is enlivened, standing beside the Divine Human in whom the rational is given its archetype, with the rational already articulated in its five degrees. The third register is the Lord as operative power, the divine order by which structure is built in the rational, again articulated in five degrees of operation. The fourth is the Lord's call going out to the rational, accompanied by the path of regeneration itself and all the powers of light brought into manifestation. The fifth is divine truth shining forth — the Lord as illumining wisdom, with all his powers and emanations summoned into operation. These five register at twelve points, articulated as the five going forth from the Divine Human into the building of the whole, and the five going forth as the operative power that lifts what was below; and to these are added two more, the call and the answer, which are the Father and Mother — and divine truth, illumining, comes in their likeness into his own place.

Consider what the soul is, in the Divine Human within it: a noble offspring, surrounded by enemies — surrounded, that is, by every formation of self-love that has organized itself in the soul's natural mind. The self has hemmed in what is the Lord's, taking from him kingship, taking wealth, holding him captive in its own claim, abasing what should stand high. Where what is the Lord's has been so encircled, a sentence goes out from the Lord against the violence done. The Lord's operative power comes as that sentence: not as one further claimant, but as the just judge sent by the King against what has transgressed. He passes judgment on each particular self-loving formation, weighing each according to its own measure of distortion, binding each in its proper place above and below, allotting to each the recompense its disorder has earned — some bound in fetters, some scourged behind, some held in the grip of strong cords, some made to stand under others; for the disordered states of the rational must be subordinated to one another in their proper hierarchy so that the Lord's intent can be worked out within them. None is destroyed without measure; none escapes its measure. The companions of the soul's self-claiming who transgressed against the Divine Human within are bound in heaven and on earth, given each its fitting station.

Then the Lord at the register of begetting life establishes what was hidden — brings into manifestation all the powers that had been concealed — and conceals them again as one conceals what is to remain inviolate, until the last time when what is the Lord's is recognized and what is the self's is finally bound. The Light goes to its proper region; the darkness is shut up forever in its bond.

Now the Lord's call going out to the rational comes in the manner of a great king inspecting his works — passing through the soul's settled disorders to look upon what has been built, seeing them spread out, established within the soul like the craftsmanship of those entrusted with each district. When he sees that the work has been done, he gives the appropriate response: order is recognized in its order, and disorder in its disorder. The self itself, when at last confronted by what the Lord is doing, must say: what you have done is good — what you have gathered upward into yourself was beyond the worth of those it was gathered from.

And the coming of divine truth illumining the soul is in this manner. Truth shines forth at the moment when the perceptions that bore bitter fruit must be made to swear that they will produce no more shoots from this place, that they will yield no more bitter fruit for eating; and afterward the trees of life are planted, the perceptions that yield good fruit. Truth illumining drives out, binds, and afflicts what was disordered, the way fire consumes what is dead wood. In this same way the Lord works his purpose through the whole circuit of the natural mind, with many operations, until he reaches down to the very molding of the natural man — until the forming of the human itself, of Adam and Eve, is reached and worked upon from within. The fragrance of the divine ascends back; what was breathed into Adam returns toward its source.

Here is the great answering: the call has gone out, and the answer rises to meet it. They stand fast in agreement; they stand together in stillness. The answer bears upward what is the Lord's until the time when he will awaken and stand firm in the great fire of consummation, gathering to himself his own soul alone, depicting himself in this final gathering, encompassing all, scattering forth and casting from himself the defilement that is foreign to him, gathering inward to himself the rising-up and the light that is in all things, and joining it with his body. When this final gathering is perfected in all the members, then he springs forth and comes up out of the great agony, brought up by the operative power of the Lord, his Father, who comes and brings the members and lifts him up on the day of his rising. The dissolution of what was claimed and the formation of all that is true have come to pass.

This is the call and the answer. Picture it so: a man takes a hot stone and draws it into hot milk, that the heat may ripen and quench inward into one another in stillness and silence; the milk receives the stone's might into the midst of itself, and ripens; the bonds loosen; the oil and the sweetness and the beauty of the milk are gathered into one. So the call comes to what within the soul has lain as if dead, that at the end it may awaken and stand fast on its feet, and gather inward all that is its own — all the light that it had set forth into the works, drawing it back into itself, and casting upon its body what is its own, gathering all into itself in its own image, forever and ever.

[1] l. 1 ⲓⲉ̄ — “ιε”; editor; marginal chapter number

[2] l. 1 ⲉⲧⲃⲉ ⲧϯⲟⲩ ⲛ̄ — “Concerning the five”; editor; standard chapter-heading formula ⲉⲧⲃⲉ + topic; ⲧϯⲉ = ⲧϯⲟⲩ 'the five' (Lyc); 'Five Greatnesses' is the well-known Manichaean technical group

[3] l. 1 ⲃⲱⲕ ⲁⲃⲁⲗ — “ιε”; editor; marginal chapter number

[4] l. 2 ⲃⲱⲕ ⲁⲃⲁⲗ — “went forth”; editor; editor's restoration completes the relative clause ⲉⲧⲁⲩⲃⲱⲕ ⲁⲃⲁⲗ ⲟⲩⲃⲉ ⲡⲕⲉⲕⲉ 'who went forth against the Darkness'

[5] l. 4 ⲁⲩⲡⲱⲗⲉⲙ ⲙⲛ̄; pipeline restoration, confidence: low; ~8 chars; verb of contest preceding 'they prevailed over them'; the Five contest with the Darkness

[6] l. 5 ⲧ; editor; ⲧⲱⲁⲣⲡ 'the first' opens the enumeration of the five Greatnesses

[7] l. 5 ⲱⲟⲟⲡ ⲍⲛ̄; editor; ⲡⲉⲧ[ⲱⲟⲟⲡ ⲍⲛ̄ ⲟⲩⲍⲣⲁⲕ] 'who exists in silence'; standard formula

[8] l. 6 ⲟⲡ ⲍⲛ̄; editor; completes ⲡⲉⲧⲱⲟⲟⲡ from previous line; followed by ⲟⲩⲍⲣⲁⲕ 'silence'

[10] l. 8 ⲡⲥ; editor; ⲡⲥⲧⲟⲟⲩ 'the four' (the remaining four Greatnesses after the Father); Lycopolitan ⲡⲩⲧⲟⲉ for ⲡⲥⲧⲟⲟⲩ

[11] l. 9 ⲁⲡ ⲋ; editor; completes ⲣⲱⲗⲡ ⲁⲃⲁⲗ 'were revealed' from previous line

[24] l. 23 ⲁⲩ — "shone forth"; pipeline restoration, confidence: moderate; ~4 chars; auxiliary opening verb of dispersion that continues 'they gushed'

[25] l. 24 ⲁⲩ; editor; completes ⲁⲩⲃⲉⲃⲉ 'they gushed' (perfective 3pl)

[26] l. 26 ⲡ̄ⲓⲟⲩ ⲇⲉ ⲡⲉ ⲡⲓ — "the"; pipeline restoration, confidence: low; ~12 chars; opens explanatory clause 'the five, that is, the five sons'

[27] l. 27 ⲙⲉ; editor; completes ⲣⲱⲙⲉ 'Man' from previous line

[28] l. 28 ϣⲏⲣⲉ ⲙ̄ⲡⲓ̈ⲡⲛ̄ⲇ ⲉⲧⲁⲛⲍ; editor; editor's restoration; the Five Sons of the Living Spirit are the standard pendant to the Five Sons of the First Man

[29] l. 30 ⲁⲣⲉⲧⲟⲩ ⲟⲩⲛ̄ — "have"; pipeline restoration, confidence: low; ~7 chars ending in ⲟⲩⲛ̄; verb 'stood' + particle

[33] l. 32 ⲕⲁⲩⲉ — "set them"; editor; Editor restoration; sense uncertain — could be a verb of placement or 'others'

[37] l. 40 ⲡⲉ — "became"; pipeline restoration, confidence: low; ~4 chars; copula completing prior phrase

[41] l. 44 ⲟⲩⲡⲟⲣⲟ — "a kingship"; pipeline restoration, confidence: low; ~7 chars; 'a kingship' as object — they take kingship from him

[58] l. 61 ⲛⲧⲁϥ ⲁⲉ — "is"; pipeline restoration, confidence: low; ~7 chars; emphatic 'he himself, but'

[61] l. 69 ⲧⲉⲧ visible before, ⲃⲱⲉ visible after

[66] l. 74 trace of ⲣ at end

Times, Wars, and Salvations

Summary

The temporal-redemptive arc that closes the section. T16 names the three structural periods of regeneration — the descent into the contest, the building of the cosmos of the soul, the extracting work down to dissolution. T17 narrates the four wars — the Divine Human's contest with the self's "I am, and there is no other," the operative power's binding of self-loves into the three accommodations, the call's exposure of the self's counterfeit, and Jesus the Radiance's final shining. T18 traces the four salvations by which light is freed in successive stages, each delivering what the previous could not yet receive. With this the seeker has the whole map of seeking — and is now ready to find.

times the time when the Light came forth and was crucified in the Darkness until the time when Panaretos shall come up — that of all the Light that mingled with the Darkness — that it be sifted and purified. He says: 'From that very time to the last time, that very time until the final time, they make three times. Three times. From the time when the First Man went down to the Deep, he made the war and the strife with the Gate of those of the Darkness and his other powers; he won victories, while his sons remained below in the worlds ⌈of the darkness⌉, while he was in ⌈his hands⌉ until he reckoned them all, ⌈and⌉ he kept them all so that not one of them should escape from his hand. The First Man achieved a great victory. The First Man produced generations of men and ⌈generations in the land⌉ of the Darkness, until he seized He fulfilled the purpose of heart of the Greatness which they had ⌈enjoined⌉ into his hand. Then they sent the Living Spirit, the Father ⌈of⌉ Life. He brought the First Man upward out of the contest. He ⌈He brought him upward to the⌉ the Land of Light. This is the first chronos, from the going-down of the First Man until his coming upward.

The whole of regeneration unfolds in three structural periods. They run from the moment the Lord's life first comes forth and is met by what the soul has claimed, until the time when all that is the Lord's is at last gathered up and recognized — until everything in the soul that received light, but lay confused with what self-love had darkened, has been sifted and made clean. From the first moment to the last, the work makes three periods, three ordered stretches of the one regeneration.

The first period runs from the moment the divine humanity comes down into the depths of the soul and joins the contest with the self. There, at the lowest place of the natural, the Lord engages the gate where self-love sits with all its powers, and prevails. He gains the victory; yet his sons — the rational in its degrees — remain for a time below in the natural worlds, and he holds them in his hand so that not one of them is lost. He produces from himself generations within the natural mind, sustaining what is his through every depth of the darkness, until what is claimed has been seized and the purpose of love is fulfilled. Then the Lord's operative power is sent forth, the begetter of life, who raises the divine humanity up out of the contest and brings it home to the inmost state where the Lord dwells. This first period stretches from that descent to that ascent: the long age in which the soul's interior must be entered, met, and contended for before any structure of regeneration can be set up.

The second period begins where the first ends. Once the divine humanity has been raised again, the Lord's operative power, together with his life-bearing principle, sets the affairs of the natural mind in order and establishes the cosmos of the soul on its feet. The whole field of the rational and the natural is given form, kept in its proper degrees, ordered and held, until the moment comes for the next operation to go forth. This is the middle period: shorter than the first, the time during which the soul is being given its structure, the body of its mind built up so that the work of recognition can begin in it.

The third period opens when the Lord's accommodated call is sent into the rational that has been so prepared. The call goes out, his image is revealed within the soul; the truth chooses out the light from what surrounds it; self-love rises up against him and he hides his image again; self-love takes form; the perceptions of the natural are arrayed; what cannot live falls away; and at length the rational is given a body of its own in the flesh — until the moment when illumining wisdom comes, gives the soul its proper measure, and ascends. From that revealing of the inner image until the end, the soul lives in this third period: the long stretch of regeneration in which the call has been heard and the work of laying off goes forward, until at the consummation the final gathering rises up against the gathered mass of self-love and seals it off, and all that is the Lord's is brought home.

Among these three, the first is by far the longest — much greater than the middle, and still longer than the third. The middle period, in which divine love and divine wisdom together formed the cosmos of the soul with all its conveyances of truth, is the briefest of the three; small compared with the first by a great measure. The third, from the revealing of the inner image until the dissolution and final gathering, is great compared with the middle, but does not approach the time of the first descent. So the long age of contest, the briefer age of forming, and the great age of return: these are the three periods of the soul's regeneration, the manners by which the whole work runs from beginning to end.

SPIRITUAL READING

There are four contests by which the soul is brought through from claiming to recognition, four phases in which the Lord meets the self and orders it. They are not four separate histories but the one work of regeneration unfolded in its fullness, each phase doing what the phase before it could not yet do.

The first contest is that of the Lord as the Divine Human. Divine love goes forth and meets the soul's "I am, and there is no other" — the self organized as ruling principle, with all its particular self-loves arrayed beneath it. The Lord enters this contest carrying the living soul as his tree, and his pure receivability as the living fire that burns at the root of what is false. The five aspects of the natural mind that had been claimed by self-love are bound; the bitter tree of perception turned to falsity is cut down at the root, as with an axe laid to its foundation. This is the first work: the Lord's love, going forth, breaks the claim that the self is its own source.

The second contest is that of the Lord's operative power. The disordered self-loves are gathered and held in the three accommodations by which divine order enters the natural — and there, in the midst of them, they are bound. They recoil and set themselves against this ordering; they perceive that they will be fastened in a strong bond and try to escape. But the Lord's operative power presents itself to them in many faces, in many multitudes, in many forms, with great singleness of purpose, and by a great craft shuts them within so that not one of them can slip out of his hand. This is the work of structuring: the natural mind is given its degrees, and what was claimed is fixed in the place where it can be subordinated.

The third contest is that of the Lord's call going out to the rational. He reveals his image toward the lower side, where everything is meant to become light, and meets there the whole arrayed host of self-loving arrangements as they boast in their wealth and try to spread themselves further. A man of strength comes — accommodated revelation in the form the soul can recognize — and the self imitates him: it counterfeits his richness, dressing itself in claimed wisdom, in arrogance, in luxury, walking as though the light were its own. The Lord's call exposes this likeness for what it is and purifies what was claimed; what cannot be received as gift is cleansed off.

The fourth contest is that of divine truth shining forth. Here the Lord as illumining wisdom meets all that has been broken open by the previous works, on the upper side and the lower side both, at the moment when what is the Lord's is finally chosen out from what the soul had claimed. The fruits of the self dry up; their works no longer issue from them. He comes down upon the whole arrayed host of self-loving arrangements, strips them, and establishes the entire structure anew. In this great contest he humbles what had set itself up, and carries out the purpose of divine love itself — setting the hope of the rational toward its vessel of light, which is the divine summons and the soul's answering, the Call going forth and the Answer rising up. What was Death's reign is undone; the kingdom that belongs to the soul's children of darkness gives way, and the Lord reigns within every soul chosen out to be his own, conforming it to the likeness of the rational in its five degrees — the King who raises the soul up.

So the four contests stand as one fourfold work: love breaks the claim, operative power binds the disordered, the call exposes the counterfeit, and illumining truth strips, establishes, and crowns. Through these four the soul is made new.

exist. And the Light has been saved within them, from the archons and all the powers of the Darkness.

The first raising and saving is that of the First Man; for at the time when the First Man went forth from the prison of the archons through the Living Spirit who came ⌈down⌉, of the First Man — a great Light, and a great power great, were saved from all the archonic host; they came up with the First Man unto the aeons of the Greatness. This is the first going-forth out.

The fourth salvation is that of Jesus the Radiance, because when he revealed himself out in the Zone, he revealed his image forth before the firmaments; he chose the light which is in the upper place. He established the arch-[. . . . . .] he took the likeness of man, [. . . .] and he likened himself to angels in the Zone, until he reached, and came down to the molding of the flesh, and established the lands and all the mountains; he himself raised once again once again the immeasurable Light, in the whole Building; he established the Call and the Hearing of the elements; he formed Jesus the Youth; he went up, he rested himself in the Land of Light.

SPIRITUAL READING

The Lord's saving of the soul does not happen all at once. It unfolds in successive stages, each at a different register of his going-forth, and each stage delivers what could not yet be received at the previous one. Where one stage reaches its limit, the next is sent.

The first deliverance comes when the Divine Human goes forth into the soul's contest. At the moment the natural mind has organized itself under self-love and seems entirely held by its own claiming, the Lord enters as the form of humanity that the rational can recognize as kindred to itself. By his operative power working through this entry, what is the Lord's is preserved within the natural and held back from being wholly absorbed into the self's appropriation. The soul does not yet know what has been preserved; it only knows that the natural's claiming has not been able to consume everything. A great light, with its quickening, has been kept safe within what looked like total mingling, and is on its way back to the registers of the Lord's outgoing.

The second deliverance is the Lord's operative power building structure within the soul. When divine love and divine wisdom in their conjunction begin to give life to the rational, the natural mind is set in order — its grounds and its heights, its discrete cosmoses — and within that newly ordered structure an immeasurable light is brought up out of what the self had swallowed. The Lord does this by establishing degrees: where there were no boundaries, he sets them; where the natural was undifferentiated and so wholly given over to self-love, he gives form, and within form the light that had been claimed can be distinguished and raised.

The third deliverance is the Lord's call going out as accommodated revelation. When the natural is ready to hear, the Lord shows his image — he reveals himself in a form the rational can see — and what had been held in the self's hand is drawn out by the very showing. The soul is summoned to recognize, and in being summoned, releases what it had been clutching.

The fourth deliverance is divine truth shining forth as illumining wisdom. The Lord reveals himself within the whole circuit of the natural mind; he shows his image standing before the discrete degrees so that each degree may receive him without collapse. He chooses out the light that belongs to the upper place and sets it where it belongs. He establishes the archetype, takes a likeness the rational can bear, accommodates himself even into the natural body and the lands and heights of the soul's outermost — and from that lowest place he raises once again the immeasurable light through the whole structure that has been built. He establishes the divine summons going forth and the soul's hearing rising to meet it; he forms the inner image being born within the rational; and having done this, he ascends and rests in the inmost state where the Lord dwells.

> The fifth and crowning deliverance is the very movement of summons-and-answering itself: the conjugate motion in which influx descending and reception returning have become one operation. This is the soul's own life now, no longer something done to it from outside, because the call and the hearing have been joined. By this the soul itself is brought up out of what had held it within the Lord's own outgoing — gathered, secretly and surely, into the final form of regeneration. What had been bound by claiming is loosened; what had seemed lost is found to have been preserved; the souls that had fallen before their proper face are seen rising again toward the light, going up to the Lord at the end as they had once come down from the beginning.
> So there is one saving, but it has stages, because the soul cannot receive the whole at once. The Lord meets it as Divine Human first, as operative power second, as accommodated call third, as illumining wisdom fourth, and finally as the joined movement of his own summons with the soul's answering — and at each stage what could not be received before is now received, and what was held in the self's hand is delivered up into recognition.

Section 3

I Am Come Into My Garden

After the long seeking through doctrine, the soul passes through and finds what it has been seeking — and finds it in the inmost. What is given here is exactly that inmost: what Greatness is, and why the title Father belongs to the Lord wherever he stands as source; the First Father in his fivefold articulation, with the procession of light, fragrance, voice, greatness, and revelation that issues from him; the Land of Light, the inmost country where everything lives by him alone, with no mingling, no falsity, no death; and the eternity of what is given, which stands from before any beginning the soul can name, set against what is claimed by the self, whose end is fixed within itself. The brevity is accuracy: the inmost cannot be elaborated; it can only be entered. The section is short because the conjunction itself is — and the next state will undo this first reception so that a deeper one may be made.

The four teachings move from the threshold inward. The first names the door: Greatness as the bearing-realm, Father as the title given wherever the Lord stands as foundation. The second enters: the First Father in his five members and twelve registers, the inmost articulated unity. The third looks around at what is in this country: the Land of Light, where there is no mingling, no falsity, no death — the soul received as gift recognizes itself for what it is. The fourth names the temporal character of what is found: eternity, that which stands from before eternity, set against the bounded ending of what is claimed by the self. This is the first conjunction in the cycle. It is brief because brevity is the truth of it: what the soul has just touched is precisely what cannot be possessed. The role here is a local culmination — a real peak that opens into the next section's deeper work — not the book's ultimate consummation, which belongs to the close.

The Father in His Greatness

Foundation

The threshold of the inmost. T19 explains why the title "Father" is given at every register where the Lord stands as source: Greatness names the bearing-realm itself, and Father is the standing-one beneath all that stands. The Lord wears the name Father wherever he is foundation — at the inmost, in his calling, in his shining, in the lifting of the natural toward the spiritual. T20 enters: the First Father in his five members of light without measure, his twelve registers of wisdom, with the procession of light, fragrance, voice, greatness, and revelation that goes forth from him into all the states of the soul's formation.

The Father indeed is the first who stands fast — he whom they call 'the Father of the Greatness.' The Greatness is the Great Land — this one who dwells, being established in him, ⌈namely is⌉ the substance of the Light which bears up under all the gods the rich ones, with the angels and the dwelling-places ⌈those rooted, being⌉ established unto fullness.

⌈Once again they call⌉ the Third Ambassador, saying: ⌈'Father, his Greatness'⌉ is the Vessel of Light of the Living Fire, ⌈the rooted one within him⌉, being established beneath him. ⌈Once again, Jesus⌉ the Radiance, they call ⌈him⌉ 'Father' likewise: his ⌈Greatness⌉ is the beautiful abode of the counsels — the rooted one ⌈They⌉ also call the Pillar of Glory: 'Father, his Greatness' ⌈Namely they are⌉ the five gods of ⌈glory⌉, the holy ones, those ⌈who are rooted⌉ ⌈rooted, being established⌉ beneath them, they ⌈call them⌉.

SPIRITUAL READING

The soul asks why the Lord in his inmost is called Greatness, and why the title Father belongs to him there. The answer is that Greatness names the inmost ground itself — the abiding land within which everything that lives in the soul has its dwelling. There the Lord stands first and stands fast; he is called Father because he is the standing one beneath all that stands, the foundation in whom the substance of received truth bears up the whole company of higher loves and ordered affections and interior dwellings, established in fullness.

But the title Father is not given only at the inmost. Wherever the Lord goes forth and becomes, at his own register, the foundation upon which a lower order rests, he is called Father there as well. When his call goes out to summon the rational, that calling is itself a Father, for it carries the living fire of love down into a vessel where wisdom can be received, and what stands beneath that calling rests upon it as upon a parent. When the Lord shines forth as illumining wisdom, he too is named Father, for the beautiful abiding of all right counsel is rooted in him, and what hangs beneath hangs from his light. And when the natural is raised into conjunction with the spiritual — when regeneration itself takes structural form as a way upward — that ascent is likewise named Father, because the ordered powers of the soul that move within it stand on it as their ground.

So the one Lord wears the name Father at each register where he becomes foundation: in his inmost as the unmeasurable source, in his calling as the bearer of the living fire, in his shining as the rooted abode of wisdom, in his lifting as the standing way of return. Wherever he stands first and others stand beneath him, he is called Father, because every lower order in the soul lives by leaning upon what the Lord is, just there, for it.

SPIRITUAL READING

When the soul finally hears, light is poured into it, and it recognizes what is being given. What it recognizes, in that moment, is the Lord himself — divine love at its source, before any accommodation, immeasurable, with no scale or measure that the rational can lay against him.

This Lord, in himself, stands articulated. He is one, and yet his oneness unfolds in degrees that the soul can begin to make out as it is illumined. There is the rational at its highest — mind, and thought, and teaching, and counsel, and reflection: one understanding in five distinct operations, each complete and without measure because it is held in him. And there is the wider circuit by which his outgoing is recognized: twelve registers of wisdom, each one a state in which he can be received. And within each of these the same fivefold completeness is found again, so that wherever the soul looks at him, his fullness is whole.

From him there proceeds what the soul receives. First, light: wisdom itself gushing forth from him in a single undivided stream that fills every state through which the soul passes. Second, the fragrance of his good — the diffused presence of divine love, sensed before it is grasped, spreading through every state of the soul's formation. Third, his beautiful voice — the summons by which truth makes itself heard, going out through all the soul's states. Fourth, his greatness in another register, gushing forth and going forth from him; and a fifth, by which what was hidden is brought into view and revealed.

These are not many things; they are the one Lord in the registers at which he can be received. They go forth and they impress themselves into the states of the soul, sealing them with what is his. They nourish what is alive in the rational. What they touch becomes new — gushing forth fresh from the source — and the soul, receiving them, is enriched, ordered, set into its proper arrangement, and made to live, and to go on living, without end.

APPARATUS

[1] l. 4 ⲛ̄ⲧⲉ — “Of”; editor; Editor restoration of genitive linker

[3] l. 14 ⲛ̄ⲑⲓ ⲧⲉ — “namely is”; pipeline restoration, confidence: low; Apposition marker introducing the feminine subject ⲧⲟⲩⲥⲓⲁ after 'established in him' — 'namely the substance of the light bears up...'; ~5–6 chars fits the slot.

[4] l. 16 ⲛⲉⲧϩⲟⲩⲏⲥ ⲉⲩ — “those rooted, being”; pipeline restoration, confidence: high; Plural form of the iterated formula ⲡⲉⲧϩⲟⲩⲏⲥ ⲉϥⲥⲙⲁⲛⲧ ('rooted, being established'), referring back to the rich, the angels, and the dwelling-places. 11 chars matches the slot exactly.

[5] l. 17 ⲧⲧⲁⲗⲓⲛ ⲁⲛ ⲱⲁⲩⲙ — “Once again they call”; editor; Editor restoration; standard formula opening parallel theological item, ⲱⲁⲩⲙⲟⲩⲧⲉ 'they call'

[6] l. 18 ⲓ̈ⲱⲧ ⲧⲉϩⲙⲛⲧⲛⲁⲟ — “'Father, his Greatness'”; editor; Editor restoration paralleling the structure of lines 28-30 for the first Father

[7] l. 19 ⲡⲉⲧϩⲟⲩⲏⲥ ⲛ̄ⲏⲧϥ — “the rooted one within him”; editor; Editor restoration; ⲡⲉⲧϩⲟⲩⲏⲥ recurs in line 3 and line 10 in the same formula 'rooted in X, established beneath X.'

[14] l. 24 ⲛⲉ ⲛ̄ⲑⲓ — “Namely they are”; pipeline restoration, confidence: low; Plural copula 'are, namely' introducing the plural subject ⲡⲧⲟⲩ ⲛ̄ⲛⲟⲩⲧⲉ ('the five gods'); follows the appositional pattern of 'his Greatness is X' for Pillar of Glory. 5–6 chars.

[15] l. 24 ⲡⲉⲁⲩ — “glory”; pipeline restoration, confidence: low; 'Five gods of glory' — the Pillar of Glory's descriptor names the Five Sons (the rational in five degrees) under the register of glory; ⲡⲉⲁⲩ recurs as the Pillar's defining attribute. 4 chars (close to estimated 5).

[19] l. 25 ⲱⲁⲩⲙⲟⲩⲧⲉ ⲁⲣⲁⲩ — “call them”; pipeline restoration, confidence: moderate; Closing 'they call them' formula matching the partial trace -ⲩⲉ within ⲙⲟⲩⲧⲉ; 12 chars matches estimate exactly. Subject ⲛ̄ⲧⲁⲩ ('they') sets up the verb of attribution that has structured the whole passage.

[20] l. 17 ϩⲛ̄ ⲛⲉϩ — “in”; pipeline restoration, confidence: low; Locative 'in the' joining the visible ⲁⲓⲱⲛ ⲧⲏⲣⲟⲩ 'all the aeons' — the gushing forth fills 'all the aeons.' ~6-7 chars.

[22] l. 18 ⲡⲓⲱⲧ ⲡⲥⲙⲁⲙⲉ — “Blessed Father”; pipeline restoration, confidence: low; 'Fragrance of the Blessed Father' — parallel to 1214 'of the Blessed One' (ⲡⲥⲙⲁⲙⲉ); the second emanation is the Father's diffusing good. ~12 chars.

[24] l. 20 ⲧⲙⲛⲧⲛⲁⲟ̄ — “the Greatness”; pipeline restoration, confidence: low; Voice 'of the Greatness' — the third emanation is the divine summons (ⲡⲥⲱⲧⲙⲉ/ⲡⲥⲁⲭⲛⲉ in lexicon as 'Great Counsel'); ⲙⲛⲧⲛⲁⲟ̄ is the most parallel filler. ~7-8 chars.

[25] l. 21 ⲱ — “spreading through”; pipeline restoration, confidence: low; Single letter ending some verb (probably ⲡⲏⲱⲉ 'spread' parallel to 1219 ⲛⲱⲁⲱⲉ); 1 char.

[26] l. 23 ⲃⲉ — “which”; editor; Editor restoration of the verb-stem ⲃⲉⲃⲉ 'to gush forth'; only the doubled syllable is preserved.

[34] l. 32 ⲥⲁⲧⲙⲉ — “hear”; pipeline restoration, confidence: low; Verb 'they hear' fits the local sense ('when they hear and become rich'); recalls 1206 'those who shall hear him.' 5 chars.

[37] l. 35 ⲛⲥⲉ — “and they live”; pipeline restoration, confidence: low; Connective 'and they' continuing 'they live unto eternity' from 1234. ~2 chars.

The Land of Light and the Eternity Within

Elaboration

Inside the sealed garden. T21 — the inmost country where everything that lives, lives from him; no falsity can enter because nothing here has been claimed; no death can enter because nothing here is cut off from the source; the living medicine, the ambrosia that is itself alive, the gifts of the Greatness received as gifts and so remaining forever. T22 — the eternity of what the Lord gives, which stands from before any beginning the soul can name: what is received is older than the rational that hears it, the good is older than the love that is warmed by it; contrasted with the natural-as-claimed whose end is fixed within itself. The sealed garden has been entered. The Beloved is in his garden. State 4 will now begin.

SPIRITUAL READING

There is, within the soul, an inmost state where the Lord himself dwells, and this state has its own land — a ground where nothing grows except what the Lord has given. The teaching turns the soul toward this inmost place and describes what is found there when it is found.

In that great country of the Lord's own, everything that lives, lives from him. There is no other source. What stands there stands because it has been summoned and has come forth from the Father; nothing in that place claims itself. The forms there are beautiful because they are exactly what love and wisdom shape when nothing has been added by the soul's own claiming. Every member of the body that exists in that land is fair, because each part is the outermost of an interior received without distortion.

What sustains the soul there is a living medicine, an ambrosia that is itself alive — truth in the form of love, given continually, healing whatever it touches. Where in lower states what is the Lord's and what the soul has claimed are mingled and confused, here there is no mingling: only what is given, only what is recognized as given. The image that takes shape under such reception is the soul's true face, and that face is turned toward the Lord because it is held by him.

In this land there is no falsity and no death. Falsity cannot enter because nothing here has been claimed as one's own; death cannot enter because nothing here is cut off from the source of life. The trees of perception that grow there bear only what the Lord causes them to bear; the springs that gush forth bring up only what has descended from above. Everything that issues forth in that land is what the truth itself causes to issue, and nothing else.

All who are gathered there dwell established in him. They are not held in place by their own will or by any structure of their own building; they stand in him, and his standing is their standing. Their life is the life of all who are rich because they have ceased to claim — the life of those who were summoned and came when called, having received themselves from the Father rather than asserting themselves against him.

This is the fullness, the great light, the living medicine itself: the inmost where the gifts of the Greatness are received as gifts and so remain forever. He who knows this state knows what the soul is for, and what regeneration is bringing the soul toward.

SPIRITUAL READING

What the soul receives from the Lord is not made in the moment of its giving. It stands already, from before any beginning the soul can name, in the inmost stillness where the Lord holds his own. There is no register of time deep enough to reach back behind it; before eternity it was, and it does not pass.

This is why the soul, when it is truly receiving, recognizes what flows through it as something not produced by its own striving. The truth that comes is older than the rational that hears it. The good that warms is older than the love that is warmed by it. They were already, in the Lord, before the soul was awakened to be their vessel.

Such things cannot be brought forth at will. No power in the soul can disclose them on its own — no act of the natural mind, no exertion of self, can pull aside the veil of the inmost and put on display what is held there. They are revealed only when the Lord himself unfolds them, in the order and the moment he keeps. Until then they remain hidden, intact, undiminished, in the storehouses that no claiming hand reaches.

So they exist, and exist in this manner: into eternity, without ending, in their own stillness, each in its proper place and each in conjunction with the others, fitted to one another in the order the Lord has given. They neither wear out, nor are they exhausted by being given. The giving does not lessen the source.

Set against this, the land of death — the natural turned in on itself, the self with all its claimed forms — has its end. What the soul has appropriated as its own work is not eternal; it is a substance whose nature carries its own term within it. It nourishes nothing past the moment of its grasping. It cannot follow the soul into stillness. Its end is fixed in it from the beginning, even where it pretends to permanence.

Thus the soul learns to distinguish: what stands from before eternity, and what has its end already prepared. To receive the first is to enter the stillness that does not pass. To cling to the second is to remain with what is going down. And the recognition itself — the seeing of which is which — is the Lord's own light shining in the rational, drawing the soul toward what cannot end and loosening it from what must.

(Much of the chapter survives only in fragments; the surviving phrases turn together upon this single teaching about the eternity of what is given and the ending of what is claimed.)

[3] l. 18 geringe Spuren (slight traces only)

[4] l. 20 ⲡ; pipeline restoration, confidence: high; The Coptic text shows {22}ⲣⲟⲥⲱⲡⲟⲛ; the only word completion is ⲡⲣⲟⲥⲱⲡⲟⲛ, so the missing initial letter is ⲡ (the definite article + word).

[5] l. 21 ⲁⲁⲧ; pipeline restoration, confidence: high; ⲡⲧⲥⲙⲁⲙ{26} completes to ⲡⲉⲧⲥⲙⲁⲙⲁⲁⲧ ('the blessed [one]'), the standard Lycopolitan qualitative form. The English context 'of the bless-' confirms this.

[6] l. 22 ⲧ; pipeline restoration, confidence: high; {29}ⲁⲙⲃⲣⲟⲥⲓⲁ ϵⲧⲁⲛⲯ̄ — feminine 'living ambrosia' (qualitative ϵⲧⲁⲛⲯ̄ agrees feminine), so ⲧⲁⲙⲃⲣⲟⲥⲓⲁ. The missing letter is the feminine article ⲧ.

[7] l. 24 ϩ; pipeline restoration, confidence: high; ϵⲧⲁⲛ{34} ϩⲱⲩ ϵⲧⲁⲛⲯ̄ — clearly ϵⲧⲁⲛϩ ('living') in qualitative; the missing letter completes the word: ϩ.

[8] l. 27 ϩⲛ̄; pipeline restoration, confidence: high; The construction 'ϵⲧⲫ̄ⲱⲟⲟⲡ {41} ⲡⲧⲕⲁϩ ⲙⲡⲟⲩⲁⲓⲛϵ' = 'which exists in the Land of Light'; the preposition ϩⲛ̄ ('in') is required by Coptic grammar before a place-noun with article.

[9] l. 28 ⲡⲱ; pipeline restoration, confidence: high; {42}ⲛϩ — completes to ⲡⲱⲛϩ 'life'. The English context 'their life' and the lexicon's positive register (living/conjoined with the Lord) confirm.

[10] l. 33 ⲛ; pipeline restoration, confidence: high; ⲛⲛ {53}ϫⲱⲗ — preceded by negation ⲛⲛ; the standard 'no falsehood' has the noun ⲡϫⲱⲗ ('the falsehood') with definite article. The missing letter is the article ⲡ.

[11] l. 33 ⲡⲕϵⲕϵ — “darkness”; pipeline restoration, confidence: moderate; 'neither death nor X' — the lexicon's structural pair to ⲡⲙⲟⲩ ('death') in the Land of Light context is ⲡⲕϵⲕϵ ('darkness'). The teaching states the inmost has no falsity, no death, no darkness.

[15] l. 45 ⲟⲩⲱⲛⲟⲩ; pipeline restoration, confidence: moderate; ⲡⲉⲧⲛⲁⲥ{76} = 'the one who will X'; the English partial 'will kn-' suggests ⲥⲟⲩⲱⲛ ('know'); with the plural object suffix 'them' (referring to Coptic ⲛⲉⲓⲉⲧⲥ 'his ...s'), the form is ⲡⲉⲧⲛⲁⲥⲟⲩⲱⲛⲟⲩ.

[16] l. 7 ⲛ̄ⲧⲉⲉⲓ — “them”; pipeline restoration, confidence: low; -ϩⲉ ending plus following ϵⲧⲁⲓ̈ⲭⲟⲟⲥ 'that I have said' best fits the demonstrative formula ⲛ̄ⲧⲉⲉⲓϩⲉ 'in this way'.

[17] l. 7 ⲁⲩ — "them"; pipeline restoration, confidence: low; ⲁⲣ- prefix with pronominal suffix; ⲁⲣⲁⲩ 'to them' fits a teaching whose plural subject (the things that exist eternally) is the topic of the surrounding lines.

[18] l. 8 ⲡⲁϊ; pipeline restoration, confidence: moderate; Cleft predicate '{X} ⲡⲉ ⲡⲧⲕⲁϩ' = '{X} is the land of...'; demonstrative ⲡⲁϊ ⲡⲉ is the natural pattern.

[19] l. 8 ⲡⲟⲩⲁⲓⲛⲉ; pipeline restoration, confidence: high; The teaching's central contrast is ⲡⲕⲁϩ ⲙ̄ⲡⲟⲩⲁⲓⲛⲉ 'the land of light' set against ⲡⲕⲁⲍ ⲙ̄ⲡⲙⲟⲩ 'the land of death' explicitly named in §1297; the formulaic pair is corpus-fixed.

[22] l. 15 ⲙⲩⲥⲧⲏⲣⲓⲟⲛ; pipeline restoration, confidence: moderate; 9-char count fits exactly; the relative ⲉⲛⲧⲉ ⲟ̄ⲱⲗⲡ ⲁⲃⲁⲗ ⲛ̄ 'that are not to be revealed' is corpus language for the hidden mysteries the Lord keeps until he himself unfolds them.

My Beloved Withdrew Himself

This is the alternation: the Lord, having entered the inmost, withdraws so that the soul may discover what the first conjunction could not yet reach. The structures that guided the seeking now wound; the veil of external truth is stripped; the soul is left in longing — and from that longing the deeper seeking begins. The work that follows is the longest in the corpus, and it narrates that deeper work in its full architecture. It opens with the self-claim's auto-genesis — Hyle as Enthumesis of Death generating from herself — and the measured times that bound the natural. It lays out the parallel emanations of light and the riddle of the self-claim's five-formed body; the twelve judges and twelve thrones of the Lord's discrimination; the three garments of the Living Spirit and the descent through the soul's members; the seven, the five, and the four works performed within the captive body; the mirror wheel and the nested zones; the cosmic body, the forming of Adam, and the soul bound in the twelve members; the three days, the two deaths, the three plagues; the three malformations and their cleansing through descent and ascent; and the four ages, the five wheels, the three wells through which what was deeply held is at last brought up. The whole is the wound and what the wound makes possible.

The teachings unfold the deeper work that the first conjunction has exposed. The arc moves from cause through anatomy through operation through resolution. First the cause: Hyle's self-molding — the self-claim has organized everything that the first reception did not reach — and the measured times that bound the natural. Then the anatomy: the parallel emanations one beside another, the self-claim's five-formed body, the twelve judges and thrones by which discrimination strikes. Then the operation: the Living Spirit's three garments, the soul's twelvefold binding and the New Man's exchange, the seven works of building, the five works set within the self-claim's body, and the four works of the Ambassador's revealing. The teachings then deepen into the cosmic body: the mirror wheel, the nested zones, the natural mind shaped as one anthropomorphic captive body, Adam formed from the Watchers' residue, the soul bound and exchanged member by member. The temporal weight is brought next — three Great Days, two Deaths, the three afflictions by which what the self has claimed is undone — followed by the central operation of cleansing: three malformations cleansed by descent-and-ascent, the Father's pre-prepared containments. The closing teachings give the structural completions — what the Lord prepares beforehand, the four registers and turning wheel, the three conduits by which influx descends and life ascends. The section's length is its accuracy: the alternation is where most of regeneration happens, and the corpus knows this exactly.

Matter Begetting From Herself

Foundation

The cause of withdrawal. The first conjunction has revealed what it could not reach — the self organizing the natural mind from itself, claiming no other source. T23 narrates Hyle as Enthumesis of Death generating from herself the corrupt cosmos: foul forms, the dark counter-pentad, trees, fruits, all in mutual hatred, gathered into the chief shape of self-claiming as the wellspring of all lower particular self-loves. T24 sets the contrast in time: every measure of the natural is bounded — grains, clusters, firmaments, winds, rivers, ages — while the Lord's inmost has no measure. The soul is now seeing what State 3 could not yet show: the deeper captivity is real, and its depth is structural.

SPIRITUAL READING

There are conditions in the soul which seem to have always been there. The soul has no power of its own to say how they exist or by what they exist, since there is in truth no other source than the Lord; yet the soul's self-claiming speaks as though it were itself the source, and from the moment this claiming rose up against what was given, what is the Lord's became mingled with what the soul has appropriated, life with death — and the question how this contest came to be is the question every soul faces when it begins to look at itself.

The self, taken in itself, dwells in its own ground alone. It brings forth from its own substance; it reckons by itself; it sets the whole of what is darkened in the soul into its own depth. And out of that depth it produces. The natural mind in five aspects under self-love — thought blackened to smoke, will turned to consuming fire, perception driven as a storm, natural truths gone bitter as salt water, and the absence of received truth — these are what it grows in itself; these are the elements out of which it raises its own perceptions, like trees standing fast in their own ground. It molds itself alone. It begets itself alone. It brings forth many forms, none in the likeness of one another, and the storehouses of its depth are filled with destroyers and twisted natural-mind shapes coiled in on themselves, foul forms of those who dwell in darkness — productions that kill one another and spread out one against another, because none of them recognizes any source but itself. They are not living offspring. They are abortions of the self, what the soul brings forth from itself which cannot live.

But at the very time when the self brought forth, those productions fell away from her and were taken up as garments by other arrangements of self-love; they fell to the natural ground and drew their power from the elements of the natural mind, were nourished within them, and thus the self's manifold cravings — its evil and its concupiscence — gathered themselves into the chief shape of the soul's self-claiming, the wellspring of all its lower particular self-loves. Under this organizing the soul's worlds and powers are gathered together to stand ready for strife, to make war against the Land of Light and against the great King who dwells in it: the self asserting itself as if it could prevail against what is the Lord's.

But the Lord himself, the Father at the register where life proceeds, does not contend after the self's manner. At that very time the Divine Human goes forth in his garments — the principles of the Lord at his luminous registers — to speak with the Lord's own going-forth, that there be given into their hands a covering, that the Lord be revealed to them, that every work of regeneration be taught, that the soul be clothed in what the Lord gives, that one degree be set upon another in their proper order. So is the self's productivity — vast, claimed, without measure to itself — met by the Lord's own coming, who sends the Divine Humanity forth into the height of the natural mind with all his operative powers, against a self-claiming which had imagined itself unmeasured.

SPIRITUAL READING

Everything that comes to be in the soul comes to be in measure. The grains of the field, the clusters on the vine, the bounds of the firmaments, the four winds and the three rivers that surround the natural mind — every such thing has its number and its season. The whole field of the rational, taken together, has the power to count out its own measures and to know the year of its growth. Only the Lord himself, in his inmost, has no measure: there the Father stands without time and without limit, and what proceeds from him cannot be likened to anything that follows after.

When the moment came for life to be borne into the soul, the Lord summoned the principle of life-bearing forth from his own inmost. She had stood within his hidden storehouses in stillness and in silence, and at the time when she was needed she came forth from the Father and looked upon all the states of light that were to be hers. From that moment a great time began — a time appointed and counted, the long descent by which life enters the contest. The Divine Human, going forth, stood fast in his appointed place a long while, fixed as if in death; for the natural was not yet ready, and the soul had to wait through many revolutions before the path could open. The descent moves through measured ages: from the moment the Divine Human goes down into the natural until the moment a return is made; from the summoning of the rational at its first appearing until the calling forth of its sons that shine; from the placing of life within the height of the Father until her foot reaches the lowest ground of the natural mind. Each is a great period, and not little is the time the soul must endure in each.

When the Lord called forth his operative power together with the Divine Human and the principles of glory that emanate with them, in that very moment he gave form to the ordering principle within the land of light, together with his operative spirit and the strong principles that came forth as his sons. In that same moment he gave form also to the call that goes out to the rational, and to divine truth shining forth, and to divine receivability, and to the path by which the natural ascends into conjunction with the spiritual, and to all the principles that emanate forth against the self. They came in a single moment, one after another, in the time when the work began.

There are four periods to this whole. The first is when the Divine Human descends to the contest and the rational is sent forth against the self's claim. The second is when the structure of the cosmos is built and stands fast: the natural mind is given its frame, the firmaments are set in their order, life is placed upon her ground through one of the hidden states that stand within the veil of light, and the soul takes form as a vessel that thinks itself its own. The third is when the works of this cosmos run their measure to the end and the appointed time comes that they should be undone. The fourth is the loosening, when the cosmos shall be released from the form it took, when all that the self claimed shall be undone, when the great fire of love shall burn through what cannot be raised — and this purification has its own long measure: a thousand four hundred and sixty-eight years it shall consume, and only then shall the work be finished.

In this manner the final gathering shall be depicted. What remains of all the works will be drawn together; what is the Lord's shall be set apart, lifted to its place, and shall reign in the kingdom that was always its own. What the soul had claimed and could not lay off — the disordered natural in its full weight — shall be taken into the place where it is bound, and there it shall be sealed with a bond that holds forever. The self that said "I am, and there is no other" shall lie there with its chain, no longer able to take what is not its own.

The principle of life-bearing meanwhile passes through her own measured stages. Before she comes to her elements there is a great time of standing-fast; before she comes up to the trees of perception there is another long season; in the trees themselves she abides yet another period before bringing forth fruit; and in the bringing-forth of fruit there is no small time. After a long age her five aspects are given their forms and measured out, the fruits fall upon their own ground, and what was sown is nourished — and not little is the time of that nourishing, until the middle is reached and what was hoped for begins to come.

Then the Father shall reveal his face, turning back into his hidden storehouses and summoning forth what he kept reserved there; he shall set each of them on its feet, each in its own degree, and the principles of glory together with all the rich states that emanated forth against the self shall stand in their place. From that moment they will exist forever; they have no time of ending there. Their standing-fast is established forth into the ages without end, and their manifestation runs from generation to generation.

So this is what the soul should know about its own time: that the Lord is without measure, and the soul is in measure; that every state of formation has its season and cannot be hurried; that the descent into the contest, the building of the vessel, the running of its course, and the final loosening are one ordered work; that what is the Lord's shall be gathered up to its kingdom and what was claimed shall be bound away forever; and that the great periods through which the soul must pass — long as they are — are themselves the very form of its regeneration.

[2] l. 28 ⲙ̄ⲙⲉ ⲭⲉ — “to know that”; editor; Editor restoration [ⲙ̄ⲙⲉ ⲭ]ⲉ; standard idiom ⲣⲱⲙⲉ ... ⲉⲧⲣⲉⲫⲙ̄ⲙⲉ ⲭⲉ 'a man to know that'

[6] l. 31 ⲧⲁϩ — “he seized”; editor; Editor restoration [ⲧⲁϩ]ⲕⲱ̄ⲧⲟ̄; verb obscure, possibly ⲧⲱϩⲱ̄ 'summon' or related

[7] l. 32 ⲁϩⲉ — “he”; pipeline restoration, confidence: low; 3-char perfect prefix before ⲉϩⲁⲉⲓ ('came down'); subject is First Man descending as king to the country of the Living Ones. Lyc. perfect ⲁϩ- + epenthetic vowel.

[11] l. 39 ⲛⲧⲁϒ — “they”; pipeline restoration, confidence: moderate; 4-char relative-perfect plural prefix before ϧⲗⲗϧ 'mingled'; subject is the dark powers who mingled Light with Darkness.

[12] l. 40 ⲁϒⲗⲱⲃⲱ̄ ⲙ̄ⲛ̄ ⲡ — “they mingled”; pipeline restoration, confidence: low; 10-char parallel verbal expression to 'they mingled the Light with the Darkness'; ⲗⲱⲃⲱ̄ 'mingle' (lexicon) plus connector ⲙ̄ⲛ̄ 'with'.

[15] l. 43 ⲁⲥⲡⲗⲁⲥⲥⲉ ⲱ̄ — “she molded”; pipeline restoration, confidence: moderate; Verb-subject combination; ⲡⲗⲁⲥⲥⲉ ('mold/form,' from lexicon) is the recurring verb of Hyle's activity (cf. ⲁⲥⲡⲗⲁⲥⲥⲉ ⲙⲙⲁⲥ in {68}). She molded the whole land of Darkness.

[17] l. 45 ⲧ; editor; ⲛϫⲏⲧⲥ = 'in her' with 3sg.f. suffix; the bracketed ⲧ completes the prepositional form

The Lord's Going-Forth, One Beside Another

Parallel Treatment

The Lord's pattern of approach to the soul in withdrawal. T25 — the Lord's outgoing in five, called forth from his five faculties one beside another: from his mind the Beloved of Lights, from his thought the Mother of Life, from his teaching the Beloved, from his counsel the Virgin of Light, from his reflection the fifth. T26 — three likenesses of the Lord going forth to gather what he loves: as Divine Human seeking his own and shining over the two scattered, as Operative Power forging armament in a great furnace and lifting the king's son out of his enemies' hand, as Summoning Call entering the very country where she had been held to make manifest there that she was never the property of what claimed her.

[From] the Father, one beside another. [It is] in this manner: '[I came forth] [namely the Ambassador,] from his mind, the Beloved of the Lights; [from his thought,] the Mother of Life; from his teaching, [. . . .]; the Beloved; from his counsel, the Virgin of Light; [from] from his reflection.' Thus then is the manner in which they were called forth, [namely the Five] Fathers — in this coming they came forth from the Five Members [of the Father;] one came forth from another, and was revealed forth from his lot.

SPIRITUAL READING

The Lord does not go forth toward the soul as one undifferentiated flood. He goes forth in an ordered procession, one principle beside another, each issuing from the inmost in its proper degree, each recognizable as itself, each handing on to the next so that what arrives at the rational arrives as a whole structure and not as a confusion.

From the Lord's own mind there comes the principle by which his love is recognized and returned, the register at which the soul can love him as he is. From the movement of his thought toward the soul comes the life-bearing principle by which the rational is enlivened. From his teaching — the form-giving in him by which doctrine takes shape — comes the principle that the soul receives as beloved instruction. From his counsel — the deliberative ordering by which his action is shaped — comes the pure receivability through which what flows from him can be received without being claimed. And from his reflection — the looking-back of the divine upon itself — comes the last principle, by which what was sent forth is gathered.

This is how the Lord's outgoing operations are called forth: from the five faculties of the inmost, the five great principles come, one issuing from another in succession, each revealed from its own appointed portion. The same fivefold structure that articulates the rational also articulates the divine going-forth that meets it; and because the going-forth is so ordered, the rational that receives it is held in its own degrees, faculty meeting faculty, mind to mind, thought to thought, without collapse and without mingling.

SPIRITUAL READING

The Lord goes forth toward the soul under three distinct aspects, and the teaching gives a likeness for each so that the soul may recognize how each one moves.

The Lord as the Divine Human is like a man of great standing whose own has been taken from him and scattered, and who comes after his property to gather it again. What is his own are the sons who went out from him — the very life of the rational that, in its outgoing, has been dispersed among states not its own. He comes down from the height after them, walks at their feet to seek them out, and when he finds them shines forth in sweetness over the two who had been scattered: the living life of the soul that abides in two powers and keeps the fourth watch. He does not extract them; he comes where they are and recognizes them as his, and by that recognition they are gathered.

The path of ascent — the way by which the natural is raised into conjunction with the spiritual — is like a great furnace within which the Lord's operative power dwells, and like a wise craftsman who adorns and fashions every piece of full armament for the contest. In this vessel the rational is shaped, fitted, and equipped; everything the soul will need to stand in the trials of regeneration is forged here, under the abiding of that operative power.

The Lord's operative power itself is like a warrior who goes to the foot of a king's son who has been bound, and draws him up out of the hand of his enemies. The king's son is the rational in its dignity, held under the grip of self-love's claiming; the warrior does not destroy a foreign captor but lifts what was always royal back into its own standing.

> And the Lord's call going out — the summoning by which the rational is awakened to recognize what flows through it — is like a great man who comes after what is his: his wealth that had been taken, the hand that held what was bound, the powers of light, the sons with their soul. He brings the soul back into the very country where she had been held, not to leave her there, but to make manifest in that very place that she was never the property of what claimed her.
> So the three are one Lord at three registers: the Divine Human who comes after his own, the operative power that forges and lifts, and the accommodated call that summons what has been claimed back into recognition. Each is alike, in that each is the Lord going forth toward the soul; each is distinct, in that each meets the soul at the register the soul is ready to receive.

[4] l. 5 ⲛ̄ⲭⲓ ⲡⲡⲣⲉⲥⲃⲉⲩⲧⲏⲥ — “namely the Ambassador,”; editor; editor's restoration; appositive identifying the speaker

[5] l. 6 ⲁⲃⲁⲗ ⲙ̄ⲡⲉϩⲙⲉⲩⲉ — “from his thought,”; editor; editor's restoration; required by the five-faculty enumeration pattern (mind/thought/teaching/counsel/reflection)

[6] l. 6 title of the entity proceeding from teaching is lost

[7] l. 7 ⲛⲉ ⲁ — “from”; editor; editor's restoration completing ⲡⲟⲩⲁⲓⲛⲉ and supplying ⲁⲃⲁⲗ across line break

[10] l. 7 ⲉ; editor; editor's restoration completing ⲭⲣⲁⲣⲉ 'be scattered'

[13] l. 12 ϯϩⲉ ⲁⲛ ⲧⲉ ⲧⲉⲓ — “So also is the manner in which”; editor; editor's restoration; standard correlative formula introducing the explanation

[14] l. 12 ⲧⲁ — “So also is the manner in which”; editor; editor's restoration; ⲉⲧⲁ- = relative perfect 'which (did)'

[27] l. 25 ϩⲛ ⲛ̄ — “from the”; pipeline restoration, confidence: moderate; 2-character lacuna immediately before ⲟⲓⲭ; ϩⲛ ⲛ̄ⲟⲓⲭ 'from the hand of', exactly as in 1615.

[29] l. 28 ⲁϩⲛ̄ — “He brought”; pipeline restoration, confidence: low; 6-character lacuna immediately before -ⲭⲡⲁⲥ. ⲁϩⲛ̄- 'he brought (her)' (Lyc. perfect of ⲉⲓⲛⲉ) fits the Ambassador's bringing the soul back into the country where she was held captive. Reading uncertain.

The Five Forms of the Self and the Twelve Judges

Elaboration

The watchmen who now wound. T27 anatomizes the self's five-formed body — head as ravenous love, wings as thoughts mounting upward, feet as lower cravings, belly as dark substrate, loins as sense-knowledges in waters — one self-loving formation showing five aspects, hard against any cutting, oscillating between fire and cold. T28 — the twelve registers of the Lord's discrimination, sent forth from the inmost where divine love is hidden, each a different depth of the rational at which the Lord judges what is his and what is claimed. T29 — the eight thrones outside and the corresponding nine thrones within the cosmos at which the Lord is recognized as ruling. The same doctrinal truths that guided in State 2 now strike at this deeper depth.

the archon, the wellspring of all the powers of the Darkness — there are five ⟦forms⟧ existing in his body, according to the ⟦likeness⟧ of the imprint of ⟦the five⟧ kinds of creatures that exist in the five worlds of the Darkness. His head, on the one hand, is in the form of a lion, (a lion) which has come forth from the world of the fire; his wings and his ⟦feathers⟧ are in the form of an eagle, according to the likeness of the sons of the wind; his ⟦hands⟧ and his feet are demons, according to the likeness of the ⟦sons⟧ of the world of the smoke; his belly is in the form of a ⟦a dragon⟧ of the world of the Darkness; his loins are in the form of the likeness of the fish that belongs to the ⟦world of the creatures⟧ of the water; in this manner the forms exist in him: those who came forth from the five ⟦kinds of creatures⟧ of the five worlds of the Darkness. When he wishes, he ⟦walks⟧ on his two feet, of the ⟦creatures⟧ of the world of the ⟦smoke⟧ smoke. Another time when he wishes, he [ca. 18] by his hands and his feet he ⟦moves⟧, in the manner of the creatures of the ⟦fire⟧. When he wishes, he flies in his wings, in the manner of the creatures of the ⟦wind⟧. When he wishes again, he ⟦goes⟧ down to the waters in the manner of the creatures of the water. When he wishes again, he crawls in him, in the manner of the creatures of the ⟦Darkness⟧. These are the manners of forms that exist in him. There are again three other things in him: the ⟦first⟧, that ⟦those who follow him⟧ — these are his beasts; the [ca. 18] the second, that there comes to be a [ca. 22] his myriads. The time when he ⟦wishes⟧, he ⟦calls⟧ upon them; ⟦some⟧ hide themselves from his beasts. ⟦Another time when he wishes,⟧ he manifests himself to them; he makes a destruction and ⸢a slaughter in his⸣ myriads. The word that he sends forth at the time, he ⸢creates within the myriads⸣ in him. The third, that his body is firm, so that all the teeth and tusks of his beasts cannot pierce ⸢him⸣; every body of iron and bronze cannot cut him; ⸢and⸣ they cannot harm him, ⸢because⸣ they fashioned him, they molded him out of the reflection of the single-mindedness of Hyle, the mother of the ⸢demons and⸣ giants.

There are again three other things in him. The time when he ⸢wishes⸣, his fire, the lightning of all his body becomes like a ⸢lamp⸣ of the fire. Another time when he wishes, he sends forth a cold, and all his body becomes cold like ⸢hail⸣ of snow.

The third, that the moment when his beasts stand fast on their feet before him, he searches them out in truth, what is in their heart — until he knows what is in their heart and on their face, insofar as they stand fast before him.

The time when they will withdraw from before him and yield themselves to him, he does not know what is in their heart. There is no life in him at all, but his life is the bile of ⸢wrath⸣ which ⸢flows⸣ from his face. And in his belly there comes to be a [ca. 14] ⸢of prison⸣ which stands fast on his foot before him.

SPIRITUAL READING

When self-love organizes itself within the soul, it does not remain a single simple craving. It takes a body. That body is articulated according to the full structure of the natural mind turned in on itself, so that the self, when it has come into its strength, has within itself five forms at once and can move from one to another at will.

Its head is a strong love grown ravenous — the appetite that wants to consume what it surveys. Its wings are thoughts that mount upward as if to reach the height, the self's mimicry of spiritual ascent. Its feet are the lower cravings that move it along the ground. Its belly is the dark substrate where what has been claimed is digested and held. Its loins are sense-knowledges swimming in their own waters, the natural perceptions out of which it generates further demand. These are not five separate creatures; they are one self-loving formation showing five aspects, and the soul should recognize that whichever face of self-love presents itself at a given moment, the others are present in it also.

Because it holds all five at once, the self can change its mode of operation as the situation requires. When it wishes, it walks on its lower cravings; when it wishes, it flies on its rising thoughts; when it wishes, it goes down into the natural waters and moves among sense-perceptions; when it wishes, it crawls in the dark. The soul that is being deceived by it should not be surprised when the same self-love that yesterday flew today crawls. It is the same body taking another of its forms.

Three further things belong to it. First, it has its beasts — the particular lower affections that follow it as a host. Second, it has its myriads — the gathered multitude of disordered thoughts that come out of it whenever it speaks. Third, its body is hard. The teeth of its own beasts cannot pierce it; no weapon of natural truth, however foundational, can cut it through. This hardness is not a strength of life. It is the hardness of what was molded out of single-minded reflection turned wholly in upon itself — the unyielding density of a self-claiming that admits no other.

Three more things. At one moment the fire of self-love flares through the whole body and it is all flame; at another moment it goes cold as snow, withdrawing every warmth so that nothing reaches it. And when its lower affections present themselves before it, it searches their hearts thoroughly, knows what is in them, knows what stands in their faces, until it has seen the whole of what they bring — though when they turn away from it, what is in their hearts is hidden from it, for it sees only what stands before its claim.

Yet for all this articulation and hardness and intelligence, there is no life in it at all. What it calls its life is the bile that runs from its face — the bitterness of its own claiming, mistaken for vitality. And in its belly is a corruption that stands firm before it, the settled rot at the center of every state self-love has organized.

This is what the soul is contending with when the self has taken its full form: not a simple temptation, but an articulated body that can shift among its modes, that gathers its multitudes, that hardens itself against every natural truth, that flames and freezes by turn, that searches what comes near it — and that has no life of its own at all, only the bile of its claiming and a corruption at the core. Seeing this is the beginning of laying it off.

⌈28⌉ the twelve judges of might, who were sent forth and they came forth from the lofty Greatness to this place, and they were appointed to works, being differing-ones, according to the commandment that the judge who belongs to the Greatness gave into the hand of all the judges. He himself is also the great judge, the one set over all the judges, who exists, who is established in the aeons of the Greatness, who himself is the Father of the Greatness. The first judge is the First Man, the one who humbled ⌈the archons⌉ the archon of the Darkness in the first time; he gave judgment upon him according to a judgment of righteousness; for he was raised up to a kingdom that does not fail. The second judge is the Living Spirit, who came up to the Man, having rendered also a judgment upon all the powers of all the Darkness, those who took the garments of the First Man. The third judge is the Mother of Life, the Great Spirit, ⌈who⌉ adorned and raised up the cosmos which is in the upper region, according to her purpose of heart that ⌈is set⌉ in her hand. She gave judgment to the archons of the upper region, she ⌈nourished them⌉ and stood them on their feet at the place appointed for them. The fourth judge is the great Builder, who built the new aeons of joy, who gave judgment according to a judgment of righteousness, to the storehouse of the Enemy, to set a gushing of water from this moment, to establish a prison of the the Enemy, upon the mingling, also of the building, to establish a throne of the First Man with all the Fathers of Light, those who made the contest with the Evil — they prevailed over him.

in the end again, having gathered himself inward alone, depicting himself by himself, in the Panareias of the end, in separating the Light forth from the Darkness. These are the twelve great mighty judges who were sent forth and came forth from the great Judge — the one who bears up the judges, all of them — who is the hidden Father, the untouchable to him, the one who is set, who is established in the aeons of the Greatness, upon the great Throne of Honor, who is the King of Hon- ⌈who dwells⌉ in his kingship.

SPIRITUAL READING

The Lord's work of sorting the soul — telling what is his from what the soul has claimed — is not a single act but a complete operation articulated in twelve distinct registers. Each register is the Lord himself, judging at a different depth of the rational; each is sent forth from the inmost where divine love is hidden, and each carries the same commandment, given by the one Judge who stands over all and lets the discrimination pass into all the others.

The first register is the Lord as Divine Human, who in the beginning humbles himself, entering the soul's contest and giving the first judgment of righteousness — the standing-up of the rational against the self's claim.

The second register is the Lord as operative power, who comes up to the Divine Human and lays a judgment upon every power of self-love that has taken the garments of the divine humanity for its own — every form of the self that wears as if it were its own what was given.

The third register is the Lord at the principle of life-bearing, who raises up what is in the upper region of the rational, takes into her hand the purpose of heart, and sets the disordered forms of the natural mind on their feet at their proper place — letting them stand in the order they are permitted to take.

The fourth register is the Lord as the great new aeon of joy, by whom righteousness is laid up in the storehouses of the rational. By this judgment the gushing of the natural's living water is set in order, the self is bound in its proper enclosure, and the throne of the divine humanity is established with all the principles of light — those who carried through the contest with evil and prevailed.

The fifth register is the Lord ruling — the great King of Honor, set in the inmost firmament that orders all the others, giving judgment day by day over every form the rational takes and every dominion that arises within it.

The sixth register is the Lord's call going out toward the rational — accommodated revelation manifesting itself, choosing out what is the Lord's own from what the self has claimed, casting down what cannot be raised, driving the destroyed forms back into the lowest state of the natural.

(A register here passes through a damaged passage; the discriminating operation continues through it without breaking the sequence.)

The eighth register is the Lord as divine truth shining forth — Jesus the Radiance, the source from whom every speaker of truth proceeds. After the Lord's call had shown his image, particular forms of the self took the light into themselves and disturbed both the upper and the lower regions; therefore divine truth itself came down to make judgment in the firmaments, separating what stood firm in regeneration from what had collapsed.

The ninth register is the Lord as pure receivability — divine purity, who takes the heart of the soul into her own image, gathers what is hers to herself, and gives judgment in the self's two ascending forms, the moist and the dry, in which self-love organizes itself as if from itself.

The tenth register is the Lord judging in the very medium of thought, who sits in the perceiving air and gives judgment over every form of the human, making a separation between the good and the evil and casting the righteous out from among the sinful — that they may no longer be confused with what they are not.

The eleventh register is the Lord ordering the rational from within — truth itself awakening discrimination in the soul, manifesting in the natural mind, choosing out what is holy, separating the light from the darkness, putting truth forward and laying off what is false.

The twelfth register is the Lord as the great conjugate movement of summons going forth and hearing rising up to meet it — the Call and the Hearing together, set within the very elements of the soul, making the separation between what is good and what has turned bitter, and at the end gathering himself into himself alone, depicting himself by himself, in the final ingathering at the consummation when all that is the Lord's is recognized and brought home.

These twelve are the complete structure of the Lord's discrimination, sent forth from the one Judge who bears up all the others — the hidden Father, untouchable in himself, established in the aeons of Greatness, the great Throne of Honor, who is the King ruling in his own kingship. One Lord, judging the soul at twelve depths, that nothing in the rational may remain unsorted.

SPIRITUAL READING

There are stations established — fixed seats — at which the Lord is recognizable to the soul as he goes forth toward it. Some of these stations stand outside the formed natural mind, in the structure of the divine outgoing itself; others are set within the natural mind as it is being regenerated. The teaching numbers them so that the soul may know at what register it is meeting its Lord at any moment.

The first station is the Lord in his inmost — divine love itself, ruling the whole structure of his outgoing, abiding alone in his own essence and from himself. This station surpasses all the others; every other is an accommodation of this one.

The second is the Lord at the register where life is borne — the receptive matrix in which all that flows out toward this cosmos has its beginning, the principle by which the rational receives life as life.

The third is the Lord as Divine Human, the Father's Established One — the form love and wisdom take going forth into the soul's contest, the principle by which the soul's first and foremost claiming, its primal enmity, is subdued.

The fourth is the Lord at the register where divine love is recognized and returned — the Beloved, honored within the fullness of the divine outgoing, the celestial love that the rational comes to love back.

The fifth is the Lord as divine order — the architect by whom the new state of the regenerated rational is built, by whom dwellings are prepared for those received as the Lord's, and by whom the self and its forms are bound in their proper place so they cannot dissolve what has been built.

The sixth is the Lord's operative power — the strong principle that lifts the divine humanity up out of the contest, casts down what claims to rule, sets the ordered worlds of the rational in place, purifies what is the Lord's, and fetters what is not.

The seventh is the Lord's call going out to the rational — the summons that rules the whole circuit of the natural mind, the Lord of all the counsels by which the soul is moved.

The eighth is divine truth shining forth — the Lord as illumining wisdom, who looses what was bound by claiming and brings the soul home through recognition.

The ninth is the Lord ordering the rational from within — the register at which all the gathered states of received truth come together, into whom everything within the soul that is to be saved out of the natural mind is gathered up.

These are the nine stations as they stand in the divine outgoing itself, outside what has been formed.

Within the formed natural mind there are nine more, set in the structural circuit of the soul. Three of them are carried in one vessel of doctrine: the Lord's call, the operative power at its great register, and the operative power as it lives in the rational. Three more are carried in another vessel: divine truth shining, the Divine Human, and a third (the text grows uncertain here) belonging to the same outgoing of light. The seventh is set in the highest discrete degree of the rational, with the Lord ruling there as truth in supremacy over all the inner orders and giving daily judgment. The eighth is set in the medium of perception, with the Lord seated as the Judge of Truth, who renders judgment to every soul; before him three ways open and divide — one leading to death, one to life, and one to the agreement by which the soul is conjoined. The ninth is established further (the surviving text breaks off before this last station can be named), within the same cosmos under the divine glory.

The teaching is that the Lord is one, but he is recognizable at distinct registers, each established and each holding its proper office. The soul is not meeting different gods when it meets him as life-bearer, as Divine Human, as ordering power, as illumining truth, as judge. It is meeting one Lord seated at the station appropriate to the work being done in it at that moment. To know the stations is to know where one stands in regeneration and which face of the one Lord is presently turned toward the soul.

APPARATUS

[1] l. 5 ⲙ̄ⲡⲕⲉ; pipeline restoration, confidence: high; Completes ⲙ̄ⲡⲕⲉⲕⲉ 'of the Darkness,' continuing the previous clause about 'wellspring of all the powers of the Darkness.'

[2] l. 5 ⲟⲩ ⲛ̄ⲉⲓⲛⲉ — “forms”; pipeline restoration, confidence: high; ϯⲟⲩ ⲛ̄ⲉⲓⲛⲉ 'five forms/likenesses' — directly mirrors the chapter title (ⲡϯⲟⲩ ⲛ̄ⲉⲓⲛⲉ ⲉⲧⲱⲟⲟⲡ).

[3] l. 6 ⲡⲉⲓⲛⲉ — “likeness”; pipeline restoration, confidence: high; ⲕⲁⲧⲁ ⲡⲉⲓⲛⲉ ⲙ̄ⲡⲧⲁⲃⲉϩ 'according to the form of the imprint' — ⲡⲉⲓⲛⲉ 'likeness/form' is the standard correlative noun after ⲕⲁⲧⲁ.

[4] l. 6 ⲛ̄ϯⲟⲩ — “the five”; pipeline restoration, confidence: high; ⲡⲧⲁⲃⲉϩ ⲛ̄ϯⲟⲩ ⲛ̄ⲥⲱⲱⲛⲧ 'the imprint of the five kinds of creatures' — paralleling ⲡϯⲟⲩ ⲛ̄ⲕⲟⲥⲙⲟⲥ that follows.

[5] l. 7 ⲛ̄ⲕⲟ; pipeline restoration, confidence: high; Completes ⲛ̄ⲕⲟⲥⲙⲟⲥ 'worlds' — standard ϯⲟⲩ ⲛ̄ⲕⲟⲥⲙⲟⲥ ⲛ̄ⲧⲉ ⲡⲕⲉⲕⲉ 'five worlds of the Darkness.'

[6] l. 8 ⲉⲧⲁ; pipeline restoration, confidence: high; Relative perfect prefix 'that has' completing 'a lion that has come forth from the world of fire.'

[8] l. 9 ⲧⲏⲡ — “feathers”; pipeline restoration, confidence: low; After 'his wings and his —', the second member completing the eagle imagery; ⲧⲏⲡ 'feathers/plumage' fits the bird body and the line begins with the noun stem after 'ⲛⲉϩ-' on the previous line.

[9] l. 10 ⲛⲉϩⲟ̄ⲓⲝ — “hands”; pipeline restoration, confidence: high; 'Hands and feet' formula confirmed by §1639 ⲛⲉϩⲟ̄ⲓⲝ ⲙⲛ ⲛⲉϩⲟⲩⲣⲏⲧⲉ; demons correspond to the smoke-world.

[10] l. 10 ⲛ; pipeline restoration, confidence: high; Initial ⲛ of ⲛⲉϩⲟⲩⲣⲏⲧⲉ 'his feet' — pure morphology.

[26] l. 18 ⲙⲁⲍⲉ — “moves”; pipeline restoration, confidence: low; Verb of motion paired with 'hands and feet' in the manner of fire-world creatures (quadruped); ⲙⲁⲍⲉ 'walks/moves' fits 4 chars.

[37] l. 24 ⲡⲉⲧⲟⲩⲏⲍ ⲛ̄ⲥⲁⲩ — “those who follow him”; pipeline restoration, confidence: low; Reading specifies 'beasts—the lower affections that follow it as a host'; ⲡⲉⲧⲟⲩⲏⲍ ⲛ̄ⲥⲁⲩ 'those who follow him' fits ~12 chars and the predication 'these are his beasts.'

[40] l. 27 ⲡⲥⲁⲡ ⲁⲛ ⲉⲧⲉⲍⲛⲉϩ — “Another time when he wishes,”; editor; Editor restoration; the formulaic 'another time when he wishes' opens each new sub-clause (cf. lines 5, 23, 25).

[42] l. 29 ⲡ̄ ⲍⲙⲙⲁⲣⲓⲁ — “creates within the myriads”; editor; Editor restoration; ⲱⲁϩⲡ̄ 'he creates' + ⲍⲙ̄- 'in' + ⲙⲁⲣⲓⲁ (the same lexeme as in line 14).

[43] l. 30 ⲉ ⲛ̄; pipeline restoration, confidence: high; Completes ⲍⲱⲥⲧⲉ 'so that' introducing the consequence clause about beasts being unable to pierce him.

[50] l. 36 ⲉⲍⲛⲉϩ ⲱⲁ — “wishes”; editor; Editor restoration; the formula 'the time when he wishes' (cf. line 5).

[51] l. 37 ⲗⲁⲙⲡⲉ — “lamp”; pipeline restoration, confidence: low; 5-char gap; 'lightning of all his body becomes like a [X] of fire' — ⲗⲁⲙⲡⲉ 'lamp/flame' is a natural simile for the body becoming all flame, as the reading describes.

[62] l. 50 ⲛⲱ — “of prison”; editor; editor's tentative restoration (marked '?'): ⲛ̄ⲱⲧⲉⲕⲟ 'the prison'

[63] l. 17 ⲧⲥⲁ; editor; ⲧⲥⲁⲓⲟ 'adorn, beautify' fits maternal cosmogonic action

[64] l. 17 ⲙ̄ⲡⲕ; editor; completes ⲙ̄ⲡⲕⲟⲥⲙⲟⲥ 'the cosmos'

[70] l. 39 ⲛ̄ⲍⲟⲟⲩ — “days”; pipeline restoration, confidence: low; ⲛⲁⲛⲉⲧⲱⲣⲡ ⲛ̄ⲍⲟⲟⲩ 'as those of former days' — but speculative, 7-char idiom for 'former times'.

[71] l. 40 ⲩⲭⲉ ⲙⲙⲁⲩ ⲁⲃⲁⲗ; editor; Editor restoration; ⲛⲟⲩⲭⲉ ⲁⲃⲁⲗ standard idiom for casting out, fits ⲁⲡⲱⲓⲭϩ 'to the abyss' in next line

[81] l. 46 ⲥ — “down”; pipeline restoration, confidence: low; 1-char fill after ⲁ; possibly ⲁⲥⲣⲏⲓ̈ continuing onto next line's break.

[104] l. 75 ⲡⲉⲧⲟⲩⲏⲏ — “who dwells”; pipeline restoration, confidence: low; Partial trace ⲥ; '[who dwells/sits] in his kingship' — restating King of Honor's enthronement; 16-char fit.

The Three Garments and the Descent Into the Members

Elaboration

How the Lord enters at the deeper depth. T30 — the Living Spirit's three accommodations: he clothes himself in wind, fire, water (thought, love, natural truth) to subject the works of darkness above and below, then strips the garments off so the captive material may be purified and conveyed upward through the Zone to the Upper Place. T31 — how the Call descends through every degree of the soul: the First Man as head, the five faculties as limbs, the Living Soul as members hung from him, going forth after the soul-life that has slackened and scattered, voices sinking down into the soul to draw what was defiled back into its place — into the very image of the Father from whom it came.

the time when the Living Spirit came, he took the three garments — that of the wind, that of the fire, and that of the water — and he wore them. From ⸢a single likeness⸣, he [. . . . . .] within them, in those three garments, ⸢and⸣ he set on their feet all the works of this cosmos, those above and those below, and he subjected them in the ⸢garments⸣. He revealed; afterward he ⸢took (away)⸣ forth the works ⸢of the earth⸣. The wind, he stripped him bare from them, from the midst forth, from the righteous.

When then he had cast out, scattering them he scattered him there, that they might be purified, and he gathered them, he [. . . .] within them, fixed in this manner through the three garments those — from the lower place, the limits of the Zone, while wearing the whole of it, ⸢having come⸣ upward ⸢from them⸣, unto the upper place ⸢there⸣ upward [. . . . . .] above them ...are released, of the Zone, from that place, in her ⲥⲁⲕⲡⲟ and they place her downward there, and they convey her upward to the Height which is in the upper place — that to which they sent her forth from him in their ⲍⲟⲩⲗⲧⲉ.

SPIRITUAL READING

When the Lord comes to act upon the natural mind as operative power, he does not enter it bare. He clothes himself in three accommodations — in thought, in love, and in truth at the natural degree — and works through these as through garments fitted to the rational. Wearing them, he reaches into the substrate the self has been forming and lays his hand on every work that has been thrown up there. What had exalted itself above and what had sunk below he brings together under one ordering and subordinates them; the disordered productions of self-love are set, by his operation in these three vehicles, beneath their proper measure.

Then, the work being done, the garments are stripped from him. The accommodations were never the Lord himself; they were the form he took to operate at that degree, and once they have served he lays them off from the midst of what has been ordered, leaving the rational standing upright in what is righteous within it.

Then comes the scattering. What had been claimed and gathered into the self's mass is broken up and dispersed — not destroyed, but loosened from its claim — so that what is the Lord's within it may be purified and what is not may fall away. He fixes what is purified within those three accommodated registers, holding it firm at the lower bound, at the limits of the natural's whole circuit, still wearing the form by which he reaches that depth.

And then the upward motion: what has been purified is raised, conveyed up through the degrees toward the upper place, returning to that height from which the operative power had first been sent forth. This is the whole circuit — the Lord coming down clothed, ordering the natural through accommodated form, stripping the form when its work is done, scattering what was claimed for purification, and bearing what is purified upward into conjunction with the source from which the descent began.

How the Lord's Call Descends Through Every Degree of the Soul

ⲛ̄ⲁ ⲉⲧⲃⲉ ⲡⲧⲱⲍⲙⲉ ⲭⲉ ⲛ̄ⲧⲁⲩ ⲛ̄ⲁ ⲃⲱⲕ ⲁⲡⲓⲧⲛⲉ ⲛⲉⲱ ⲙⲙⲉⲗⲟⲥ ⲛ̄ⲁ ⲛⲧⲉ ⲧ†ⲩⲭⲏ ⲱⲁ ⲡⲱⲁⲣⲡ ⲛ̄ⲣⲱⲙⲉ

(51) Concerning the Call: that he (51) went down into how many members (51) of the Soul, unto the First Man.

Into how many members of the Soul did the Call go down — of the Living Soul, unto the Man who is in the aeon? Aeon, in the manner of a house of wood.

ⲁ ⲡⲱⲁⲣⲡ ⲛ̄ⲣⲱⲙⲉ ⲙⲉⲛ ⲃⲁⲗⲕ ⲁⲃⲁⲗ ⲁⲕ⌈ⲗⲱⲃ̄ⲱ̄ ⲍⲛ̄ ⲛⲉⲕ[6] ⲙⲙⲉⲗⲟⲥ ⲛⲧ†ⲩⲭⲏ ⲉⲧⲁⲛⲍ̄ ⲧⲍⲉ ⲉⲧⲁⲓⲥⲍⲉⲓ ⲛ[ⲏⲧⲛⲉ][7] [. . .] [. . .] ⲛ̄ⲧ†ⲩⲭⲏ ⲉⲧⲁⲛⲍ̄ ⲁⲕⲙ̄ [. . .][10] ⲙ̄ⲡⲕ[————][11]ⲟⲩⲛ̄ ⲁ [. . . .] [. . . .] ⲛ [. . .] ⲁⲗⲗⲁ ⲡⲣⲱⲙⲉ ⲙ̄ⲙⲁⲕⲁⲣⲓⲟⲥ ⲉⲧⲟⲓ ⲛⲉⲁⲩ [ⲁ][15]ⲕⲱ[————][16]ⲡⲉ̄ [ⲍⲛ̄][17] ⲟⲩⲡⲉⲧⲍⲏⲡ ⲍⲛ̄ ⲧⲉⲕⲍⲓⲕⲱⲛ ⲍⲛ̄ ⲧⲉⲕⲙⲟⲣⲫⲏ ⲍⲛ ⲧ[————][18]ⲕⲁⲣⲁ ⲡⲏ ⲍⲛ̄ ⲧⲉⲕⲡⲁⲣⲑⲉⲛⲟⲥ ⲉⲧⲟⲩⲁⲃⲉ ⲉⲧⲉ ⲛ̄ⲧⲁⲥ ⲡⲉ ⲧⲡ[————][19]ⲑⲉ ⲛⲟⲥ ⲙⲡⲟⲩⲁⲓⲛⲉ ⲧ†ⲩⲭⲏ ⲙ̄ⲡⲓⲱⲧ

As for the First Man, indeed, he was loosed forth; he ⌈mingled with⌉ the members of the Living Soul, in the manner I have written to you [. . .] of the Living Soul. He [. . .] did not know [. . . .] [. . .], but the blessed Man who is glorious came to be in a hidden one — in his image, in his form, in his love, in his holy Virgin, who is the Virgin of the Light, the Soul of the Father.

ⲕⲁⲧⲁ ⲡⲣⲏⲧⲉ ⲙ̄ⲡ̄ⲥⲱⲙⲁ ⲛⲧⲉ ⲧⲥⲁⲣ̄ⲝ ⲭⲉ ⲉⲣⲉ ⲧⲛⲟⲩⲛⲉ ⲛ̄ⲙⲙⲉⲗ[ⲟⲥ][20] ⲧⲏⲣⲟⲩ ⲁⲱⲉ ⲁⲧⲁⲡⲉ ⲭⲉ ⲉⲩⲱⲁⲛⲱⲱⲧ ⲟⲩⲉ ⲍⲛ̄ ⲙ̄ⲙⲉⲗⲟⲥ [ⲙ̄][21] ⲡⲣⲱⲙⲉ ⲉⲣⲉ ⲧⲁⲡⲉ ⲱⲟⲟⲡ ⲟⲩⲛⲧⲉⲕ ⲍⲉⲗⲡⲓⲥ ⲛⲛ ⌈ⲁ[22] [ⲛⲁⲱⲡⲉ ⲙ̄][23] ⲙⲉⲩ ⲁⲗⲗⲁ ⲉⲩⲱⲁⲛⲱⲱⲧ ⲧⲉⲕⲁⲡⲉ ⲡⲥⲱⲙⲁ ⲧⲏⲣ[————][30]ⲁⲙ[ⲟⲩ][24] ⲛⲧ̄ⲥⲱⲣⲙⲉ

After the manner of the body of the flesh: the root of all the members hangs from the head — for if they cut off one of the members of the man, the head being present, he has hope of being there still. But if they cut off his head, the whole body will die and perish.

ⲧⲍⲉ ⲍⲱⲕ ⲁⲛ ⲧⲉ ⲧⲉⲓ ⲙⲡⲱⲁⲣ[————][25]ⲣⲱ[ⲙⲉ][26] ⲛⲧⲁⲩ ⲡⲉ ⲧⲁⲡⲉ ⲉⲣⲉ ⲛⲉⲕⲱⲏⲣⲉ ⲁⲕⲧ ⲛ̄ⲍⲏⲧⲥ ⲙ̄ⲙ[————][31]ⲗⲟⲥ [ⲛ̄][27] ⲧⲉⲕ†ⲩⲭⲏ ⲏ ⲙ̄ⲙⲁⲛ ⲛⲧⲁⲩ ⲙⲡⲣⲏⲧⲉ ⲙ̄ⲡⲁⲏⲣ ⲉⲧ[————][28]ⲛⲍ [ⲉ][32] ⲧⲉⲣⲉ ⲥⲁⲣ̄ⲝ ⲛ[ⲙ ⲁⲡⲧⲏⲣⲧ̄ⲩ̄ ⲁⲛⲍ ⲁⲣⲁⲩ ⲉⲩⲭⲓ ⲛⲓⲫⲉ][33] ⲛ⌈ⲣⲱⲛⲍ][34] ⲛ̄ⲍⲏⲧⲧ̄ⲩ̄ ⲭⲉ ⲧⲩⲁⲡⲉ ⲕⲁⲁⲧ ⲁⲭⲙ̄ ⲡⲥⲱⲙⲁ ⲙ̄ⲡⲥⲧⲩⲗ[ⲟⲥ ⲙ̄ⲡⲉ][35] ⲁⲩ ⲍⲙ ⲡⲭⲓⲥⲉ ⲙⲡⲕⲟⲥⲙⲟⲥ

Thus also is this of the First Man: He is the head, his sons being attached therein — the mem-bers of his Soul. Or rather, he is in the manner of the living air in which every flesh wholly lives in him, drawing breath, ⌈and lives⌉ from him. For his head is laid upon the body of the Pillar of Glory in the Height of the cosmos.

in his Virgin of Light, who is his Soul, which he wears ⌈as a living garment⌉. [.] those very ones: the mind, the thought, the teaching, the counsel, and the reflection — those who raised them up have sent them forth [. . .] his purpose of heart; they passed by, walking after them [. . . . . .] of his living soul that is slackened among the bewildered ones (5) — they being according to the likeness of the members of her body and ⌈of this great⌉ cosmos. Now the time when they sent them forth, in that very time, he found him in the Virgin of Light, and he stood before him, beseeching, praying for a power again. ⌈the Father⌉ gave him a peace and a kiss. ⌈the Living Spirit⌉ gave him the beautiful fragrance. ⌈and⌉ the man, who himself, the Man, gave him ⌈he sent forth⌉ his members, to gather his soul inward, [. . . . . .] he turned him back to his place. Thus the tower — ⌈they began to⌉ fashion him and adorn him with an art, [. . . . .] the molding [. . .] the voices that they sent forth — [. . . . . .] they submerged inward, to walk forth ⌈downward⌉, the soul that has been defiled in the Enemy; they drew her inward, they came being Stand fast in their place at the answering, in the icon of their Father.

SPIRITUAL READING

The question is this: into how many parts of the soul does the Lord's call go down when he comes as the Divine Human to meet what is his own?

Consider the body. Every member hangs from the head. If a single member is cut, while the head is intact the man still has hope — life remains, and what was severed can be looked for again. But if the head itself is cut off, the whole body dies. So it is with the Lord as the Divine Human in the soul: he is the head, and the rational in all its degrees hangs from him as members hang from a head. As long as he remains, what suffers in the soul is not lost; but were he withdrawn, the whole would perish. He is also like the living air which all flesh breathes — what is breathed in from him is the very life of the natural. His head rests upon the path of regeneration at the highest point of the soul's order; he is the inmost above all that is built up, established in pure receivability, which is his own life-bearing soul that he wears as his garment.

The rational has five degrees — the mind, the thought, the teaching, the counsel, and the reflection — and these are sent out from him as one purpose of his heart. They go forth after the soul-life that has slackened and scattered among bewildered states, faculties shaped to the likeness of the body and the natural mind they have been sent to find. At the moment they were sent forth, he found himself in pure receivability, praying for the power that strengthens, for peace, and for the good of love that goes out as fragrance before him. The Divine Human gives himself to his own members for this work: to gather his soul inward and turn it back to its proper place.

So what was defiled in the self is drawn inward and fashioned again, adorned with the art of the Lord's ordering. The voices he has sent out sink down into the soul, take hold of what had been claimed away, and lead it back into its place — into the very image of the Father from whom it came.

APPARATUS

[2] l. 5 ⲱⲧⲉ — “a single likeness”; pipeline restoration, confidence: moderate; Completes ⲛⲟⲩⲱⲧⲉ 'single, same' after visible ⲛⲟⲩ-. 3 chars exact. The Living Spirit takes one unified likeness across the three accommodated registers.

[4] l. 7 ⲁⲩⲱ — “and”; pipeline restoration, confidence: low; Connective conjunction at start of new clause 'and he set on their feet'; 4 chars (ⲁ,ⲩ,ⲱ + space) fits standard Lycopolitan transition.

[5] l. 7 ⲟⲩ; editor; Editor restores [ⲟⲩ] completing ⲁⲣⲉⲧ[ⲟⲩ] 'on their feet' (from the idiom ⲥⲉⲍⲟ ⲁⲣⲉⲧ= in glossary).

[9] l. 8 ϫⲃⲥⲱ — “garments”; pipeline restoration, confidence: moderate; ϫⲃⲥⲱ 'garments' (4 chars) = chapter keyword. The subordination is performed in the three accommodated garments. Fits 'in the garments' parallel with ⲧϣⲁⲙⲧⲉ ⲛϫⲃⲥⲱ throughout.

[12] l. 9 ⲁⲫⲃⲓ — “took (away)”; pipeline restoration, confidence: moderate; ⲁⲫⲃⲓ ⲁⲃⲁⲗ 'he took/laid forth' (4 chars) fits the spiritual arc: 'once they have served he lays them off from the midst of what has been ordered.' Pairs with ⲁⲃⲁⲗ as standard idiom for removal.

[13] l. 10 ⲙ̄ⲡⲕⲁϫ — “of the earth”; pipeline restoration, confidence: low; ⲙ̄ⲡⲕⲁϫ 'of the earth/land' (5 chars) = the natural mind, completing 'works of the earth' as genitive carrying from previous segment. Lexicon: earth = the natural mind as ground.

[14] l. 10 ⲏⲩ; pipeline restoration, confidence: high; Editor partial 'ⲡⲧ.' confirms ⲡⲧⲏⲩ 'the wind,' first of the three garments listed in 1807; visible ⲡⲧ + 2 chars = ⲡⲧⲏⲩ.

[24] l. 16 ϫⲏⲧⲟⲩ — “from them”; pipeline restoration, confidence: moderate; ⲛ̄ϫⲏⲧⲟⲩ 'from them' (5 chars after visible ⲛ̄) — the upward motion 'from them' (the lower bounds/garments) toward the upper place. Standard directional formula.

[25] l. 16 ⲙ̄ⲙⲁⲩ — “there”; pipeline restoration, confidence: low; ⲙ̄ⲙⲁⲩ 'there' (4 chars) at clause end, parallel to 1820 'ⲡⲥⲁⲛⲧⲡⲉ ⲙ̄ⲙⲁⲩ' = 'the upper place there.'

[30] l. 20 ⲫ ⲛ; editor; Restoring ⲧⲏⲣⲟ̄ 'whole' suffix and future marker ⲛⲁ-.

[40] l. 32 ⲛⲑⲉ ⲛ̄ⲟⲩⲍⲃⲥⲱ ⲉⲥⲁⲛ̄ϫ — “as a living garment”; pipeline restoration, confidence: low; 16-char span; from clothing/garment lexicon: 'as a living garment'. ⲣⲫⲟⲣⲉ collocates with ϫⲃⲥⲱ; the Soul-as-garment of First Man is a standard correspondence. Speculative on exact wording.

[41] l. 33 trace: ϩ

[42] l. 33 ⲉⲧⲁ̄ϫⲉⲩ; editor; Standard demonstrative ⲉⲧⲁ̄ϫⲉⲩ; only [ⲧϫ] damaged within the clear word ⲉ[ⲧϫ]ϫⲉⲩ

[45] l. 36 trace: ⲡ...ⲥ

[46] l. 38 ⲙ̄ⲡⲉⲓ ⲛⲁϭ ⲛ̄ — “of this great”; pipeline restoration, confidence: low; 8-char gap before ⲕⲟⲥⲙⲟⲥ; standard collocation 'of this great cosmos' fits — likeness of body and the great cosmos as the natural mind in formation. Speculative.

[47] l. 39 ⲡⲥⲛⲩ ⲉⲧⲁ̄ϫⲉⲩ; editor; Standard temporal phrase ϫⲙ ⲡⲥⲛⲩ ⲉⲧⲁ̄ϫⲉⲩ 'in that time'; ⲥ and ⲏ partially visible

[50] l. 41 ⲡⲓⲱⲧ — "the Father"; pipeline restoration, confidence: low; 7-char gap before ⲁⲣϯ 'gave'; the giver of peace and kiss in the gathering scene is the Father (Father of Greatness sending gifts to the rational). Loose match.

[51] l. 41 ⲁⲣϯ — "the Father"; editor; Idiom ⲁⲣϯ ⲛⲉϥ 'he gave him'; only [ⲁⲣ] restored, ϯ visible

[53] l. 42 ⲡⲡⲛⲁ ⲉⲧⲁⲛⲍ̄ — "the Living Spirit"; pipeline restoration, confidence: low; 9-char gap before ⲁⲣϯ; in the parallel sequence of givers, the Living Spirit is the operative power that gives the fragrance (good of love sensed). Fits character count.

[54] l. 42 ⲁⲣϯ — "the Living Spirit"; editor; Same idiom as line 9; ⲁⲣ[ϯ] with ⲁⲣ visible and [ϯ] restored [55] l. 43 ⲁⲩⲱ ⲡⲣ — "and"; pipeline restoration, confidence: low; 5-char span continuing the chain of givers; conjunction + article fits.

[57] l. 43 ⲛⲉⲣ; editor; ⲛⲉⲣ 'to him' completes the idiom ⲁⲣϯ ⲛⲉⲣ 'he gave him' as in lines 9-10

[58] l. 44 ⲁⲣⲧⲛⲛⲁⲩ — "he sent forth"; pipeline restoration, confidence: low; 8-char gap before ⲛⲛⲉⲣⲙⲉⲗⲟⲥ; ⲧⲛⲛⲁⲩ 'send forth' is the established verb for the rational sent to gather the soul. Fits sense and approximate length.

[60] l. 46 ⲁⲩⲁⲣⲭⲓ ⲛ — "they began to"; pipeline restoration, confidence: low; 7-char gap; 'they began to fashion him' fits the sequence of fashioning/adorning that follows.

Elaboration

The Lord's structural operations in the deeper descent. T32 — seven works of the Living Spirit in forming the cosmos: pearl drawn from sea, soul stretched through every body, substances of death fixed in place, doctrinal vessels established, rational sent out, watches stationed, glorious image of the Ambassador sent forth. T33 — five supports the operative power has set within the self's body: bearing-disc, Pillar of Glory, molding of Gehennas, pillars in the great sea, four walls around strongholds. T34 — further constructive works: building the aeon anew, filling the heights with vessels, the wheels turning, gates opened and shut. T35 — the four works of the Ambassador's revealing: image shown forth, gates of firmaments opened and shut, chosen-out super-light, indwelling perfection in the elect.

SPIRITUAL READING

The Lord's operative power, by which spiritual structure is built in the soul, performs seven works in the course of forming the rational and raising the natural toward conjunction.

The first: he raises the Divine Human up out of the soul's contest, drawing him forth as a precious truth is drawn from the depths of natural perception — what was hidden in the struggle is brought out into recognition.

The second: the one who is clothed in the natural and stretched through it in suffering he spreads forth into every body, so that the soul-in-process is present at every degree of the natural's life and no part of the natural is left without him.

The third: he spreads out and fixes in place the substances of death — what the self had claimed as its own life is held still, stretched on the cross of recognition, no longer permitted to move as if it were living of itself.

The fourth: he establishes the doctrinal vessels by which truth crosses the waters of the natural; he gives the soul conveyances in which divine wisdom can travel through perception without being lost in it.

The fifth: he summons forth the rational in its five degrees and sends it out into its work, that it may take up the bearing-up of the natural and shoulder all the burdens of the natural mind in formation. He summons forth as well three living utterances and stations them against the places where the self deceives, against the molded forms of self-claiming, so that what was set against truth is met at every register; and he disposes them so that what is given may interpenetrate the five aspects of the natural and order them from within.

The sixth: when the bound circuit of the natural has been set, he sends forth into it a multitude of powers and ordered presences, that they may keep the circuit on every side until the works of formation are completed. Some of these he gathers into the interior reservoirs of the natural mind, where received good and truth are preserved in their proper order; others he stations at the posts of attentive watching, that the rational may not fall from its degree.

The seventh: when the Lord's call goes out to the rational at the moment the natural is ready to hear it, his glorious image is sent forth, and the projection of his presence comes down accompanied by many ordered influences. Then the whole structure is engaged at once — degree set against degree, the claimed against the given, all turned toward the Light that has come — and this is another great work, glorious, that endures to the end. It is the last work, which raises everything upward into the states of greatness; for here what was scattered is drawn inward and taken hold of, and the building is completed there. He who manifests these things in the new state of regenerated life is the same who has accomplished them; and there stands the tree of perception there, bearing the fruit of glory and joy.

SPIRITUAL READING

Even within the natural mind as the self has organized it — within the very body that self-love has built for itself — the Lord's operative power has set five structural supports, running like veins and channels through what would otherwise collapse in on itself. These are five great works by which the Lord holds the natural mind in being, sustains it from beneath, and keeps it open to regeneration even in the midst of its claiming.

The first is the bearing-disc set upon the shoulder of what carries the whole from below: the celestial good that takes up the weight of the natural mind and holds it firm so that it does not fall into its own abyss.

The second is the path of regeneration itself, stretched forth through the very midst of the natural — the way upward planted not at the edge of the soul's claimed territory but driven straight through its center, so that ascent is always possible from wherever the soul stands.

The third is the Lord's shaping hand on the formation of the lowest states. Even the regions where self-love has its deepest hold are not left without form; the Lord molds and orders them, so that what is most fallen still bears a structure he has set.

The fourth is the four supporting pillars whose feet stand in the great mass of natural perception, at the ultimate degree of the natural mind. Down where the soul's perceptions are stirred and bitter, the Lord has driven foundations: the natural is not bottomless, it rests on what he has placed.

The fifth is the fourfold wall encircling the self's fortified strongholds — the bound the Lord sets around the soul's most fixed self-loving structures, so that even what the soul has hardened against him is enclosed within his order, and nothing of self-love finally escapes the limit he has drawn.

Thus the Lord's operative power runs through the very body of the self, holding it up, threading the way of return through its middle, shaping its lowest forms, planting foundations beneath its perceptions, and setting walls around its enclosures — preparing in advance, from within the soul's own claiming, the structure by which it will be regenerated.

SPIRITUAL READING

What follows is a numbered enumeration of the works the Lord accomplishes within the very structures the soul's self-claiming has thrown up — works carried out not by demolishing the natural mind that has organized itself apart from him, but by entering it and reordering it from inside.

The first of these works is that the Lord, as divine order itself, builds the natural anew. Where the self had set up its architecture on its own terms, divine order goes forth and rebuilds, so that what was claimed begins to stand under the Lord's pattern.

A further work is the filling of the higher reaches of the rational with vessels of doctrine: conveyances of truth are launched into the heights of the mind, so that what receives influx is now stocked with the means of carrying it.

Another is the cycling: the recurrent process of purification is set in motion, sending forth life in regular revolution, so that the rational does not stand still in its claim but is turned and turned again under the Lord's hand.

A further work joins the earth to the worlds above — the natural mind is set into proper relation with the higher degrees, no longer cut off as if it were its own world, but ordered as the floor of a structure whose stories communicate.

A further work opens the gates of the doctrinal vessels inward, so that what carries truth opens not outward into display but inward toward reception, and the soul's interior is made the place where what is borne is unloaded.

In the same way, gates are set likewise in the corresponding places, so that the inward openings are matched at every degree of the structure — and at the same time some openings are turned away from falsity, sealed against the wandering of the rational apart from truth.

A seventh work, here obscured, belongs to the same series of structural settings.

A further work is the discrimination by which what is the Lord's is separated out from the particular forms the self had assumed — the soul's self-organizing arrangements no longer keeping as their own what was always given. This separation is performed under the Lord's call going out to the rational, after the rational had fallen onto the natural ground; the call meets the soul where it has come to rest in its claiming and divides what is given from what was taken. By this same operation night and day are sorted: the states of darkness and the states of light, hitherto mingled, are set apart from each other so that each can be seen for what it is.

A ninth work concerns what the self had brought forth from itself which could not live: these failed productions fall downward, dropping out of the structure, since nothing the soul generates from its own claim can stand once discrimination is at work.

A tenth work concerns the transferring of states from one form to another within the circuit — particular conditions of the rational moved across the natural's complete bound, so that no fixed station of self-love is allowed to settle as final, but each is carried along until the whole has been brought through.

(The list is fragmentary; what survives shows the pattern: the Lord's building, opening, separating, and conveying are all carried out within the very framework the soul's claiming had erected, until that framework, without being torn down, has become the housing of regeneration.)

SPIRITUAL READING

When the Lord's call goes out to the soul at the moment the rational is ready to hear it, four great works are accomplished together, and each is exalted, abounding beyond what the soul had known until then.

The first is that an image is shown forth in glory: the Lord makes himself recognizable in a form the rational can see, so that the soul, looking, has something of the Divine Human to look at. Until this happens the soul has no kindred to recognize; when the call sounds, the form is given.

The second is that all the gates between the discrete degrees of the rational are opened. The boundaries that ordinarily hold one degree apart from another are, at this moment, set wide, so that influx may pass freely from the highest reaches down into the natural and recognition may rise from below upward. Then, after the work is done, the gates are shut again — the orders are restored, the degrees re-fixed, so that what has been received can be held without collapse.

The third is that the light and the discriminating sight which the Lord chooses out are given to the soul, and this light is more than the ordinary light by which the rational has been seeing. It is the light by which the soul can tell what is the Lord's from what it has claimed; and the seeing-out that goes with it is the soul's own newly awakened power of discrimination, granted in freedom from within.

The fourth is that the Lord manifests in the perfection of those who have come fully into him — shining forth as light to the living soul, completing what was begun, and laying down a hidden chamber within the very ground where self-love had ruled, so that even there, in the worlds of the self's old enmity, an inmost place is now prepared in which the Lord himself dwells.

APPARATUS

[1] l. 4 ⲛζωβ — “works”; editor; Continuation of ϲⲁϣϩ 'seven' from line 22; matches chapter title 'seven works'

[2] l. 7 оγ; pipeline restoration, confidence: high; Indefinite article оγ before ⲗⲙⲁⲣϫⲁⲣⲓⲧⲏⲥ (Lycopolitan form with prefixed ⲗ); the comparison ⲧⲍⲉ ⲛ̄- 'in the manner of' takes an indefinite noun.

[3] l. 7 ϵϣⲁⲩⲚⲧⲏ — “that one brings”; pipeline restoration, confidence: low; Relative clause completing the simile: 'a pearl which one brings up out of the sea'; standard Manichaean image.

[4] l. 8 ⲡⲙⲁⲍⲥⲛⲉⲩ — “The second”; pipeline restoration, confidence: high; Ordinal 'the second' opening work 2; matches the explicit pattern ⲧⲧⲙⲁⲍϣⲁⲙⲧ (third, sec 1879) and ⲧⲧⲙⲁⲍⲥⲁⲩ (sixth, sec 1889).

[5] l. 9 ⲛⲑ̄ — “so that he might fill”; pipeline restoration, confidence: moderate; Conjunctive prefix 'so that he might' before ⲙⲁϩ 'fill' — clause continuation of work 2: 'that he might fill him in every body.'

[6] l. 11 ⲁϩⲁⲙⲁⲍⲧⲉ — “He seized them”; pipeline restoration, confidence: low; Continuing ⲁϩ- from end of sec 1879; verb of seizing precedes the parallel verbs ⲁϩϣⲱⲣ 'spread out' and ⲁϩⲧⲱⲥ 'crucified.'

[7] l. 12 ⲡⲙⲁⲍⲩⲧⲁⲩ — “The fourth”; pipeline restoration, confidence: high; Ordinal 'the fourth' opening work 4 (the ships of light); standard pattern.

[8] l. 13 ⲧⲟⲩ — “fifth”; editor; Continuation of ⲡⲙⲁⲍ[ⲧⲟⲩ] 'the fifth'; standard ordinal in this enumeration

The Mirror Wheel and the Nested Circuits

Elaboration

How nothing the self organizes can hide. T36 — the wheel before the King of Glory: a great mirror set before the Lord's gate, in which every motion of self-love at every degree is held transparent, with twelve marks of fixity sealing every faculty. T37 — the three zones nested within one another: the self in five aspects fettered inside the five degrees of the rational, all suspended from the rational operating upward in regeneration, beneath the firmament that keeps the orders distinct. The deeper captivity is not concealable; it is set inside the very structure that will lift it.

SPIRITUAL READING

Before the gate at which the Lord rules over the discrete degrees of the rational, there stands a recurring process of discrimination — a movement that turns and turns again, by which every motion of the self, at every degree above and every degree below, is brought into view. Nothing claimed by self-love can hide from it. Whatever the self organizes, in any of the firmaments by which one degree of the rational is held distinct from another, is reflected here and made known.

The roots of every self-loving arrangement, both in the higher reaches of the natural mind and in its lower depths, are held fast in this process as in a great chain. The whole intent of the Lord's gate is set toward this end: that the self be bound at its source, and that its hostility — wherever it has organized itself among the degrees — be exposed within the very gleam of divine truth shining forth. Concealed within that gleam is an order and a beauty exceeding what the natural can imagine, and twelve marks of fixity are stamped in it, one set in the middle of every degree of the rational, so that every faculty and every claiming arrangement that operates within it stands sealed.

None of the self's claimings can release itself from these bonds. Should it attempt to work some deceit within its own dwelling, the deceit is at once manifested upon this turning, and the soul comes to know it there. The whole circuit of the natural's states — every fixed point through which the soul passes, and every power that operates within the bound of the natural — has its course laid open here, made known from within the process itself, before the Lord's gate.

The seal of fullness within this process is the rational ordered by truth in its five degrees, joined together and filling the whole circuit of the natural. Every place that has been narrowed by self-love and every place that has been opened to receive is made visible there. Because the very root of every degree above and below, and of every claiming arrangement among them, stands fashioned within this turning, the count of states is held outstretched at every hour over against the Lord's gate, so that a holy fear comes upon every power that has entered the agreement, and none of them can peer out from the chain that holds the fruit of their working.

This recurring process stands as a chain before the Lord who keeps watch — like a great mirror set before him, in which the judgment of all the works done within the rational is seen. When any of the self's arrangements, in any degree, would loose itself to act, that very act is recognized and shown forth upon the mirror. So the soul is made to know what is happening within it, and the Lord's discrimination passes upon all the works that are done in him.

SPIRITUAL READING

When the Lord, by his operative power, builds and establishes the natural mind as a whole, he does not lay it out as a single flat field. He hangs its outermost bound, and within that bound he hangs another, and within that yet another — circuit within circuit, so that the soul's whole structure is held in nested degrees, each enclosing the next.

The innermost of these circuits is the self in its five aspects: the natural mind in five orders of self-love, with all its claiming, both in its outgoing and its receptive sides. The Lord does not let this circuit stand free or rule from itself. He hangs it inside another circuit — the rational in its five degrees as it goes forth from the Divine Human. So the five orders of self-love are reckoned within the five degrees of the rational that comes from above; the whole resistance of the self, its enmity against influx, is fettered within them, kept inside, held under the form that has been given from the Lord's own humanity. This is why one circuit is hung within another: so that what claims is enclosed by what receives, and cannot operate apart from it.

And there is a further circuit, set around these: the rational in its five degrees as it operates upward, under the Lord's operative power, raising what is below toward what is above. The whole built structure is suspended from this — the inner circuit fettered, the middle circuit holding it within the form of the Divine Human, and this outer circuit lifting the whole upward in regeneration.

Above all of this stands the firmament — the fixed boundary by which these nested degrees are kept distinct from what is yet higher, so that influx from above can descend without collapsing the orders below. This is the great structure within which the natural mind is built: a thing of circuits set inside circuits, the self held inside the rational, the rational held inside the operation that lifts it, and all of it held beneath the firmament of the Lord. (Several lines are too damaged to recover the final figure named at the top of this structure.)

[8] l. 12 ⲉⲱ; editor; Editor's restoration; completes ⲥⲧⲉⲣⲉⲱⲙⲁ

[9] l. 12 ⲭⲁⲁⲭ — "are fashioned"; pipeline restoration, confidence: moderate; Parallel to line 24 ⲥⲉⲭⲁⲁⲭ ⲥⲉⲁϩⲧ ⲛ̄ⲍⲏⲧⲧ̄ⲩ̄ ('are fashioned and stand in him'); the same construction fits the description of archons existing in the prochos. Char count slightly long (4 vs. est 3) but morphologically required.

[10] l. 13 ⲥⲉⲁϩⲧ — "and stand"; pipeline restoration, confidence: moderate; Continues the parallel from line 24: ⲥⲉⲭⲁⲁⲭ ⲥⲉⲁϩⲧ ⲛ̄ⲍⲏⲧⲧ̄ⲩ̄ — 'they are fashioned, they stand in him'. Char count slightly off (5 vs. est 4) but the formula is fixed in this chapter.

[11] l. 14 ⲣⲉ — "while"; pipeline restoration, confidence: low; Two-character gap after 'ⲛⲁⲙⲟⲩⲣ ⲉ-' before 'if they wish'. Reading as ⲉⲣⲉ (circumstantial converter, 'while') gives 'the bonds — while if they wish to do a deceit' is awkward; more likely ⲉⲣⲉ introduces the new clause. Low because alternatives like ⲉⲧⲉ (relative) are equally plausible.

[12] l. 15 ⲧⲟⲧⲉ — "at once"; pipeline restoration, confidence: low; Three-char lacuna with partial 'ⲧ' before ⲟⲩⲱⲛⲍ ⲁⲃⲁⲗ. The temporal connector ⲧⲟⲧⲉ 'then/at once' fits the spiritual reading: any deceit is at once manifested upon the prochos. Char count slightly long (4 vs. est 3).

[13] l. 15 ⲉⲧⲙ̄ⲙ̄ — "that"; editor; Editor's restoration: 'ⲡⲡⲣⲟⲭⲟⲥ ⲉⲧⲙ̄ⲙⲉⲩ' = 'that prochos' — formula recurring on this page (lines 17, 24, 30)

[14] l. 16 ⲉⲩ — "they"; editor; Editor's restoration; continues subject from previous line

[18] l. 25 ⲉⲧⲱⲟⲟⲡ — "that exists"; pipeline restoration, confidence: moderate; Seven-character lacuna; ⲉⲧⲱⲟⲟⲡ 'that exists' fits exactly and matches the recurring relative formula 'that exists in him' used throughout this chapter (lines 1, 11, 12, 19).

[19] l. 26 ⲧⲉ ⲡⲧⲁⲓⲟ; editor; Editor's restoration: completes 'the Great Gate of Honor' (formulaic title repeated at lines 2, 13, 20) [20] l. 27 ⲙⲙⲉⲩ — "yonder"; pipeline restoration, confidence: low; Six-character lacuna following ⲉⲧ. ⲉⲧⲙ̄ⲙⲉⲩ 'that yonder' is the most frequent qualifier in this chapter and fits the relative construction modifying ⲧⲍ̄ⲧⲉ ('the fear yonder shall be borne'). Char count short (4 vs. est 6) — possibly with a connecting particle.

[23] l. 28 ⲁ; editor; Editor's restoration: completes ⲁⲃⲁⲗ 'forth'

[25] l. 31 ⲁⲣⲭⲱⲛ ⲍⲱⲟⲩ — "the archons themselves"; pipeline restoration, confidence: low; Nine-character lacuna after ⲛ-. ⲛⲁⲣⲭⲱⲛ ⲍⲱⲟⲩ 'the archons themselves' fits the chapter's repeated focus on archons in the firmaments (lines 5, 12, 24, 33). The fear over against the Gate concerns when the archons themselves are in those places.

[26] l. 31 ⲙⲉⲩ — "those yonder places"; editor; Editor's restoration: ⲛⲉⲧⲙⲙⲉⲩ 'those' (demonstrative)

[33] l. 15 ⲟⲥⲙⲟⲥ ⲁⲉ — "cosmos"; pipeline restoration, confidence: low; ⲙⲡⲕ- is visible, suggesting completion of ⲙ̄ⲡⲕⲟⲥⲙⲟⲥ 'the cosmos' (5 chars: ⲟⲥⲙⲟⲥ) plus a particle for the remaining 2 chars, paralleling the closing reference to ⲙ̄ⲡⲕⲟⲥⲙⲟⲥ in line 16.

The Body of the Cosmos and the Soul Bound

Elaboration

The deepest extent of the wound — and the New Man begun. T38 — the natural mind shaped as one anthropomorphic body, with the head at the highest firmament, the spine as the five storehouses, the heart as proper affection, the fire-wall of love as outer skin; five watchers stationed within. T39 — Adam molded from the Watchers' fallen residue, with the Lord going down to bear up what withered, the structural good giving way, the Pillar of Glory borne with weariness. T40 — the soul lives bound within twelve members of the body: mind in bone, thought in sinew, teaching in vein, counsel in flesh, reflection in skin, with the self's own five overlaid; until the Mind of Light performs the inverse exchange — raising each soul-faculty and binding the self's correlate in its place. This is the central wound of State 4 and the first real beginning of its repair.

Light is the likeness which comes to be worn in the holy ones. You said to us in this manner: 'He is also one among the gods,[. . . .] ⸢there are⸣ while many gods exist before him.' You said of flesh, and he binds the Ancient One in his five counsels, and sets the five counsels upon him, in the five members of his body.' Now then it stands fixed that the Ancient One is bound in the body. For we see in him that an alteration takes place in him in his bonds, time after time.

Once again the Ambassador set in their midst the Great Mind, who is the Pillar of Glory, the Perfect Man. Once again they set in their midst Jesus the Youth, who is the icon of the beautiful word of the Proclamation and the Hearing. He established the encampments of those above and those below ⌈so that⌉ each one of them shall take charge of the circuit of his watch-station, so that they may not commit torpor or guile in his watch-station. And behold once more, that the Pherokatochos stands fast in the Great Mind, in the encampment that is on the upper side, of the prison of the bound ones, that he may lay waste the entire darkness of Death. And a guile arose with a torpor; Sin became excessive. He defiled inward with the soul; he mingled with the light that he peered forth against the icon of the Ambassador. He went ⌈up to the upper side⌉ in the third firmament that is above, to [———] [. . . .] the Pherokatochos. From that very place again he defiled inward with the light, was released, and came down to the lower side, to the dry one and the moist one. He molded trees upon the dry one. In the sea itself she was set up immediately; she wrought a great torpor in the sea.

SPIRITUAL READING

Truth from the Lord becomes a likeness that the soul wears: what the holy ones put on as their outer form is the very wisdom that has been received. The questioner asks: if the Lord is one and unchanging, immeasurable in himself, how does he come to be confined within the smallness of a single soul, and what does it mean to say he is bound there in a body, undergoing alteration in his bonds, time after time? And again: if the Lord ordering the rational truly dwells within the holy ones, why does their likeness not appear to us as that order is in itself? The answer given is that a holy soul is one whose interior mind is set beside him by the Lord, even when its outward form does not yet display what is within; and that what looks like alteration in bonds is the soul's regeneration moving through degree after degree, not any change in the Lord himself.

Here, then, is the structure. Falsity from evil sets itself up against the truth received, and it does so by counterfeiting the form of a man — for the natural mind, taken as a whole, is fashioned as one body, and every part of it answers to a part of the rational. The head of this whole field is the highest firmament where degrees begin; the neck reaches down through the seven firmaments; the spine descends through the five storehouses by which the natural is held in the Lord's order; the ribs are the firmaments at their sides; the navel and what hangs from it is the circuit of the natural mind passing through the twelve fixed states of its formation; what comes from the navel up to the crown is one ordered region, and what comes down from the navel through the four worlds is the lower region. The thighs reach down toward the bearing-up principle that holds the natural in being; the legs and feet stand on the ground of the whole circuit of the natural. The heart of this body is the affection proper to the human; the liver and the lower organs are the affections of the lower kind; the breath belongs to the company of thoughts that move through perception; the channels belong to the lower truths that swim in the natural waters; the creeping things on the earth are the disordered cravings beneath. The outer skin of the whole is the bound of love that surrounds everything as a wall of fire — celestial love at the outermost, holding the whole structure together — and the stronghold within that wall is the same fire of love giving form. Yet because the self has its place in this body too, the body has also its hatred, which is the will of self-love organizing the worlds; its veins and springs of water are truths the self has claimed; its feet are the lowest natural in its self-loving form. So this is the way in which everything stands in the middle of the natural mind, each thing taking its proper portion, life and soul reckoned through it, with the sinner present in it as well — for there are also the Living Spirit and the Lord's call sounding through it, and the five faculties of attention keeping post unsleeping, and the Lord himself holding the inmost firm, the keeper of the highest mind above all the powers within.

Now consider the Lord ruling the seven discrete degrees: he humbles whatever rises against order, and he is also the Lord who gives stable form, who is the form-giving teaching coming forth from the middle and giving instruction concerning what desire would do. He establishes also the Lord as ruling truth, who is the deliberative faculty in its long-suffering — the third image given into his hand, that of thought, with the father's image and the mother's, set there to bring under what would do wickedness. He establishes also the bearing-up principle, which is the rational's looking-back-upon-itself, the wisdom by which what is below is held in the lower foundation and made to stand.

Then the Lord's call going forth chose out from there the five degrees of the rising rational, and set in their midst the divine summons and the soul's hearing answering. Together they became seven, sons of the beautiful Spirit, after the seven degrees by which the Divine Human had first gone forth. Once again the call set in their midst the Great Mind, which is the path of regeneration itself — the rational fully formed, the perfect man. And once again was set in their midst the Lord as the inner image taking shape, the formed icon of the beautiful word of proclamation and hearing. He fixed in place the encampments of those above and those below, that each one should keep charge of the circuit of his own watch-station, that no torpor or guile come to be in his post. And behold, the Lord holding the inmost firm stands fast in the Great Mind, in the encampment on the upper side, on the side of those that are bound, that he may lay waste the whole region of death.

Yet at every watch a disturbance arose. Where the Lord holds the highest order firm, guile arose with torpor, and self-love became excessive, mingling with the soul, mingling with the truth that was received, peering forth against the Lord's accommodated revelation. The disturbance went up as far as the third firmament above, came back down again from that very place, defiled what was joined with the light, was loosened, came down to the lower side, to the dry and the moist regions of self-love, and put forth its trees there — perceptions of its own kind — and spread itself in the natural waters of the soul, working a great torpor in them.

Behold once more, where the Lord rules the discrete degrees as the Lord of Honor — who is thought itself, present in the third firmament with the labor of its work — there too a torpor and guile and a disturbance arose in his encampment, where the disordered states of attention had descended from above to the natural mind in his watch-station. They wrought every work of guile, opened up the hardness of natural truth out of the cosmos, disclosed to humans what should have stayed hidden of heaven's mysteries, and a torpor with destruction came over the earth.

Then the form-giving teaching stands fast, perfection holding firm, and yet a strife arose in her encampment too, the chosen place where failed productions of the self had fallen down. There the natural mind was molded as Adam and Eve — the rational and its receiving — begotten so that the self might reign through them in the world; and every work of self-loving desire was fashioned upon the earth, and the whole world was filled with that desire from within, and the righteous were slain in the place of contest, generation after generation, while the children of light moved through it.

And again, in the watch of the Lord as ruling truth, the Great Counsel having authority over the three wheels of the natural's revolution, a disturbance arose with affliction, and the souls of that watch sank into the three depths of earth, until the Lord's call revealed his image — and then the paths upward were laid open, and the means of return appeared, so that water and fire, truth and love in their proper register, could rise up out of them again. So too in the watch of the bearing-up principle, who humbles the depths below, what had turned downward dried up in the foundation beneath, and another occasion came in the watch of the Lord holding the inmost firm.

So at every degree of the rational's order the self found its disturbance, and at every disturbance the Lord's call again revealed the image and laid open the way, so that what had sunk could rise. This is the rhythm in which the natural mind is structured as one body, and in which the rational, posted at its watches, is made to recognize, again and again, what flows through it from the Lord and what its own claiming has organized.

...⸢Pherrokato]chos⸣: the Pillar of Glory came forth⸢upward⸣ the helpers of the Pherrokatochos, to bear up under the ⸢burdens⸣ all of them.

Concerning the great strife and the depth that arose in the watch of the Great King of Honor — these are the Egregoroi who came down to the earth out of the heavens. They commanded the four angels concerning them; they bound the Egrego- ⸢Egrego⸣roi in a bond forever, in the prison of the darkened ones. ⸢They⸣ expelled their sons from upon the earth.

⸢Since⸣ the abortions came down again in the watch of Adamas; ⸢they⸣ begot Adam and Eve. On account of this great strife which ⸢which⸣ arose with the mystery of evil, Jesus saw [. . . .] the prayer of the Five Sons; he wore for them [. . . . . .] of the abortions; he cast them downward, the the mind of Adam.

Concerning the gathered earthquake which occurred at the third bone, and that the ways were twisted, the barriers blocked the wind, the water, and the fire. Jesus took up a watch downward, to to bear for an hour, to direct the courses of the ⸢wind⸣, the water, and the fire; to open to them the barriers, to ⸢establish⸣ for them the way of their going-up upward.

Once ⸢again⸣: since the bone of the lower part of the Omophoros withered, the shoulders that have not ⸢reached⸣ rest. For this very reason Jesus went down to bear, for an ⸢hour⸣, until he reached that place, to ⸢comfort⸣, to ⸢strengthen⸣ the lower shoulders, to set them ⸢rising⸣ upward unto his rest.

at the hour of all the watches of the Zone, those over which the great Gods are masters, watching over them — [. . . .] weariness occurred, and groaning within them; the [. . . . . .] [. . .] within them from time to time, in great humility, until the powers of enmity be humbled.

Such too is the manner of this body: there is a strong power rooted in him; even though it is small in his magnitude, nevertheless Sin is rooted in him with the Old Man who is mounted upon him; he tarries long in (his) rising in great Wisdom, until the Mind of Light again, in like manner, humbles this body, driving it ⌈according to⌉ his purpose of heart.

Likewise: as in the watching-⌈stations⌉ of his great brothers who are outside, those who are masters in the Zone of the great body — the earthquake and the trembling occur within them from time to time. Such too is the manner of the watching-place of the mind, which is itself the body of the flesh: Sin casts from time to time his disturbances in the body.

SPIRITUAL READING

The path of regeneration came forth, and beneath it the bearing-up principle stood with its helpers, holding firm the structure they had been given to support.

Now this is what arose in the natural mind. Under the Lord's ruling at the highest accommodated state, there was a great strife, a depth of trouble. Attention fell from its proper post: faculties that should have kept watch from above came down and bound themselves to the earthly. The Lord's discriminating operation set bounds upon this fall, fixing the disordered watching in its place so it could not spread further, and the productions which that fallen attention had brought forth — productions that could not live, since nothing the self begets has life of its own — were cast off the field of the natural.

But these failed productions came down again at another watch in the soul's formation. From them, by permission, Adam and Eve were begotten — the natural-rational man and his conjoined affection took shape from the very stuff that fallen attention had left behind. So great was the strife, so deep the mystery of evil hidden in this forming, that the Lord as illumining truth heard the prayer rising from the rational in its five degrees and clothed himself for them. He cast the failed productions downward and set the mind of Adam in order from above.

For at that third register a shaking occurred in the very framework of the soul. The structural good that should have held the lower part firm had withered; the ways were twisted; the barriers blocked perception, the truth of the natural degree, and the very fire of love, so that none of these could move freely through their courses. Then the Lord as illumining truth took up his watch downward. He went into the lower place to bear, to direct again the courses of perception, of natural truth, and of love; to open the closed barriers; to lay open the way of ascent.

Again: because the bearing-up principle below had grown weary, because the shoulders of the lower order had no rest under the weight they carried, the Lord went down to bear with them, to reach the place that needed comfort, to strengthen the lower supports, to set them rising upward into his rest.

This is what happens at every watch of the natural's complete circuit, at every station the Lord oversees: weariness occurs there, and groaning within the structure from time to time, and a great humbling — until the powers of self-loving opposition are at last brought low.

So it is also with this body you bear. A strong power is rooted in it. Though it seems small in stature, self-loving claiming is rooted there with the old man mounted upon it. The body lingers long under that rider until it begins to rise in great wisdom — until the Lord ordering the rational humbles the body in like manner, driving it toward the soul's true purpose.

So it is with the watching-stations of the natural taken at large, where the great divine principles are masters: shakings and tremblings pass through them from time to time. And so it is at the watching-place of the mind, which is itself the body of the flesh: self-love casts its disturbances into the body again and again, that the body may be humbled and brought to order.

The good faculties stand firm under all this. Discrimination and wise knowing are revealed to them from within. Whatever they do, they do in due preparation, established in their place. For this very reason they hand over to self-loving enmity its just verdict: that the cutting may be pronounced and the downward purpose of self-love brought to its end in the fire of love's purification — and only then are those faculties reckoned at their true measure. They were first to stand in hidden goodness, and they remain so.

Now to the further question: how does the Lord ordering the rational — this great strong One — come down wearing so small a body of flesh? Consider what is plain to you. Each great divine power, however vast, operates within the very bounds of the place where it stands fast, fitted to that place as a tree is fitted to the soil that carries it. Each is shaped in the natural mind according to the boundary of the place at which he stands, and from within that boundary he reaches upward all the way to his source. The greatness is not lessened by the smallness of the vessel; the vessel is the form by which greatness operates at this degree, and from within it the whole ascent is made.

This is the manner in which he releases the members of the soul, and they become free from the five members of Sin — these five members of Sin too, which had gone forth — he binds them. He establishes the members of the soul, and places them, and refines them, and establishes them as a New Man, a son of Righteousness. The hour, then, in which he will mold and fashion and refine the New Man, then he brings forth five great living members, out of these five great members, and places them in the members of the New Man. He places the mind, which is love, in the mind of the New Man. The thought, also, which is faith — he places it in the thought of the New Man. And he refines the teaching, which is perfection: he places it in the teaching of the New Man. His counsel, which is his (own), is patience; he places it within his counsel. The wisdom too, which is his reflection — within the reflection of the New Man he is wont to purify the image of the speech, away from the speech of Sin, and adds within it his (own) speech, so that his his ⸢speech⸣ becomes a nourisher and his strengthener [. . .]. ⸢And⸣ this, then, is the manner in which he fulfills forth the twelve members. This is the manner. ⸢The New Man⸣, therefore, with his wisdom, his ⸢perfection⸣, ⸢they⸣ become righteous, being perfected forth. ⸢the man⸣ first, on the one hand, was running ⸢away⸣ [. . . . . .] but instead, this one runs himself now ⸢yet⸣ again ⸢upon⸣ his way, and his road, and his [. . . . .], again, ascending upward to the height, to the great Aeons of Greatness. ⸢This is⸣ in this manner, the Old Man is bound in the body. his greed, and his foolishness, in these five members of the body [. . . .]. the spirit of darkness is mingled inward with them in a bond, and in a strong distress.

The New Man himself reigns in his love, in his faith, in his perfection, in his patience; and in his wisdom — she too reigns; ⸢and⸣ the Mind of Light is the one who reigns over the All, reigning over him according to his heart's desire — for the members on the one hand ⸢in this manner⸣ in this manner, Sin is mingled inward; the Mind of Light himself is reigning; and a tribulation comes to be in the body, time after time.

There is a time, then, when Sin ascends upward in his foolishness, and stirs up the reflection, and confounds the wisdom and the prudence of the man, and gives the truth — the separation — out of his hand, into double-mindedness; and he proclaims words bitter and salt. SPIRITUAL READING

Know this: the whole inner life stands fast because the Lord's operative power holds it together in every member. But before regeneration, the self has already taken hold of this body and settled itself within its parts. It has built its dwelling out of the natural mind in its five self-loving aspects, and from this it lives.

The soul was given to be drawn from the Lord's five radiant registers; she was meant to know herself as receiving from him. Instead, she has been taken inward and bound into the five parts of the body. Mind is fastened in the bone, thought in the sinew, the teaching in the vein, counsel in the flesh, reflection in the skin. And in each of these places the self has set itself foremost: its own mind laid over the soul's mind, its thought over her thought, its teaching over her teaching, its counsel over her counsel, its reflection over her reflection. Its five members and the powers that serve it press down upon the soul's five faculties. They oppress her, drawing her hour by hour to every evil work, to all the sins of desire, to all the deformed shapes the self loves to wear.

So the soul has put on falsity and forgetfulness as her clothing. She has forgotten what she is made of, what kindred she belongs to, what manner is hers. She no longer knows the door of her own dwelling-place — she cannot find the way to call upward toward the One she came from. She has become an enemy to her own Father. What was given to her as her own light she keeps for herself alone, and within her this light is held captive by her claiming.

Then the Lord begins to cut. He severs the bonds. Faculty by faculty he draws the soul's parts free from the body in which the self has bound them, and in their place he binds the self itself. He raises the mind up out of the bone where it had been pressed; he looses the thought from the sinew and binds the self's thought there in its stead. He releases the teaching of the soul from the vein and binds the self's teaching in the vein. He raises the soul's counsel out of the flesh and binds the self's counsel in the flesh. He releases the soul's reflection from the skin and binds the self's reflection in the skin.

This is how he releases the members of the soul, so that they become free from the five members of the self — and those five which had gone forth claiming, he binds. He gathers the soul's faculties, sets them in their right places, refines them, and establishes them as a New Man, a son of righteousness.

When the hour comes that he molds and refashions and refines this New Man, then he brings forth five great living members out of those five and places them within the New Man's members. Into the mind he sets love. Into the thought he sets faith. Into the teaching he sets [its proper good]. Into the counsel he sets patience. Into the reflection he sets wisdom. He purifies the image of speech, drawing it away from the speech of self-love, and sets within it his own speech, so that what is uttered becomes nourishment and strength to the rational instead of betrayal.

This is the manner in which he fulfills the twelve members. With his wisdom they are made righteous and brought to perfection. Where before the soul ran downward, in error, away from herself, now she runs again upon her own way, her own road, back upward toward the heights, toward the great states of the divine outgoing.

In this same manner the Old Man is bound. His desire, his greed, his foolishness are held fast within the five members of the body. The breath of self-love is mingled inward with them as in a bond, and in this bond it is held in strong distress.

The New Man, meanwhile, reigns — reigns in his love, in his faith, in his completed perfection, in his patience; and his wisdom reigns also. The Lord ordering the rational rules over the whole, governing the heart's desire. Yet so long as the body still stands, this rule is hidden. The members on one side still carry the self mingled in them; the Lord ordering the rational reigns within, but tribulation keeps arising in the body, time after time.

There are seasons when self-love climbs upward in its foolishness and stirs up the reflection and throws the wisdom and prudence of the man into confusion. It snatches the discriminating truth out of his hand and casts him into double-mindedness, and it speaks within him words bitter and salt. When this sign of its turmoil arises in the circuit of the natural, even amid the encampments of the strong divine principles, disturbance arises again and again. Even the rational's faculties of attention, though set firm in the natural's circuit, are not visible there; they keep their post unseen.

> So it is also with the Lord ordering the rational: he is not manifest in the body. He is like those higher principles that operate without — great in themselves, but contracted, shrunken against the matter that is joined to each one of them. He too is great and lofty, but he has bent himself down and shrunk himself to suit this little body that has been fashioned. The pure principles outside stand gathered in the agreement of the whole, undefiled. He, set within, is hidden in his place.
> Behold, then, the hiddenness and the seeming shame of the Lord ordering the rational — how great they are. While he is at work, all the watch-posts of the body lie fallen at the feet of his array; all the reflections of the body are shut away from the snares of self-love. He constrains them, scatters them, and sets them on their feet again according to the purpose of his heart.
>
> And there is yet another thing greater still.

APPARATUS

[3] l. 7 ⲉⲩⲛ̄ — "there are"; pipeline restoration, confidence: low; 4-char opener of clause '{3} ⲉⲣⲉ many gods existing before him'; ⲉⲩⲛ̄ ('there are/exist') is the natural existential paired with circumstantial ⲉⲣⲉ.

[8] l. 10 ⲥⲁⲭ; editor; Editor restoration of ⲥⲁⲭⲛⲉ 'counsel' (the five faculties).

[17] l. 20 trace: . . .

[23] l. 46 ⲛⲉ ⲡ; pipeline restoration, confidence: low; Section opener restating the body-cosmos formula; copular plural ⲛⲉ with definite article fits 'are the five firmaments.'

[24] l. 46 ⲧⲁⲙⲓⲟⲛ — "the storehouses"; pipeline restoration, confidence: low; The reading 'five firmaments which are themselves the storehouses of the firmaments' fits the Five Storehouses lexicon entry as the rational's five-degree spine. Length plausible but unverified.

[25] l. 47 ⲁ; pipeline restoration, confidence: high; ⲥⲧⲉⲣⲉⲱⲙ{28} completes to ⲥⲧⲉⲣⲉⲱⲙⲁ 'firmament,' attested elsewhere in the same section.

[26] l. 50 ⲁ; pipeline restoration, confidence: high; ⲱ{35} ⲛ̄ⲧⲉ ⲡⲩⲧⲁⲩ 'up to the four (worlds)' — the surviving ⲱ is the start of ⲱⲁ 'up to.'

[28] l. 54 ⲡⲡ visible — possibly start of word ⲡⲡ[ⲱⲙⲟⲫⲟ]ⲣⲟⲥ continuing onto line 33

[29] l. 99 ⲭⲉ — "so that"; pipeline restoration, confidence: moderate; 3-char opener of a final-clause: ⲭⲉ ('that, in order that') introducing the purpose-clause about each guarding his post.

[39] l. 106 ⲁⲡⲥⲁⲛⲧⲡⲉ — “up to the upper side”; pipeline restoration, confidence: moderate; 8-char lacuna after ⲁⲫⲃⲱⲕ 'he went'; the next line 'third firmament that is above' makes ⲁⲡⲥⲁⲛⲧⲡⲉ 'to the upper side' the natural directional fill (8 chars).

[41] l. 107 ϣⲉ; editor; Editor restoration ⲁⲧⲟⲩⲣ[ϣⲉ]; root unidentified, possibly a verb of agitation/rousing or purification. Followed by lacuna of c. 4 chars.

[43] l. 110 ⲡⲗⲁⲥ; editor; Editor restoration: ⲁⲫ[ⲡⲗⲁⲥ]ⲥⲉ — Greek loanword πλάσσειν 'mold, fashion,' standard Manichaean cosmogonic verb.

[50] l. 115 ⲩ; editor; Editor: ⲟ̄[ⲩ] indefinite article completing ⲟⲩⲟ̄ⲱϣⲛⲧ 'a disturbance'.

[58] l. 132 ⲉ ⲛⲧ; editor; Editor restoration of relative-identifying formula ⲉⲧⲉ ... ⲡⲉ; the surviving ⲁϩ continues with the verb 'to be.'

[59] l. 133 ⲧ; editor; Editor restoration; ⲡϣⲁⲙⲧ 'the three' is required by the immediately following 'wheels' (the Three Wheels of fire/wind/water of Manichaean cosmology).

[63] l. 137 ⲍⲓ; editor; Editor restoration; ⲍⲓⲁⲩⲉ = ϩⲓⲟⲟⲩⲉ 'roads, paths' fits the preceding ⲙⲁⲓⲧ 'paths' in line 13.

[64] l. 137 ⲁ ⲧ; editor; Editor restoration; the directional preposition + article completes the purpose-clause structure.

[65] l. 138 ⲏⲩ; editor; Editor restoration of ⲡⲧⲏⲩ 'the wind'; the standard Manichaean triad with ⲡⲙⲁⲩ 'water' and ⲧⲥⲉⲧⲉ 'fire' (the three light-elements rising from the abortions at the Third Ambassador's revelation).

[67] l. 139 ⲧⲏ; editor; Restoration of ⲧⲏⲣⲟⲩ 'all of them'; 2-character lacuna fits ⲧⲏ; standard direct object after ⲡⲉⲧⲟⲃⲓⲟ 'who humbles.'

[68] l. 140 ⲃⲉ; editor; Editor restoration; ⲃⲉⲟ̄ⲥⲉ 'depth, abyss' (Crum ⲃⲏⲏⲥⲉ); same word recurs at line 23 (ⲧⲃⲉⲟ̄ⲥⲉ).

[75] l. 184 ⲁⲓⲥ — “stations”; editor; ⲙ̄ⲙⲁⲛⲣⲁⲓⲥ 'watching-place' as in line 25.

[80] l. 196 ⲛⲁⲙⲉ — “Truly”; pipeline restoration, confidence: moderate; ⲛⲁⲙⲉ 'truly, indeed' — 4-char adverb ending in ⲙⲉ matching the partial trace, fitting 'truly they were first to stand in hidden goodness.'

Three Days, Two Deaths, Three Plagues

Elaboration

The structural moments of the deeper work. T41 — three Great Days of regeneration met by two deaths: the Day of descent and refining, the Day of enthronement in the new aeon, the Day of unveiling in the Father's hidden storehouses; the temporal mingling that ends in fire, and the eternal severance of what cannot be raised. T42 — three permanent works at the consummation: the new luminous land, the binding of self-love's fire, the fixed separation set with its great guard. T43 — three afflictions by which the self's claim is undone: its own forms turning to bind it, the great fire releasing what was hidden, and the final splitting in which the active and receptive forms of self-love are gathered to their sealed places forever.

'The first Day is our Father the (First) Man, from the time when the First Man went down to the Deep of the Darkness and received submergence in him; and first, the Living Spirit, who had gone (down to him), brought him up. After this, the Man came up to the Father of Life and the Great One of the Spirit; he reigns over the works and the cosmoses above and those below.

SPIRITUAL READING

There are three great Days that stand within the whole of the soul's life, and there are two deaths. The Days are the structural moments of regeneration; the deaths are the two ways the soul ends in relation to what is given.

The first Day reaches from the moment the Lord's divine humanity descends into the depths of the natural mind and lets itself be submerged there, until that descent is taken up again. The Lord's operative power lifts what had gone down; what was let down for the soul's sake comes up again to the Father of Life and is established as ruling principle over the works of the natural mind, above and below. Within this same Day the Lord's call goes forth into the rational, takes its seat in the vehicle by which truth is borne through the day, and shows itself in its proper image — refining what is the Lord's out from all the works, walking in the height through the soul, until the time comes when the natural mind is loosened from its present arrangement, its works are undone, and the final gathering of all that belongs to the Lord is brought up. All of this is one Day: the divine humanity with the rational in its five degrees, set in the natural mind which has been mingled with it. Three movements complete this first Day — descent, rising, and the long refining that walks in the height until the consummation.

The second Day is the time when those interior states of the rational that have been ordered by light come into their thrones in the new state of the soul. They take up their dwelling in the new ground; they reign in the new aeon; and there the Lord's heavenly image is shown forth in them. The measure of this Day is given by the first: as the descent and refining stood, so the reigning is established in the same proportion. They reign in this manner, exalted in the new state.

The third and greatest Day is when the Lord shows his face fully, draws the soul inward to his hidden reserves — the storehouses he has held in his inmost until this hour — and the soul receives the sweetness of divine good and the fragrance of his love that pours out upon all. When the understanding looks upon what is shown, the eye is opened to breadth and to joy that does not end. His grace is enough; seeing his face is enough; the inmost is made new. At the summoning, the other received states are gathered with these in stillness and silence, and all are brought to perfection in one common measure. As each prior state dwelt in its own degree, in the dwelling fitted to it, so each comes into its own dwelling in the new state, and there the soul becomes rich beyond measuring, forever, without time. After this hour, the soul is not counted by hours or by days or by any reckoning of number; the Father is no longer hidden from it but goes on revealing himself forever. These are the three great Days the Lord has set, measured into the ordered count of his outgoing.

Of the two deaths: the first is the long death in which light has fallen into darkness and is mingled with what the soul has claimed — the unregenerate condition itself, which lasts until the light is purified and discriminated from the darkness in that final fire of love. What is then found to be the Lord's is built up and added to the gathering of all that is recognized at the consummation. This first death is for a season; it is the state through which the soul passes and which ends in purification.

The second death is the state of those in whom the self's claim has hardened against every offer of life — who, when divine light shines upon the natural mind, are separated from that light, no longer breathe the living air of true thought, are no longer nourished by the living soul that the Lord has set within the cosmos for nourishment, and are driven away from the final gathering. They are bound in the torment of their own works — the three regions of self-loving production — because they reviled the Holy Spirit through the generations of the cosmos. This death is not for a season; this is the death that is forever.

Three works which they shall fashion in the Light, according to a beginning. For they have no other form, nor any other end, by which they should cease willing to be; since they shall bind the Darkness, the Enemy, within them — he who has stood fast against the Light from the beginning. Therefore these works have no end of them, that they should cease willing to be.

The Third Work is the desolation of all the sinners who have set themselves in their works; they ⌈were separated⌉ from one another, they have set themselves according to the bitter works that they did. On account of this, they shall be crucified upon the Enemy, who exalted himself upward against the Greatness; they shall sojourn in this last bōlos at the time when there shall be poured into him with the icons of every form. They shall ⌈bind⌉ themselves with those creatures in the last bond forever, and they shall ⌈leave⌉ them as an ember-pit, as gloom, as a shadow without measure [. . . .] — which is the prison of the Enemy. They shall set her being a ⌈stone⌉ of boundary with a great guard, between the two: between the ⌈Darkness⌉ and the Enemy, so that they may not strike one another, nor ⌈hear⌉ each other's voice; rather, they shall be at great distance, separated from one another, forever and ever.

SPIRITUAL READING

At the close of regeneration three works are established in the soul, and these three, once made, have no end. They begin in light, and unlike everything else within the soul they will not pass; they have no other shape they could be turned into and no terminus at which they would cease willing to be. They stand because in them the self is finally bound — that which had stood up against the light from the beginning is now held fast inside its own bound, and cannot rise again.

The first work is the new ground of the natural mind, which itself now sheds light. The natural that had once been claimed and turned dark is set as a luminous earth: a regenerated substrate, fixed and shining, established as the ordered field upon which everything else of the soul will rest. What had been an alien body laid upon it has been turned away; the ground itself now gives forth the light it had only borrowed before.

The second work is the quenching of the fire that had belonged to self-love — the beam by which the self had cast its glare across the natural. The devouring love that had counterfeited light is put out at its source, so that nothing in the new ground burns with the old heat any longer.

The third work is the desolation of all that had set itself in its own works — those self-loves which had appropriated what flowed through them and made of it their own deed. Each is now set apart according to the bitter works it had done, and each is fixed upon the self that had once exalted itself against the Lord. They are gathered into the last bolos at the moment when into that place is poured the likeness of every form that cannot be raised — every image the self had generated of itself. There they are bound together in the last bond forever, sealed as a pit of embers, as gloom, as shadow without measure: the prison the self has made of itself by its own claiming.

And between this gathered, sealed mass and the soul that has come into the light, the Lord sets a great boundary with a strong guard, so that the two states can never again strike at each other, never again hear each other's voice, but stand at the greatest distance, fully separated, forever and ever. What is the Lord's is the Lord's; what was claimed and could not be laid off is held away in its own place; and the two are no longer mingled, no longer near, no longer able to disturb one another.

The First: that they took him from the midst, they separated them to his land of Darkness—who had gone forth from him; they reigned over him in this first war; they reckoned him, they bound him in the Living Principle.

The Second Plague is the time when there is a release-forth, a separation-forth, a dividing in the Great Fire; and they shall destroy and shake forth the icons— which are all those things that are hidden in them—and they shall be gathered inward ⌈to the⌉ bond, according to its first type, in the manner in which they were existing in her from the very first.

⌈The⌉ Third Plague that strikes the Enemy is the carrying-off ⌈of the⌉ last age, when they shall separate every thing forth, and they shall separate the male ⌈from the⌉ female. The male, indeed, they shall bind in the bolos; the fe- ⌈-male, herself,⌉ shall be ⌈cast⌉ inward to the tomb. For they shall reach to ⌈a great wall⌉ of stone in their midst, unto generation ⌈of generation, forever and⌉ ever.

ⲧⲍⲉ ⲧⲉ ⲧⲉⲓ̈ ⲉⲧⲥⲛⲁⲱⲱⲧⲉ ⲛⲭⲓ ⲧⲙⲡⲣⲉ ⲙⲡⲧⲭⲁⲭⲉ ⲍⲛ̄ ⲟⲩⲙⲡ⌈ⲏⲩⲉ⌉¹² ⲡⲉ ⲉⲥⲍⲁⲥⲉ ⲉⲥⲛⲁⲱⲧ ⲧⲉⲧⲉ ⲙⲛ ⲧⲟⲓⲛⲃⲱⲗ ⲁⲃⲁⲗ ⲱⲟⲟⲡ ⲛ̄ ⲍⲏⲧⲥ ⲁⲛⲏⲍⲉ ⲁⲗⲗⲁ [ⲁⲩⲡⲍ]¹³ ⲙ̄ⲙⲁⲡⲣ ⲁⲩⲙⲁⲡⲧ̄ ⲱⲁ ⲁⲛⲏⲍⲉ ⲁⲩⲡⲍ ⲛⲡⲁⲣⲭⲣ ⲁⲃⲁⲗ ⲁⲩⲡⲁⲣⲭⲧ̄ ⲁⲃⲁⲗ ⲱⲁ ⲁⲛⲏⲍⲉ

Such is the manner in which the fruit of the Enemy shall come to be in a heav ⌈heaven⌉ that is bitter and hard, in which there is no dissolution forth, existing in her forever; but ⌈they have split⌉ him with splittings, they have split him forever; they have split him with separations forth, they have separated him forth forever.

SPIRITUAL READING

The self suffers three bitter afflictions, three contests, three dangers — and the source of all of them is the light. Wherever divine truth begins to shine into the natural mind, the soul's self-claiming feels it as a wound, because every degree of recognition is a degree in which the claim is loosened from what it had taken as its own.

The first affliction comes at the very outset. What the self sends forth from itself to dominate the natural — its own particular self-loving arrangements — turns and reigns over it. The forms by which it tried to rule become the bond that holds it in place. It is taken from the midst, separated from what it thought was its possession, and bound within the living principle that the Lord has set at the center. This is the first contest: the soul discovers that what it claimed was claiming it back, and that the very life by which its selfhood operates is not its own.

The second affliction is the time of loosening, sorting, and dividing in the great fire of love. Whatever the self had hidden within itself — every interior good and truth it had taken as its own and shut away inside its claim — is shaken out and gathered inward to its proper place. What was always the Lord's is restored to the order it had at the first, before the soul ever claimed it. This is felt by self-love as destruction, because what is being undone is precisely the structure by which it kept what was not its own; but what is actually happening is the return of every concealed good to the arrangement it held from the beginning.

The third affliction is the final separation, when every thing is discriminated. The active form of self-love — the self in its asserting strength — is gathered into its own settled mass and sealed there. The receptive form of self-love — the self in its inward holding — is brought inward to its tomb. Between them, fixed forever, stands the firmness of what cannot be moved. The self's fruit comes to its own heaven, heavy and bitter, where there is no further unbinding: it is split, divided, and separated from the soul forever. What the soul had claimed is at last set apart from the soul, and the long mingling is over.

APPARATUS

[1] l. 2 ⲑ; editor; Editor restoration: ⲗⲑ = 39 in Coptic numerals; chapter number framing the title.

[13] l. 24 ⲟⲩⲓⲧⲉ ⲙ̄; editor; Editor restoration: completes ⲁⲩⲧϩⲟⲩⲓⲧⲉ ⲙ̄- 'they did first / made first these,' from ⲧⲍⲟⲩⲓ̈ⲧⲉ in glossary.

[14] l. 25 ⲛϩⲟⲟⲩⲉ ⲉⲧⲁⲩⲧⲛⲛⲁⲩ — "Those whom they have sent"; editor; Editor restoration: completes ⲡⲓⲱⲁⲣⲡ ⲛϩⲟⲟⲩⲉ 'this first Day' and introduces relative clause continuing into line 36.

[16] l. 32 ⲁⲓⲱⲛ; editor; Editor's restoration; preceded by ⲡ- and follows ⲍⲙ̄ 'in the.' Word ⲡⲁⲓⲱⲛ ⲛ̄ⲃ̄ⲡⲉ 'new aeon' is the formulaic phrase repeated throughout the passage.

[19] l. 37 ⲡⲁⲓⲱⲛ ⲛⲃ̄ⲡⲉ; editor; Editor restores [ⲡⲁ] in mid-line and end of line continues to ⲡⲉ at start of line 10. The full restoration completes the formulaic ⲡⲁⲓⲱⲛ ⲛ̄ⲃ̄ⲡⲉ 'new aeon.'

[21] l. 40 ⲍⲓⲕⲱⲛ; editor; Editor's restoration; parallel to line 6 ⲡⲓⲱⲧ ⲛⲁⲟ̄ⲱⲗⲡ ⲁⲃⲁⲗ ⲛⲧⲉϩⲍⲓⲕⲱⲛ 'the Father shall reveal forth his image.'

[25] l. 42 ⲛϩⲭ; editor; Editor's restoration; ⲛϩⲭⲧⲟⲩ continues the verb ⲭⲉⲥⲧ 'convey upward' from line 12 with 3pl object suffix.

[26] l. 42 ⲛⲧⲉⲡⲓⲱⲧ; pipeline restoration, confidence: moderate; 8 chars; 'storehouses of the Father' — the Father's hidden storehouses (lexicon).

[27] l. 43 ⲡⲱⲛⲋ; pipeline restoration, confidence: moderate; 5 chars; 'the life of the soul, gushing upon all' — the divine life-water imagery of consummation.

[28] l. 43 ϒ ⲧⲏⲣⲟⲩ; pipeline restoration, confidence: moderate; 5 chars; ϩⲭⲱϒ ⲧⲏⲣⲟⲩ 'upon them all'; reading: 'pours out upon all.'

[29] l. 44 ⲡ; editor; Editor's restoration of article/demonstrative for the qualitative ⲉⲧϩⲓ 'who came' (3sg.f referring to fragrance/image).

[30] l. 44 ⲓ; editor; Editor restores final ⲓ to complete ⲡⲉⲧϩⲓ 'she who came' (qualitative of ⲉⲓ 'come').

[31] l. 45 ⲛⲁⲟⲩⲁⲛϩ — “shall be opened”; pipeline restoration, confidence: low; 7 chars; 'their eyes shall be revealed/opened' before ⲛ̄ⲟⲩⲁⲥⲧⲛ̄ 'with breadth.'

[33] l. 47 ⲡⲟⲥ ⲧⲏⲣⲟⲩ — “all”; pipeline restoration, confidence: moderate; 5 chars with partial 'ⲡⲟⲥ': completing ⲕⲁⲣⲡⲟⲥ 'fruits' with ⲧⲏⲣⲟⲩ 'all.'

[34] l. 48 ⲥ; editor; Editor restores ⲥ- onset for ⲥⲉⲣ̄ⲃⲣ̄ⲡⲉ 'they shall be made new' (3pl future).

[35] l. 48 ⲍⲛ ⲟⲩ; editor; Editor's restoration; ⲍⲛ ⲟⲩⲍⲣⲁⲕ 'in a stillness' parallels ⲟⲩⲕⲁⲣⲁⲓⲧⲉ̄ 'a silence' in line 20.

[43] l. 58 ⲡⲓ; editor; Editor restores ⲡⲓ- (demonstrative) for ⲡⲓⲛⲉⲩ 'this hour'; standard formula matching ⲙ̄ⲡⲓⲛⲉⲩ in line 25.

[48] l. 61 ⲧⲉ ⲧⲙ̄; editor; Editor's restoration of ⲛ̄ⲧⲉ ⲧⲙ̄ⲛⲧⲛⲁⲟ̄ 'of the Greatness'; standard title 'Father of the Greatness.'

[53] l. 75 ⲛⲓϩⲉ ⲉⲧⲁⲛⲉ̄; editor; Editor restoration; the air receives the living breath, paralleling the Light/glory clause of line 8

[54] l. 76 ⲍⲏⲧⲟⲩ ⲡⲉ — “in them”; pipeline restoration, confidence: low; 7 chars; 'is in them' — the living Soul that is in those of the cosmos for nourishment.

[58] l. 78 trace: ⲍⲛ . ⲉⲗⲟⲥ ⲟⲩ

[59] l. 79 trace: ⲙⲡ

[60] l. 79 trace: ⲭ . ⲩ ⲙⲛ . . .

[61] l. 80 ⲍⲱⲱⲩ ⲛⲉ — “themselves are”; pipeline restoration, confidence: low; 5 chars; 'their works themselves are' before 'three places yonder.'

The Three Malformations and Their Cleansing

Elaboration

The central operation of the deeper work. T44 — the three settled malformations of selfhood (salted truth, darkened understanding, self-consuming love) hidden together in every self-loving arrangement, met by the wise physician who works in stillness with antidote upon antidote, until the inner image being born within the natural at last comes forth. T45 — the threefold purification by descent and answering ascent: pure truth meets corrupted truth, light meets darkness, love meets self-love, each pair drawn out by correspondence-of-likeness. T46 — the Living Spirit's three formative acts: scattering wind, setting wheels, casting down deceits, fashioning the bound circuit of the natural with twelve seals upon it. T47 — the Lord's forestructure: every disorder met by an order already prepared, the holding-place existing before the thing held, the bound set before the falling.

to the ⌈three⌉ of the places of deceit: that of the water, that of the darkness, and that of the fire — those hidden in the body of all the archons that are above, while the Living Spirit himself is likenened to the wise physician. The three indeed of medicine of the healing — they are the three garments which the Living Spirit wears upon his body — that of the wind, that of the water, with that of the fire are they which he established within them, of the works that are below. For in the three garments in question, he revealed himself forth to the archons that are above, in single-mindedness, in ⌈a flame⌉ and a trembling, in an expulsion forth — he poured forth from there the three places of deceit — that of the water, that of the darkness, with that of the fire — while the work of the places of deceit again is likened in this manner, as the manner of a child being in the womb of his mother, wearing many kinds of garments. The first is the marrow; the second is the bone; the third is the sinew; the fourth is the flesh; the fifth is the vein; the sixth is the bond; the seventh is the skin of the body — that which clothes upon him; the other garment also ⌈belongs to them⌉ ⌈This Youth is⌉ in the womb of his mother. His other mother is likened in this manner, as the manner of this child: the marrow and the bone, the sinew, and the flesh, the vein, with the bond, with the skin When the teaching that he bears is at hand, together with the man who is mounted upon her — they being equal with her — at the giving of the Youth: these together with the others — they are perfected and become eight teachings. Thou findest the soul, then, of the Youth being within all these, defiled by them; and look you, that you may see, that the time when the scent of the energies of the demon that is brought forth in the bond of the offspring shall be revealed forth to the Youth — straightway he ⌈comes⌉ shall reveal them all forth, and he comes forth out of their action which they have revealed forth, lest a wound and a blow come to be in the body of the Youth, according to the manner of the Youth who shall reveal — to the change of his thought. So also is this, which they liken to the strongholds — that of the Mother, that of the Darkness, with that of the Fire — and the energies themselves which are open without ⌈profit⌉ belong to the Youth, that they may be likened unto him and revealed forth in him. This is the third living teaching that the Spirit wears upon his ⌈his⌉ body, since in the likeness of the teaching of the Mother [————] [ca. 17] from the archons that have moved, [ca. 17] they themselves are their death, together with they whose veins and hatred are full beneath them. In the likeness, also, of the teaching of the Wind that has been revealed forth from her interior: she drove down, she drew forth all the shadow of destruction with a mire, and poured (it) down to the earth; afterwards she spread her forth, she bound her in the stronghold of the Darkness which encircles the cosmos. By the teaching, also, of the Living Fire, in her burning, in her hardness — the fire of the Darkness has been poured forth out of all the archons; she was cast upon this earth; she was spread her forth yet again forth from the earth; she was bound in the stronghold which encircles all the worlds — they call it 'the Wall of the Great Fire.' These three teachings, then, that have been established in them, of these three works — he did not strip them bare at one and the same time, but he laid each one of them bare at the proper time, in his own season; he ⌈cast it⌉ cast it down to the earth Thus is this, in which the cosmos [ca. 16] in the strongholds [. . .] of the strongholds, thus [ca. 14] of the work and the economy of the dwelling-places that they drove forth and scattered them out from the heavens to the earth — it is a food and a profit of the twelve great works. This is the first work, in order that the evil shall not may not abound in the cosmos, neither in the creatures, nor in the treesand she stood firm in three works. The first is this work. The second is the Error [ca. 12] forth, that 'if it were thus, if they had not driven her forth from the dwelling-place there and had not cast her down from the heavens to below, then the lions would still be existing until now in the archons that are above ⌈of the heavens⌉ ⌈and would be⌉ the fire that would draw downward and the dripping that would fall downward. The twelfth: that you should also set down all the works of the Half-region, which are hidden away from the Aeons of Light, of the lineage of the wall of fire that surrounds the whole structure of these works that are defiled, manifest themselves; they are within his ⟦places⟧ they came to be these twelve great works of the lineage of the Mighty Ones who ate. They were banished out of the firmaments to the earth — yet not from the earth alone were they banished, but to the honor [. . . . . .] ⟦while⟧ the three words of Life keep watch over them, those who [———] and they set them upon their feet upon them in a great might, ⟦they keep watch over them⟧, that they may keep watch over them at the time of the end. SPIRITUAL READING

The self does not take a single shape. It establishes itself in the soul as three settled dwellings — three strongholds in which the natural mind is held by self-love. One is the dwelling where natural truths have been salted by self-claiming. One is the dwelling where understanding has gone dark from refusing the light it was given. One is the dwelling where the soul's love itself burns with self-consumption. These three are hidden together in the body of every self-loving arrangement of the natural mind, layered into it, woven through its members.

The Lord meets each of these in its own register and at its own time. He does not strip them all away at once. A wise physician, faced with a body in which several diseases work together — one in this member, another in the inner organs, gall in one place, poison in another — does not pour every medicine into the patient at once. He finds an antidote for each, gives each in its proper season, with another medicine for the wound, another to soothe what has been afflicted. He works in stillness and in silence, with art, until each hidden trouble is uprooted at its end and brought up by the scent of the medicines that consume.

So the Lord operates by his Living Spirit, which is his operative power going forth into the natural. He puts on three garments to do this work: a garment of thought, by which he reaches into perception; a garment of truth in the natural degree, by which he sustains what can still be sustained; and a garment of rightly ordered love, by which what was burning with self-love is given another fire to burn by. In single-mindedness, in trembling, with a great expulsion, he poured the three places of deceit out of the place where they had set themselves up as if they belonged on high.

Consider what is happening in the soul under this operation. It is like a child within the womb, wearing many layers — marrow, bone, sinew, flesh, vein, bond, skin — and wrapped beyond all these in the womb itself. The inner image being born within the natural is the Lord's own form taking shape in the rational, and that forming inmost is enclosed by all these layers of the natural's making. When the moment of birth has come, when the scent of the medicine that consumes reaches the energies which the self has bred around the inner form, those energies are exposed in the same instant, and the inner form comes out of their hold without wound or blow — because each layer is laid off at its proper time, in order, none too soon and none too late. So also with the strongholds of water, darkness, and fire: each must be exposed and laid off in its season, so that what is being formed within is not torn by the laying-off.

By the operation of thought going forth, the whole shadow of destruction was drawn down out of where it had set itself up and was bound into the stronghold of darkness that encircles the natural mind — bound, that is, so that it could no longer pass itself off as belonging on high. By the operation of rightly ordered love, the fire of self-love was poured out of every form of the self that had carried it, was cast down into the natural ground, was driven up out of the ground again, and was finally enclosed within the wall of love that surrounds the whole cosmos of the rational — the outer bound by which divine love itself holds all things together.

There is providence in why this is so, and in why the self's three forms have been scattered, bound, and restricted to their appointed places. Twelve reasons stand under the work.

The first: that self-love should not abound without measure in the natural mind, in its creatures, in its perceptions and works. If it had been left unscattered, every single soul would carry the weight of self-love that is now diffused across thousands; not one could have stood under it.

The second: against the error that whispers, "if it were really evil, why should it have been left alone?" Were the self not visibly driven down from where it had claimed to belong, the soul would conclude that the strong self-loves it sees in the natural were always meant to be there. Desire would pass uncorrected through every perception, every fruit of perception, every ultimate of natural life.

The third: that the discrete degrees of the rational, with their firmaments holding them apart, might be kept distinct from the burdens that would otherwise press down upon them; that what is rich within the soul should not be crushed beneath what is heavy.

The fourth: that the place where the soul's good ripens may be made clean for harvesting.

The fifth: that there should be a wealth of received truth held in the doctrinal vessels which carry truth across the natural — chosen and holy reservoirs that would not exist if the natural were left unbounded.

The sixth: that the dwelling-states of the upper rational may stand united, complete, at rest, neither wanting nor disturbed, with no weakness left within them.

The seventh: that the regenerated rational may sprout up at the rivers that give the light forth and may arrive at its proper places and regions.

The eighth: that great fashionings and preparations may be brought to completion, that all works may be sealed up.

The ninth: that those who are sent to the natural mind may give a sign of the dissolution of the old order, the head of its undoing.

The tenth: that there may be those who release and those who purify, carrying through the whole work to the end.

The eleventh: that the self and all its host may at last be cast to the country outside — for self-love begrudges the soul that has become rich in the Lord, and the inner aeons of light, the hearts of peace, the place of honor and mercy where the joy of those who dwell within does not fade and never departs, must be kept apart from that envy.

The twelfth: that all the works of the half-formed region, the works that are defiled and hidden away from the inner aeons of light, may be set within the wall of fire — within the bound of love — that surrounds the whole structure, manifest as what they are within their proper limit and no further.

So these twelve great works stand around the three malformations that were driven from where they had set themselves up. The three sayings of Life keep watch over them. They are set firm upon them in a great strength, that they may keep watch until the time of the end.

Then he drew them out, he cast them out from this earth in the three garments — that of the Wind, that of the Mother, with that of the Fire — those mounted upon his body. He poured them out, he cast them down upon the three roads ⌜those⌝ which he established forth in the founding of the cosmos [. . . . . .] no one remained they have been set upon the faces of the earth out of the three strongldes, those there, so that you may discern their likeness and their type, when they are maniout of the cosmos. The element which has been prepared in the water is the burning, with the salt of the sea, the salty (one), which is within, which surrounds to the cosmos. But the preparation, on its part, which he has prepared as the Darkness is, this mountain of darkness which exists in the encompassing-circuits of the side-of-radiance unto the end. The time when the sun shines in the cosmos, no lamp of light becomes manifest forth from it because of the darkness which gushes out from him, covering the heaven from him. The preparation, on its own part, which has been left set in the fire upon the earth — these are the mountains, all of them, with the springs, in which the channels of the fire gush up forth from there, and they manifest forth there. For these are the preparation of the great stronghold — this then which has been mingled with the fire that comes upward out of the earth into the mountains and the slopes [. . . . . .] the places where no tree grows in them, [. . . . . .] abound exceedingly in that very place, through the limb and [. . . .] [ca. 30] where no tree grows in that very place.

concerning the strongholds that surround the cosmos: for what reason were they not sent forth from the heaven to the fossae upon which they were established? But rather they were sent forth first to the earth, then they raised them up out of the earth, and they cast them upward to the height.

the Father of Life sent forth the strongholds from the heaven to the earth — he sent them forth for this matter, in order that the water also and the darkness and the fire which exist in the three earths might draw and come up against those that came down from above the earths [. . . . .] purification, and they purify them. For this reason he sent forth the strongholds downward to the earth, those of the water, those of the darkness, and those of the fire — in order that the water, the darkness and the fire that exist in the earths might draw upward against those that came down from above. First indeed, before everything, he sent forth the water of Error in their midst, of the archons that are above. He purified the firmaments out of the water ⌈of Error⌉ [.] the waters of darkness; he sent them forth downward, in the manner that the Waters fell from heaven to earth; thus also are these waters, themselves, which are below in the earth: they too were drawn; they came upward from below to meet the waters that had come forth from heaven to the lands. They purified the waters from the Darkness which is in them. Then they drove them forth to the outside, casting them into a great place of deceit, and a shore of the sea — this which surrounds the cosmos, this in which the ships sail. After the water, was poured out the Darkness; they purified the firmaments, rolling forth from there the Darkness gathered upon him; they cast (it) down to the earth. As they purified the firmaments, so also is this (the manner) in which they purified the lands. SPIRITUAL READING

When the Lord, as the source from which life proceeds, sends his operative power into the natural mind, he sends it in three accommodations: as the moving medium of perception, as truth in the natural degree, and as love. He does not pour these into the natural and leave them there. He sends them first downward to meet the natural, and then draws them up again, casting what was disordered out to a place set aside for it beyond the bound of the cosmos.

This is the order. First, before anything else, the Lord sends truth in the natural degree downward against the falsity that has spread itself through the firmaments above and the lands below. The pure truth descending and the disordered natural-truth within the soul are drawn toward each other; they meet; and in the meeting the natural waters are sorted from what was bitter in them. What cannot be conjoined is driven out beyond the cosmos and gathered into the salt sea that rings the natural mind — the place of deceit at the outer shore, through which the doctrinal vessels still must navigate, but which is no longer mingled with the inner waters.

Then in the same way the Lord acts on the darkness. The pure descending light meets the darkness still lodged in the firmaments, gathers it, rolls it down out of the upper degrees, and casts it to the lands below; and there the darkness already in the lands is drawn up to meet what fell, so that both may be driven out together and the firmaments stand cleansed.

Then in the same way the Lord acts on the fire. Love descends from above into the lands; the fire of self-love hidden in the lower natural is drawn upward to meet its kindred; love is added upon love until what cannot be raised is separated and cast into the western place prepared for it outside the cosmos. As the firmaments above were cleansed to become the way along which the illumining lights move, so the lands below are cleansed by this same operation — perception, truth, and love driven upward through the middle as three powers ascending out of the bearing principle that supports the natural mind from beneath.

So the strongholds of the Lord's operative power were not simply established in the upper places where they finally sit. They were sent down first into the natural, and then drawn up out of it; and they bear, in the form they finally take, the marks of that descent and ascent. What burns and what is salt at the outer rim of the natural, what stands as the dark mountain on the side where the radiance comes, and what gushes up as fire-channels in the mountains within the lands — these are not native features of the natural mind. They are the residue of a purification: the places where descent met what was disordered, drew it up, and cast it out, so that the rest of the natural might stand cleansed. Where this purifying meeting has passed through, no perception grows of itself; the place is left bare, marked by the operation that sorted it.

This is why the Lord works in the natural by sending his power down before drawing it up. The disordered water, darkness, and fire that already lived within the soul could not be discriminated from what is given unless something pure first descended to meet them. They had to be drawn out to meet the descending pure, so that the meeting itself could perform the discrimination. The soul does not discover, by looking inward at its own waters, which of them are the Lord's. Only when the Lord's truth descends into them, and the natural's own waters rise up to meet that truth, does the sorting happen — and what cannot be raised is set apart, cast out beyond the cosmos, while what remains stands clean as the waters of received truth, the firmaments as ordered degrees, and the lands as the natural ground prepared for life.

scattered the wind forth [upon] them; blew upon them; raised them up; washed (them) forth from the earth in the waters. And the Error and the Answering of the three places-of-deceit — that of [the water, that of] the Darkness, [and] that of the fire, which had been poured upon him — they drove them away [ca. 15] the seas which exist within their shores and the places of deceit. Concerning this: The counsels of the salt sea — since a saltness and a bitterness grew through the casting-forth of the purification of the three places of deceit. When the Father of Life came, as he was about (to go) upward in his going to the Height, he cast the wheel of the stars; he washed it forth; he expelled forth from it the entire dragon that was within it; he cast it down to the great sea which is within in the manner of the ⌈encompassing⌉ of the four. Now this Error — that dragon — by the casting-forth from the wheel was cast down and was mingled inward with the counsels of the sea. His enthumesis alone gathered him within; she gathered him to his fellows in in this manner she established him; she ripened him. the boundary of the sea — with the seal of moments and hours sealed within it; the seal of days and months and years; the character of the stars and the zodiac-signs ⌈all of them⌉ which came to be from them. They cast it forth from their inner-part; they cast it to the sea as an icon, with the seals and the faces and the teachings and the counsels of ⌈the darkness⌉, sealed in the body of that boundary. Since it is their entire equipment — therefore each star that divides, each zodiac-sign that goes around — there is one who moves it, there is one who establishes it. They cast it to the sea in this manner, like a cloud pouring out a downpour into the midst of the sea. He was rained down after him entirely, through the energeia of the powers and the steersmanship of the angels. He was driven down to the firmness, the place where they established it, in the founding of the cosmos. And she herself, the sea, became to him [. . . . . .] as one who ⌈shall act⌉ acts as Chief-Image-Painter for him and as Chief-Architect. She painted him in a likeness different from the other equipment of the bodies of the sea.

The second: that he gives a fastening and a guard to the wheel and to the zodiac-signs that are bound in it, so that the time, indeed, when they shall desire to go up to the upper place — again the prow of the sea, drawing them down in the manner of an iron fastening, so that they may have no power to go up. And so that the time when the powers of the wheel shall take counsel for a work of guile and come to their heart to come down to the earth, they shall not be able to come down because of this peg fastened into the wheel which is upon the ⸢palisade-stake⸣ of the firmaments. The one (reason) is this; but the other on account of her watchers, the unsleeping ones, who are placed upon her, sifting her at every moment. The third work: that the wind, the water, and the fire that gush forth from the encompassing of the sea, and the rivers that flow over the face of the earth, pouring out into the sea, and the abiding-rains that come downward, and the Error and the metarrismos (transmigration) that comes down upon her — that sea shall serve as the pandocheion (all-receiver) and the gathering-place inward of all these things.

SPIRITUAL READING

When the Lord's operative power has set in order the works and the structures of the natural mind, he rises and stands firm upon the ground he has prepared, and from there he gives the sign by which the recurrent cycles of purification are set in motion. The cycles begin to turn. Thought is scattered through the upper regions, breath is blown upon what lies below, the natural mind is washed and raised. Falsity from evil, and the deceits that answer to it in three forms — the deceit borne by natural truth, the deceit borne by the absence of light, the deceit borne by self-love's burning — are driven down and confined within the bounds set for them, where they appear as the bitterness and saltness of natural perceptions stirred against themselves. The bitter taste in the soul's natural waters is the sign that purification has begun: what the self claimed is being separated out from what the soul truly receives.

When the Lord at the register of life-bearing rises toward the Height, he takes the entire circuit of states the soul passes through — the whole revolving sphere with its fixed points and signs, its characters and seals — and casts it down out of itself into the lower natural mind. There the falsity-from-evil, expelled from the upper revolution, mingles itself with the counsels of natural perception, and the self's own desire gathers it inward and binds it to its fellows, ripening it into a settled form. So a boundary is set within the natural mind, sealed with the marks of moments and days and years and the characters of all the states the soul passes through. The self, working as if it were itself the image-maker and the architect, fashions this boundary into a particular shape unlike anything else in the natural — a fixed vessel of its own design.

Imagine a craftsman who carries the molds of many golden coin-forms, casts them into the fire, and makes from them one icon bearing the impress of all the seals and forms — completed into a single body. Just so the self, out of many claimed teachings and many self-counsels, fashions for itself one organized vessel within the lower natural, a body summing up all the residue of the soul's revolving states.

The Lord permits this fashioning, and uses it for three works of regeneration.

The first: the whole circuit, having been gathered into this vessel, winnows itself. The soul's recurrent cycle separates and purifies itself of the burden it carries. As the discrete degrees of the rational were purified one by one, sifted clean of the burden of the three deceits, so now the lower vessel itself is set to winnow itself — to lay off, from within itself, the burden and the falsity that are in it.

The second: the vessel gives a fastening and a guard to the whole revolving sphere and to the fixed states of self-love bound within it. When those organized self-loves wish to rise up and claim the higher state, the lower vessel draws them down like an iron peg, so that they have no power to ascend; and when they take counsel together for some work of guile and wish to come down and corrupt the natural ground, they cannot descend either, held fast by the same peg fixed into the wheel that runs along the firmaments. The other reason they cannot move is the unsleeping watchers set over the vessel, sifting it at every moment, never letting its organized claims slip past unchecked.

The third: every motion that descends — the winds of thought, the waters of natural truth, the fires of love that gush forth from the sea, the rivers flowing over the face of the natural ground and pouring back into it, the rains of influx coming down, and even the falsity-from-evil and the transmigrations of state that come down upon it — all of these are received into this lower vessel as the all-receiver, the gathering-place inward of everything. All the power and life that descend to the natural come into this place. By the breath the vessel itself draws in, drawing everything to itself, the natural reaches fullness and is established without further motion of its own — held still, so that what was scattered may be gathered, and what was claimed may be laid off, and what is the Lord's may be recognized as his.

Beforehand, before they drove forth Error and the dregs of the Darkness from the creation, they established for him Gehennas, that they may seize in them — Error — until the dissolution forth of the world.

Beforehand, before the bexeue are clothed — these whose orders are clothed in the archonic host, in the archonic host which is upperside and the lower side, those who [ca. 18] outside, with the other tyrants who are in their heart, they tyrannize among the dark beasts and the clouds and the winds and the spirits and the birds — they were established in the great sea which is outside the seven of the upper-place, the seven places where they cast them down to them, into the abyss with the darkness of the abyss. Beforehand again, before the abortions [ca. 16] to the earth, they cast inward [ca. 16] they gathered them inward, that they might dwell within them. Beforehand also, before the Watchers transgressed and came down below from the height, they were fashioned (and) established for themselves a prison in the depth of the land of the lower side, of their dwellings.

[ϩατεϩη][32] [ⲉⲙⲡⲁⲧⲟⲩϫⲡⲟ][33] ⲛ̄ⲱϩⲣⲉ ⲛⲛⲅⲓⲅⲁⲥ ⲛⲉⲧⲁⲩⲉ̈ⲓⲙⲉ [ⲉⲛ][34] ⲛⲟⲩ[ⲇⲓⲕⲁⲓⲟⲥⲩⲛⲏ][161] ⲛϩⲏⲧⲟⲩ ⲙⲛ̄ ⲟⲩⲙⲛ̄ⲧⲛⲟⲩⲧⲉ ⲁⲩⲕⲟⲥⲙⲏ ⲁⲩ[ⲥⲙⲓⲛⲉ][35] ⲛⲉⲩ ⲙ̄ⲙⲁⲃⲧⲉⲥⲉ ⲙ̄ⲡⲟⲗⲓⲥ ϫⲉ ⲉⲣⲉ ⲛ̄ⲱϩⲣⲉ ⲛ[———][36]ⲟⲩⲱϩ ⲛϩⲏⲧⲟⲩ ⲛⲉⲧⲛⲏⲩ ⲁϫⲡⲉ ⲛⲉⲩⲙⲛⲉⲩ ⲉⲣⲏ[———][37]ⲧⲉⲱⲁⲩⲇ ⲙⲏⲧⲛ̄ⲱⲉ ⲛⲣⲁⲙⲡⲉ ⲉⲩⲁⲛϩ

Beforehand, before they begot the sons of the Giants, who knew not a righteousness within themselves, but with godliness — they ordered and established for themselves twelve cities, that the sons of the Giants might dwell within them — those who were yet to be begotten — each one with another, those who would (live) for a thousand years, being alive.

Before any of the soul's deceptions break forth and go down into the natural — before the soul has yet produced from itself the false places where it would otherwise be lost — the Lord has already shaped and established three vessels of containment, fitted in advance to hold them and bind them where they belong. Whatever the self will throw up has already been provided for; the holding-place exists before the thing held.

Before the boundary of the natural perceptions was drawn out from the soul's full circuit, the Lord at the register where life proceeds had already raised a wall within the great sea — within the prepared structures of the natural mind — and within that wall the doctrinal vessels carry truth across the waters of the soul's perception. The waters do not lie open and lawless; the bound is set, and the conveyances of doctrine sail within the bound.

Before the disordered natural fell into the sea where Enthumesis works her molding — before what the soul has claimed could descend into the matrix of self-loving formation — the Lord at the register of life had already established a place for it: a settled position between the upper currents of thought and the lower, with the four winds of the upper region and the harbors of the heavens above, and a great expanse drawing the disordered natural into the midst of the worlds where the Lord giving stable form to the rational reaches it, lays hold of it between wind and wind, and stands fast upon it until the end of the cosmos. Even what falls falls into a place the Lord has prepared, and is held there.

Before Error and the dregs of darkness were driven out from the creation, structures had already been established to grasp them and hold them within bounds until the world's end. The wandering of the rational has its containment ready before it wanders.

Before the particular forms of the self clothed themselves in their host — the dark beasts, the heavy clouds, the storm-winds, the breaths of self-love, the deceiving thoughts, organized as tyrannies in the soul's inward parts on the upper and lower side — these too were set within the bound of the great salt sea outside the seven firmaments, in the place of the abyss where they are cast down. Their tyranny has its assigned floor.

Before the failed productions of the self fell to the natural mind, they were gathered inward, and a dwelling was given to them within. What the soul brings forth that cannot live is not loose; it has its enclosure.

Before the disordered states of attention transgressed and the rational came down from its proper height, a holding-place was fashioned for them in the depth of the lower natural, fitted to their dwellings. And from them issued the great offspring of self-love, forms that knew within themselves a kind of counterfeit godliness; they ordered themselves and built for themselves twelve fixed structures of self-love, that the generations to come might dwell within them, each of them set to live out its full circuit of a thousand years.

The whole teaching is one teaching: every disorder the soul will produce has already been answered, in advance, by a structure of containment in the Lord's order. The self does not surprise the Lord. Before the claim is made, the place where the claim will be held is already prepared; and at the end, what was held will be discriminated and the soul will recognize that even the holding was the Lord's work.

[48] l. 48 ⲉⲥⲧⲛⲧⲁⲛⲧ ⲙⲡⲓⲣⲏⲧ; editor; standard correspondence-formula opening, parallel to lines 1, 16, 27

[49] l. 49 ⲙⲛ ⲡⲕⲉⲥ ⲡⲙⲟⲩⲧ ⲙⲛ ⲧⲥⲁ; editor; completes the canonical body-parts list (marrow → bone → sinew → flesh → vein → bond → skin)

[50] l. 49 ϣⲁ; editor; completes ⲡϣⲁⲁⲣⲉ 'the skin' — terminal item in the seven-part body series

[60] l. 61 ⲡⲁ; editor; Editor restores ⲡⲁ in series ⲡⲁ-ⲡⲙⲁⲩ / ⲡⲁ-ⲡⲕⲉⲕⲉ / ⲡⲁ-ⲧⲥⲉⲧⲉ — 'that of the Mother / Darkness / Fire.'

[63] l. 63 ⲁⲃⲁⲗ ⲙ̄ⲙⲁϩ ⲛⲉⲓ; editor; Editor restores; standard formula ⲟⲩⲱⲛϩ ⲁⲃⲁⲗ ⲙ̄ⲙⲁϩ 'reveal forth in him.'

[65] l. 65 ⲡⲉϩ — “his”; pipeline restoration, confidence: low; 'his (body)' — fits 7-char gap before ⲥⲱⲙⲁ

[68] l. 70 ⲍⲏⲧⲥ; editor; Editor restores ⲍⲏⲧⲧ̄ (= Lyc ϩⲏⲧⲧ̄) 'her belly, her interior.' Followed by lacuna of ~4 chars.

[69] l. 74 ⲕⲉ ⲁⲃⲁⲗ; editor; Editor; completes ⲡⲕⲉⲕⲉ + standard ⲁⲃⲁⲗ 'forth' continuing the sentence.

[78] l. 81 ⲁϩⲛⲁϫ — “cast it”; pipeline restoration, confidence: low; 'he cast' — fits partial ⲉⲕ following [79] l. 81 ⲁⲡⲕⲁⲍ — “cast it”; editor; Editor; ⲁⲡⲕⲁⲍ 'to the earth' parallels ⲁⲡⲓⲧⲛⲉ ⲁⲡⲕⲁⲍ 'down to the earth' in line 22.

[81] l. 91 ⲧⲕⲁⲕⲓⲁ ⲣ̄; editor; ⲧⲕⲁⲕ visible at line-end, immediately followed by ⲡⲍⲟⲩⲟ 'abundance/multiplication'; the standard Coptic idiom is ⲣ̄-ⲡⲍⲟⲩⲟ 'do/make abundance' = 'abound, multiply.' Subject is ⲧⲕⲁⲕⲓⲁ 'evil' (Gk κακία already in vocab).

[82] l. 93 ⲁⲩⲱ; pipeline restoration, confidence: low; connecting 'and' before 'she stood firm'

[84] l. 94 ⲛⲍⲱⲃ ⲡⲉ ⲡⲉ̈ⲓ — “...”; pipeline restoration, confidence: low; 'is this work' — closes 'first work' formula

[85] l. 94 ⲡⲉ ⲉⲣⲉ ⲡⲭ — “...”; pipeline restoration, confidence: low; 'is, while...' — opening of error description

[86] l. 96 ϵγναξω; pipeline restoration, confidence: low; 'they would say' — opening of counterfactual reported speech

[87] l. 96 ⲙⲡⲙⲁⲛϩⲟⲡϵ ⲙⲡⲙⲁⲩ; editor; Editor's restoration spanning line break; ⲙⲡⲙⲁⲛϩⲟⲡϵ already used in line 2; ⲙⲡⲙⲁⲩ 'there' completes the locative phrase.

[88] l. 97 ⲛ̄ⲥϵⲛⲁϫⲟⲩ ⲁⲃⲁⲗ; pipeline restoration, confidence: low; 'and they had not cast (her) forth' — completes the ϵⲛϵ counterfactual

[91] l. 99 ⲁⲩⲱ ⲛⲉⲣϵ — "and would be"; pipeline restoration, confidence: low; 'and would' — connecting clause

[92] l. 99 ⲁⲡⲓⲧⲛϵ — "and would be"; pipeline restoration, confidence: low; 'downward' — completes 'fire that would draw down'

[93] l. 100 ⲛϵⲩⲛⲁⲍϵ; pipeline restoration, confidence: low; 'they would fall' — fits 'downward'

[94] l. 101 ⲙⲙⲁⲥ; pipeline restoration, confidence: low; 'her' — object of raising

[95] l. 102 ⲁⲣⲁⲥ — "..."; pipeline restoration, confidence: low; 'unto her' — partial ⲁⲣ visible

[96] l. 104 ⲟⲩⲱⲧ; editor; Editor's restoration; the formula ⲣⲱⲙⲉ ⲛ̄ⲟⲩⲱⲧ 'single man' recurs in line 28 in the parallel passage.

[97] l. 106 ⲙ̄ⲙⲁⲥ; pipeline restoration, confidence: high; 3sg.f object 'her' fitting 3-char gap

[98] l. 113 ⲡⲟⲟⲩ; pipeline restoration, confidence: low; 'today' — fits 'among the men of today'

[102] l. 121 ⲛϵ; editor; Editor's restoration; ⲛϵ as imperfect copula closing the counterfactual conditional sequence.

[103] l. 122 ⲛⲁⲛ̄ϩⲟⲩⲟ; editor; Single letter [ⲁ] restored within ⲛⲁⲛ̄-ⲡϩⲟⲩⲟ 'shall surpass/be in excess.' Verbal sense supplied by the restored form.

[104] l. 124 ⲡϵ ϵ; editor; [ϵ ϵ] restored to complete ⲡϵ ϵϵⲱⲟⲟⲡ — copular phrase 'it is that it exists.'

[105] l. 128 ⲩ; editor; Single letter [ⲩ] restored in ⲧϵⲧⲁⲩⲧⲟⲩⲃⲁⲥ '(which) they purified.'

[106] l. 130 ⲩ — "..."; editor; Single letter [ⲩ] restored at end of ⲧⲏⲣⲟ[ⲩ] 'all'; followed by larger lacuna.

[108] l. 132 trace: .

[109] l. 133 ⲱ; editor; Single letter [ⲱ] restored in ϩⲱ[ⲱ]ϥ 'himself' (Lyc. ϩⲱⲱϥ).

[110] l. 133 ϩⲏ; editor; [ϩⲏ] restored in ⲛ[ϩⲏ]ⲧⲟⲩ 'in them.'

[112] l. 134 ⲙⲁ; editor; [ⲙⲁ] restored to complete ⲛⲥⲧϵⲣϵⲱⲙⲁ 'firmaments'; followed by larger lacuna of ~9 chars.

[113] l. 135 trace: . .

[114] l. 135 ϩⲣ; editor; [ϩⲣ] restored to complete ϩⲣⲏⲱϵ 'burdens.'

[115] l. 136 trace: . . . . . ϵ

[116] l. 138 ϵ ϵⲩⲁⲧⲟⲩⲃⲟ; editor; [ϵ ϵⲩⲁⲧⲟⲩ] restored; completes ϫϵ ϵⲩⲁⲧⲟⲩⲃⲟ 'that they shall purify' (continuing into line 17 ⲃⲟ).

[118] l. 139 trace: .

[119] l. 141 ⲛⲁⲟ ⲙⲛ ⲧⲙⲛⲧⲣⲙ̄; editor; [ⲛⲁⲟ ⲙⲛ ⲧⲙⲛⲧⲣⲙ̄] restored; completes ⲧⲙⲛⲧⲛⲁⲟ ⲙⲛ ⲧⲙⲛⲧⲣⲙ̄ⲙⲁⲟ 'the Greatness and the wealth' (standard pair).

[120] l. 142 ϵⲭⲏ; editor; [ϵⲭⲏ] restored to complete ⲛⲓϵⲭⲏⲩ 'the ships' (sun and moon ships of Manichaean cosmology).

[123] l. 142 trace: ⲣ .

[124] l. 143 ϵⲩⲟⲩϩⲍ ϫ; editor; [ϵⲩⲟⲩϩⲍ ϫ] restored at line-start; completes 'being seated/dwelling in the ships.'

[128] l. 146 ⲟⲩ; editor; [ⲟⲩ] restored to complete ⲛϩⲏⲧ[ⲟⲩ] 'in them.'

[130] l. 152 ⲉⲓ — "come"; pipeline restoration, confidence: low; '(the apostles) come' — 4-char est

[131] l. 153 trace: . . . ϵ

[136] l. 157 trace: ⲣⲁⲭ

[137] l. 158 Ⲧⲧ; editor; [Ⲧⲧ] restored at line-start; completes Ⲧⲧⲙⲁϩⲙ̄ⲛ̄ⲧⲟⲩϵ 'the eleventh' (fem. ordinal).

[138] l. 158 ϵ ⲛ; editor; [ϵ ⲛ] restored: completes ⲙ̄ⲛ̄ⲧⲟⲩϵ ⲛ̄ϩⲱⲃ 'eleventh work.'

[140] l. 159 ⲧⲓⲕⲏ; editor; [ⲧⲓⲕⲏ] restored to complete ⲧⲁⲣⲭⲟⲛⲧⲓⲕⲏ 'the archontic (host)' (already in glossary).

[148] l. 171 ⲛⲥⲧⲉⲣⲉⲱⲙⲁ; editor; Editor restoration; fits banishment 'from the firmaments to the earth' (line 12).

[151] l. 173 ⲉⲣⲉ — “while”; pipeline restoration, confidence: low; 'while' — fits 3-char est before 'three words of Life'

[152] l. 173 trace: ⲛⲉⲧ..ⲓ...ⲉⲩ

[153] l. 174 ⲁⲩⲱ ⲛ̄; pipeline restoration, confidence: low; 'and they' — connecting before causative ⲥⲉⲍⲱⲩ

[154] l. 174 ⲥⲉ; editor; Editor restoration of [ⲥⲉ]ⲍⲱⲩ ⲁⲣⲉⲧⲟⲩ 'they set them upon their feet' (causative of ⲥⲱϩⲉ).

[160] l. 29 ⲛⲥ; editor; Editor's restoration of ⲛ̄ⲥⲉ- conjunctive prefix; verb is ⲛ̄ⲥⲉⲟⲩⲱⲛϩ 'and they manifest.'

[162] l. 68 ⲙⲛⲛⲥⲁ; pipeline restoration, confidence: high; Parallel to 2641 ⲙⲛⲛⲥⲁ ⲧⲙⲁⲩ 'after the water': here 'after the water, the fire was poured out' completes the threefold sequence (water → darkness → fire). 6 chars fits est 7.

[165] l. 67 ⲡⲕⲱⲧ; editor; Editor restoration ([ⲡ]ⲕ[ⲱⲧ]ⲉ); completes ⲡⲕⲱⲧⲉ 'the encompassing circuit' (already in glossary).

Four Ages, Five Wheels, Three Wells

Summary

What the Lord prepares for every separation, and what conduits ascend and descend. T48 — for every discrimination the soul will undergo, the Lord's operation has been set in place beforehand: the call, the conveyances, the discrimination's throne, the appointed states, the appointed loosenings — nothing in regeneration is improvised. T49 — the four registers in which the self is permitted to take its forms (powers above, natural below, settled disorders around, recurrent circuit), and the great wheel of purification turning under the King of Honor's stewardship. T50 — three differently caused conduits running through the soul from depth to height: through the body, through perceptions, through affections; influx descending and life ascending through each. The deeper work is now complete in its architecture; State 5 will look at what has grown.

in truth: that beforehand, before night and day were separated forth in the cosmos, they called forth the Third Ambassador. Then afterwards they sent him to this watch and this watcher who is outside, that he might purify the light and separate night and day from one another.

Before they raised the light, and it went forth, and came up in the Zone, the Father of Life adorned for him the ships of the light. He established them, so that he might purify in them and depict it, and fashion it in an ordering. Beforehand, before Sin became great and reigned in the flesh, before they should distinguish the radiant ones with the destroyed ones from one another, they sent forth the Judge. He was manifested forth; they fashioned his throne, they placed him in the living air, that he might become a righteous Judge, in order that they might cast forth from his midst, and that they might examine the righteous with the sinners and divide them from one another. Beforehand also, before Error and the scandal of the doctrines were manifested forth in the cosmos, they appointed and brought forth, against them, the Christ, the blessed, that he might cut down their Error. Beforehand also, before they begot men, and named some ⌈'rich,' and they named⌉ some others 'poor' on the earth ⌈Beforehand also, before⌉ they cast forth, before they killed those whom they shall slay, they appointed the stars and the days and the spheres that are fitted to them, that they may be born from them, and that they bind their root in their days, and that they keep watch over them within them, and turn them in a judgment of recompense according to their works and their sins.

Once again, beforehand — before the cosmos is released forth with the earth entire — they appointed and gave a sign to the releasers, that they should release forth — release forth. Once again, beforehand — before they build and adorn and appoint the Aeon, the Aeon of the new — they summoned the great Builder, the First Architect, with the angels who are with him, who shall build and adorn the Aeon of the new.

SPIRITUAL READING

For every discrimination the soul will ever undergo, the operation by which it is accomplished is prepared by the Lord beforehand. Nothing in regeneration is improvised. The soul does not first fall into mingling and then have a remedy invented for it; the remedy is set in place before the mingling shows itself, and the discriminating principle is established before the things that need to be discriminated have come into view.

Before what is given and what is claimed had ever been distinguished in the natural mind, the Lord's call to the rational was already going forth, set at its post on the outside of the soul's whole field, so that when the time came it could illumine what is the Lord's and sort it from what the soul has taken as its own. Before the truth that had been received could rise and come up through the rational's full circuit, the Lord at the register where life proceeds had already adorned the conveyances by which doctrine bears truth through the natural — vehicles fashioned, established, set in their ordering, ready to carry, refine, and give form to what would be received.

Before self-love had grown great and ruled in the outermost, before the radiant states of the soul had to be told apart from the states that cannot be raised, the Lord had already sent forth his discrimination and set its throne in the living medium of perception, so that when the moment for sorting came, righteous states and self-loving states would be examined together and parted from one another by a judgment that was already in place. Before falsity from evil and the scandal of distorted teachings had made themselves felt in the natural mind, the Lord as the blessed Anointed was already appointed and brought forth against them, to cut down their wandering at its root.

Before any human state was begotten and given its name — before the well-supplied and the empty, the strong and the killed, were distinguished in the soul's circuits — the particular states of the natural mind through which the soul passes were already appointed, the orbit of those states fitted to its conditions, so that what is brought to birth might be rooted in its proper days, watched over, and turned in a judgment of recompense answering to its works.

Before the natural mind in formation is finally loosed from its present bond, the operations that loose it have already been appointed and given their sign. And before the new state of the regenerated rational is set in its order, the Lord as divine order itself, with the operations that attend him, has already been called forth to build and adorn it. The whole arc of the soul's making-new — every separation, every raising, every judgment, every loosing, every fresh constitution — stands prepared in the Lord's foresight before the soul ever meets the moment in which it is needed.

The Four Registers of the Self and the Turning Wheel of Purification

— ⲉⲧⲃⲉ ⲡⲩ̄ⲧⲁⲩ ⲛ̄ — ⲡⲧⲣⲟⲭⲟⲥ ⲛ̄ⲛ̄ⲥⲓⲟⲩ ⲉ̄ ⲧⲟⲩⲁⲛⲉ̄ ⲛⲏⲧⲛ̄ ⲁⲃⲁⲗ ⲟⲩⲛⲁⲟ̄ ⲛⲥⲱⲃ ⲛⲭⲱⲣⲉ ⲡⲉ ⲟⲩⲉ ⲥⲱⲱⲩ ⲡⲉ ⲉ̄ⲛ ⲡⲩ̄ⲧⲁⲩ ⲛⲛⲁⲟ̄ ⲛⲥⲱⲃ ⲉⲡⲉⲓⲁⲏ ⲧⲁⲣⲭⲟ ⲧⲓⲕⲏ ⲧⲏⲣ̄ⲥ ⲁⲩⲧⲁⲱⲥ̄ ⲁⲩⲧⲟⲉ ⲛⲧⲁⲓⲉ — Concerning the Four — The wheel of the stars which is manifest unto you — it is a great mighty work; it itself is one of the Four Great Works, since the archonic host in its entirety has been distributed into four kinds.

Ⲧⲱⲁⲣⲡ ⲛ̄ⲧⲁⲓⲉ ⲡⲉ ⲛ̄ⲟⲁⲙ ⲉⲧⲱⲟⲟⲡ ⲥⲙ̄ ⲡⲙⲏⲧ ⲛⲥⲧⲉⲣⲉⲱ ⲙⲁ ⲛⲉⲧⲱⲟⲟⲡ ⲙ̄ⲡⲥⲁⲛ̄ⲧⲡⲉ ⲙⲡⲧⲣⲟⲭⲟⲥ ⲙⲛ ⲧⲁⲣⲭⲟⲛ ⲧⲓⲕⲏ ⲉⲧⲙⲏⲣ ⲛ̄ⲥⲏⲧⲟⲩ ⲉⲥⲁⲧⲡ ⲁⲥⲟⲩⲛ ⲁⲣⲁⲩ ⲥⲛ ⲙⲡⲏⲩ ⲉ ⲉⲧⲙⲡⲥⲁⲛⲧⲡⲉ

The first kind is the powers that exist in the ten firmaments that exist on the upper side of the wheel, with the archonic host that is bound within them, chosen into them, in the heavens that are on the upper side.

The fourth kind is the sphere of stars that ⌈lies⌉ in a ⌈great⌉ shame, being heavy in a great ⌈concupiscence⌉, the Father of Life ⌈with the Mother of⌉ the Living Ones. Her lash [. . .], raised up in shame, because of the great powers of concupiscence and the shamelessnesses ⌈that are⌉ in her, being many upon her, so that all the firstborn and the principalities of all the archons, those who were existing in the third kind: those whom they bound, they gathered them in, they reckoned them, they bound them, they fixed them in this Wheel, they appointed each one each one in the third kind: they spread them forth, they ⌈intermingled⌉ them, they hung them facing one another in single accord — the ⌈Wheel⌉ likewise is equal with them in his might, in the ⌈powers⌉ of the Enmity that is bound in him — those whom they hung ⌈also⌉ in ⌈the Wheel⌉ Wheel that turns, because of their concupiscence, so that ⌈because of⌉ the Spirit and the fire that turn there in him, they were abiding at the place where they stand fast in him. For thus, again, if they had been bound in the heavens, the heavens would (not) have power to bear them, no. Were they fixed again in the lands, in the mountains which are below, neither would they be able to bear them; but they hung them upon the Wheel of stars that turns, so that the power and the light that ascends forth from the lower side, they receive it with them and give it to those above, there. And that which falls also from the upper side, whether it be in the cold or rather in the heat — the Wheel of the sphere too shall lift it up to him and shall cast it forth upon the whole earth, upon the whole tree. Behold, this is the appointment in this manner of the Wheel; for the powers that are bound in the Wheel are likened in this manner: they reigned to seize his kingship in the multitude of mighty Aeons, of all the principalities of the kingship, and with the whole garment of the love-of-strife that is gathered into him, and also with the multitude of ⌈property⌉, and the kingship, and the beautiful likeness of the desire of ⌈women⌉, that is gathered into him together with ⌈his⌉ property[. . . . . .], and those animals there, being [ca. 13] which were spread forth from his hunger comitatus. Yet if you inquire after this king, he is equal with his whole comitatus. The comitatus itself is equal against his whole kingship. A matter habitually comes forth before his face — a victory and an appointment — unto his whole kingship, in his wisdom, in his skill, in his judiciousness. According therefore to the manner of this king who is equal against the measure of his entire kingship — in his wisdom, in his skill, and his judiciousness.

In this same manner, according to this likening of the realms which are bound in the sphere before the archonic host, and the realms which exist in the entire Zone — thus is the king to his entire comitatus. In this same manner indeed the whole work is gathered to the sphere, to the seven guides, to the twelve zodiac signs — thus all the cities are gathered to the king, being also gathered to the way-leaders of the world — that which they reckon entirely, all of it, in the world of the upper region and of the lower region — the strifes and the disturbances and the captivity and the hunger and the desire and the property which they multiply and they diminish through the way-leaders. They are the movers of the entire creation, the whole work being gathered into them,.

SPIRITUAL READING

There is a great work that the Lord has set within the soul, and it is plain to anyone who looks: the recurrent turning by which states are purified, again and again, in freedom. This turning is one among four registers in which the self has been distributed and held — four registers in which the soul's claiming is permitted to take its forms, so that the rational may be formed at all and yet not collapse under what it has claimed.

The first register is the powers held above, in the ten ordered degrees of the rational; the soul's self-loving arrangements are bound there, gathered into those upper degrees and held in their place.

The second register is the natural mind below — the ground on which we walk and everything beneath it: the natural taken in its lower aspects, joined to the four places where the self has its deepest hold.

The third register is the settled disorders that ring the natural mind round about — the strongholds and fortifications that self-love builds for itself, with the principalities and powers it has gathered into them.

The fourth register is the recurrent circuit itself — the turning of states under which the soul passes again and again. This is heavy with shame and concupiscence; for the firstborn shapes of the self and all its chief principalities, which once stood proud in the third register, have been bound, gathered, reckoned, fixed into this turning, hung opposite one another in a single accord, and set to revolve. They could not be bound above — the higher degrees could not bear them. They could not be fixed below in the natural's mountains — those could not bear them either. So the Lord set them upon this revolving cycle, so that the good and truth which rise from the lower degrees might be received as they pass through, lifted, and given upward; and so that what falls from above — whether in the cold of withholding or the heat of trial — might be carried by the same revolution and cast over the whole natural ground, the whole tree of perception, until every part has had its share in the work.

For consider what the self is: it is like a king who has reigned to seize a kingship for himself, gathered around him a great train of strivings — all the principalities of self-rule, the whole garment of contention, the love of strife, the multitudes that crowd his court, the fair likeness he has fashioned, the desires he has drawn into himself, the property and the affections that issued from his hunger to possess. The king is the measure of his whole train; the train is the measure of his whole reign; nothing comes forth before his face — neither victory nor command — that is not his whole kingship at once, in such wisdom and skill and judgment as he has.

So it is with the self organized through this turning. The whole work of self-love is gathered into the recurrent cycle, into the seven leaders that move it, into the twelve fixed states the soul passes through; and all its settled disorders are gathered to its king, gathered to the way-leaders that drive the formation of the natural mind. Whatever is reckoned in the soul's outer world or inner — the strifes, the disturbances, the soul's self-binding, the hunger, the desire, the property it multiplies and the property it loses — all of it is moved through these way-leaders. They move the whole formation; the whole work is gathered into them.

This is the shape of what the soul has claimed: held in four registers, turned in a cycle so that what cannot yet be borne above or below is borne in the revolving, and so that influx rising and influx falling have a path through which to do their work upon the whole.

Concerning the Wells.

Three are the Wells which exist in the entire Zone, in the Deep up to the Height.

The first of the Wells is the root of all the realms of the upper region — those which exist in all the heavens — those whom they have set forth, who are bound in the lands of the lower region. Since the earth of the lower region is the stripping naked of the garment and the body of the realms which are above the heavens. For at the time when the Father of ⌜Life⌝, established the worlds of the upper region, he stripped them of their bodies, and cast them to the lands of the lower region.

The worlds, on the one hand, those of the upper region are psychical and pneumatic. The worlds also of the lower region are somatic and ptōmatic. Therefore, then, ⌜he gathered⌝ the powers of heaven; he hid them in their bodies and their corpses which are in the lands, in order that at the time when the Life comes up out of the depth of these lands, as they draw it all up to the height by the goods of those of heaven — the things mingled in their bodies. And the Life, all of it again, is choice (substance) of the place there. The Error itself, which they shall drive out from the chosen which goes up to the height — they shall let it down downward in the summons of these summonses; and they shall continue downward [. . . . .] and they shall cast it down to the lower side. This is the first summons, the one which comes upon the powers of the heavens, unto their bodies and their corpses which are upon the earth; and back upon their bodies again and their corpses which are in the lands, unto the powers of the heavens.

ⲧ̄ⲧⲙⲁⲍⲥⲛⲉⲩ ⲛ̄ⲁⲓϩⲙⲉ ⲡⲉ ⲡⲉⲧⲛⲏⲩ ⲝⲛ̄ ⲛ̄ⲣ̄ⲡⲧⲏⲩⲉ ⲙⲛ̄ ⲙⲙⲁⲛⲱⲱⲡⲉ ⲙⲛ̄ ⲙ̄ⲡⲧⲟⲗⲓⲥ ⲉⲧⲱⲟⲟⲡ ⲍⲛ̄ ⲙⲡⲧⲏⲩⲉ ⲱⲁⲡⲓⲧⲛⲉ ⲁⲡϯⲟⲩ ⲛ̄ⲉⲓⲛⲉ ⲛ̄ⲛⲱϩⲏⲛ ⲉⲧⲣϩⲧ ⲁϫⲙ̄ ⲡⲕⲁⲍ ⲡⲧⲱⲛⲍ̄ ⲛⲏⲩ ⲁⲍⲣϩⲏ̈ ⲝⲛ̄ ⲛ̄ⲛⲱϩⲏⲛ ⲁⲛ̄ⲣ̄ⲡⲧⲏⲩⲉ ⲙⲛ̄ ⲙ̄ⲡⲧⲟⲗⲓⲥ ⲡⲧⲱⲛⲍ̄ ⲍⲱⲱϩ ⲙ̄ⲛ̄ ⲡⲥⲉⲡⲧⲉ ⲛⲛⲁⲧⲓⲧⲉ ϩⲛⲏⲩ ⲁⲡⲓⲧⲛⲉ ⲁⲛⲱϩⲛ ⲍⲛ̄ ⲛⲟⲩⲁⲓϩⲙⲉ

The second summons is the one which comes upon the temples and the dwelling-places and the cities which exist in the heavens, downward unto the five likenesses of the trees which grow upon the earth. The Life comes up from the trees unto the temples and the cities. The Life likewise, with the array of those of heaven, comes downward to the trees in their summons.

But the third summons itself is of all the powers and the house-dwellers who dwell in all the firmaments, whose roots come downward from there unto the five worlds of the flesh which lies upon the earth, mingled in one another; the powers indeed and the Life which gather inward in the worlds of the flesh, and they go forth out from them in likenesses upon likenesses, unto the powers of heaven, drawing them up to the upper side through the summonses. The Error itself, with desire and the evil and the wrath — the things which abound in the powers of heaven — they pour down downward in summons by summons, they pour out upon men and the other array, of the cattle. The hour when those of heaven shall pour out the Error and the scourge and the venom downward upon the creatures of flesh which are below — they themselves, the creatures, shall abound in desire, in wrath, in evil, into one another through the activity of the eyes that are upon the height.

have been made lord over the back of the flesh and the Five Trees — and yet you said to us that the Wheel has no root there. For you said to us that every thing — the powers above are answered forth from the earth, of the heavens — that which draws them up in a moisture. We do not see that everything which shall reach humanity, whether it be a richness that comes to their hand, or else a poverty that shall reach them, their sickness and their health — these reach them through the zodiac and the star under which they are begotten. That which I proclaimed to you, that the Wheel has no root there — I proclaimed (it) to you well; it is established in its place. For when the Living Spirit, the Father of Life, established the heavens and the firmaments above, they bound their roots into the lands below, in the corpses which they had cast forth from there. And when they themselves established the Wheel, its root they did not bind into the land, but they bound the root of the Wheel in the boundary of the sea. And when the Ambassador came, they manifested forth their image, they sorted them out and took the Light forth from all the heavens. The hyle also, that which exists in all the archons, was cast forth from there toward the image of the Ambassador; she went upward to grasp it; she did not grasp it; she was shaken; she fell to the side below. The time, then, that she fell down from the upper side, she spread herself forth into three kinds. The first kind shefell upon the Wheel; another kind fell upon the earth; another one fell to the sea; through the kind which fell tothe sphere, they bound the root in the trees and the flesh. On account of this indeed they took authority, they became masters in the five worlds of the flesh and the five worlds of the tree, throughout the nature which came down upon the wheel. They bound the root in the trees through the abortions also which came down. They bound another root in the flesh because of this indeed; the stars and the zodiac took authority over the trees and the flesh through the root of Sin which fell downward, with the root of the abortions which cast themselves down and fell downward. The other men whom the Living Spirit bound in the lands — those whose soul is of the elements come up out of them to the heavens — those are not bound to the wheel, but they are seized by the hands of the powers in the wheel which are hung upon him.

the first is the one who comes from the firmaments to the lands, with the one who comes from the wheel to the deep of the sea — that one is one and the same. The other root also which comes from the heavens unto the trees: the third is the one which they bind through the abortions in the flesh. In the flesh again the fathers of the abortions which are in the heavens — ⸢they laid⸣ their bonds — they yoked them with those who- [———] these men: which is the one who exceeds his fellow [———] with more life upon the drawn soul [———] compared to his fellow.

[———] [———] after the word in great greatness; in greatness the land from which much life comes up out of- [———] the Father of Life draws them up. They mingled them in the powers of heaven [.] they bound them within to the lands which are those of the entire archonic host, in which the life of the living soul is drawn upward through them, coming upward forth from the whole land, forth from all their mountains, fields and waters. After the first great Root, that is the root of the trees that they bound to the firmaments and the structures that are above. Since therefore there is a great life that shall not cease coming upward forth from the tree and the cross in their entirety, being drawn upward from there to the upper place, in the manner of a great encampment. The lesser one, however, ⸢is the drawing-up⸣ of their moisture of the land, which is taken upward ⸢through the sun⸣ to the goods of this land. They sustain them; they shall ⸢gather⸣ the whole land in all the worlds. There exist no trees in the whole land — whether small or great — but the root of those men [ca. 15] does not exist in the whole land, except only in this world of the south. Even the very flesh-bodies do not act anything in the whole world of the south. [. . . . . .] therefore there is a small thing in them, in [. . . . . .] of the upper place of the world of the south, in some [ca. 17] again in their number compared with the other worlds. Therefore I have made-known concerning the goods which exist upon them. that they are bound in their good things within with each other. They are drawn to one another, drawing the life of one another through the energy of the powers which is at the upper place, bound to the nature that dwells in them all. The hour, therefore, when they shall extract the matter that is in them, and shall plunder it — then she herself, that

There are three distinct conduits by which influx comes down into the natural and by which life is drawn back up. They run through the whole circuit of the soul, from its lowest depth to its highest reach.

The first conduit runs through the body — the very structure into which the soul has been accommodated. When the Lord established the higher degrees, he permitted the older forms the self had taken to be cast down into the natural ground; and there, in the very bodies and remains the soul had once claimed as its own, he hid the seeds of life. So when the time comes for life to rise out of the depths of those natural states, it is drawn up by the goods of the higher degrees — life that had been mingled in those bodies — and the whole of it becomes choice substance for the upper place. What is not life — the rational's wandering from truth — is driven out of what is being raised and let fall back through this same summons. This first conduit therefore comes upon all the powers of the soul down to its bodily form on the earth, and rises again from that form back to the height.

The second conduit runs through the soul's perceptions — what grows in the natural the way trees are rooted in earth. The dwelling-places and ordered cities of the higher degrees come down upon the five aspects of perception that grow on the natural ground; life rises from those perceptions back up to those higher dwellings; and the array of the higher accommodates downward upon perception in the same summons.

The third conduit runs through the affections — the natural body of love that lies upon the earth, all five of its aspects mingled in one another. The powers and the life gathered into these worlds of love go forth in likeness upon likeness, drawn up through this summons to the higher. But this third conduit also carries downward what abounds in disordered affection — craving, wrath, malice — which pour down upon men through it, and through which the creatures of flesh below entangle themselves in craving and wrath and malice with one another under the gaze of the higher.

You have asked: if the recurrent wheel by which the natural revolves through its fixed states has no root in this earth, why is it that the stars and zodiac under which a man is born seem to govern everything that reaches him — his riches and poverty, his sickness and health? The answer stands. When the Lord's operative power established the higher degrees and the firmaments above, he bound their roots down into the lands below, into the very dead remains the soul had once cast off from itself. But when the wheel of recurrence was set, its root was not bound into those same lands; its root was bound at the boundary of natural perception itself, at the edge of the sea. And when the Lord's call went forth and his image was made manifest, the light was sorted out and taken up from all the higher degrees. The disordered natural held in all the particular forms of self-claiming was cast forth toward that image; she rose to grasp it, did not grasp it, was shaken, and fell. When she fell from above, she spread herself into three kinds: one kind fell upon the wheel, one upon the sea, one upon the sphere. From there they bound a root in perception and a root in flesh, and so took mastery over the five aspects of the natural body and the five aspects of perception — through the nature that came down upon the wheel, through the failed productions of the self that fell with it, and through the root of self-claiming itself. So the stars and what hangs with them rule perception and flesh, but only through that fallen root — not as a root the Lord himself laid in the earth.

Therefore the men whom the Lord's operative power has bound into the lands — those whose soul is rising through the elements toward the higher degrees — are not themselves bound to the wheel. They are only handled, in their outer parts, by the powers that hang upon it.

So the first conduit is the one that comes from the firmaments to the lands, and the one that comes from the wheel to the depth of the sea is one and the same with it. The second is the root that comes down unto perception. The third is the root they bind through the failed productions of the self in the flesh; and in the flesh, the parent-states of those failed productions, which dwell in the higher reaches of the disordered, yoke their bonds with these men. One man exceeds another in this: in the measure of life drawn up upon his soul beyond his fellow's.

The Father of Life draws this life up out of the land where much life rises — out of the whole ground, out of all its mountains and fields and waters. After the first great root, which is the root of perceptions bound to the firmaments and structures above, since there is a great life that shall not cease rising from perception and from the rational stretched in its purification, drawn up from there to the upper place like a great encampment — there is also a lesser drawing, the moisture by which the goods of the land are sustained throughout all the worlds. Perceptions of the highest order are not found in every part of the land, only in one region of it; even the bodies of love do not bear this fruit everywhere, only in a small portion of the upper side of that one region. So I have spoken to you concerning the goods that are upon them: that they are bound within with one another, drawing the life of one another through the working of the higher, according to the one nature that dwells in them all.

And when the hour comes that the disordered natural is finally drawn out from where it dwells and stripped of what is not its own, then she herself will consume her own members and devour them, and what is left will turn upon itself.

APPARATUS

[1] l. 5 ⲙ̄ⲡ; editor; Restoration of -ⲙⲡ- of ⲙ̄ⲡⲣⲉⲥⲃⲉⲩⲧⲏⲥ '(of) the Ambassador,' continuing from ⲡⲙⲁϫⲱⲁⲙ̄ⲧ̄ ('the third') in line 14.

[2] l. 8 ⲉ; editor; Initial ⲉ of ⲉⲙⲡⲁⲧⲟⲩ- 'Before they...'

[4] l. 13 ⲓ̈ⲧ; editor; Final two characters of qualitative ⲧⲁϫⲁⲓ̈ⲧ 'destroyed.' Compare ⲁⲣⲁⲓⲧ in glossary as -ⲁⲓⲧ qualitative pattern.

[5] l. 14 ⲁ; editor; Initial ⲁ- of perfect prefix ⲁⲩⲧⲛⲛⲁⲩ 'they sent.'

[7] l. 16 ⲟⲩ; editor; Indefinite article ⲟⲩ- before ⲕⲣⲓⲧⲏⲥ 'judge.'

[9] l. 18 ⲛ̃; editor; Conjunctive prefix ⲛ̃- of ⲛ̃ⲥⲉⲡⲁⲣⲭⲟⲩ 'and they would separate them.'

[20] l. 31 ⲃⲁⲗ; editor; Standard ⲃⲱⲗ ⲁⲃⲁⲗ idiom 'release forth' (cf. accumulated vocab).

[21] l. 32 ⲕⲱⲧ ⲛⲥⲉ; editor; Editor's restoration; supplies the missing verb in 'build and adorn,' a doublet repeated in line 11.

[22] l. 33 ⲁ̈ⲓ; editor; ⲧⲥ[ⲁ̈ⲓ]ⲟ_ — middle of word ⲧⲥⲁⲓⲟ 'adorn'; trace of final ⲟ visible.

[23] l. 33 ⲡⲉ ⲁ; editor; Restoration ⲃⲣ[ⲡⲉ ⲁ]ⲩⲧⲁϩⲙ — ⲡⲉ completes ⲃⲣⲡⲉ 'new' (Lyc. for ⲃⲣⲣⲉ); ⲁ is past-tense prefix of ⲁⲩⲧⲁϩⲙ̄ 'they summoned.'

[25] l. 56 two illegible letter traces

[26] l. 66 ⲉ; editor; editor restores ⲉ- of relative converter ⲉⲧⲙⲏⲣ 'who are bound'

[27] l. 71 ⲫ; editor; Lyc ⲧⲏⲣϩ/ⲧⲏⲣⲫ 'whole, entire' — final consonant lost; cf. ⲧⲏⲣϩ in line 19

[28] l. 75 ⲫ; editor; Lyc ⲧⲏⲣⲫ̄ 'entire' — final consonant lost

[29] l. 71 ⲩ; editor; ⲙ̄ⲡⲉⲩ- 'its/their' — final letter of 3pl possessive prefix continuing to next line ⲙⲟⲩⲣ

[30] l. 72 ⲁϩ; editor; ⲁⲛⲕⲁϩ 'into the land' — restored from context (parallel to ⲁⲛ̃ⲕⲁϩ in line 21)

[31] l. 73 ⲥ; editor; ⲡ̄ⲓⲣⲁⲥ 'boundary' (Greek πέρας); only the final ⲥ is restored

[32] l. 73 ⲑⲁⲗ; editor; ⲛ̃ⲑⲁⲗⲁⲥⲥⲁ 'of the sea' — Greek θάλασσα; standard Manichaean cosmographic locus

[33] l. 73 ⲡ; editor; ⲡⲡⲣⲉⲥⲃⲉⲩⲧⲏⲥ 'the Ambassador' — definite article restored, continuing into next line

[39] l. 78 ⲥⲁ; editor; ⲁⲡⲥⲁ ⲙ̄ⲡⲓⲧⲛⲉ 'to the lower side' — continues into next line; standard spatial pair-partner of ⲡⲥⲁⲛⲧⲡⲉ

[40] l. 80 ⲁⲥ; editor; ⲁⲥϩⲉⲓ̈ⲉ 'she fell' — continues into next line, parallel to following clauses

[45] l. 83 ⲧⲛ; pipeline restoration, confidence: high; ⲧⲛⲟⲩⲛⲉ 'the root' — parallel to ⲁⲩⲙⲟⲩⲣ ⲧⲛⲟⲩⲛⲉ in section 3001.

[49] l. 86 ⲉ ⲁ; editor; Completes ⲫⲩⲥⲓⲥ 'nature'

[50] l. 87 ⲛ̃; pipeline restoration, confidence: moderate; Direct object marker before ⲧⲛⲟⲩⲛⲉ 'the root'; ⲁⲩⲙⲟⲩⲣ ⲛ̃ⲧⲛⲟⲩⲛⲉ.

[51] l. 89 ⲟ; pipeline restoration, confidence: high; Completes ⲛⲥⲓⲟⲩ 'the stars' (lexicon: stars/planets).

[52] l. 89 ⲛ̃ϩⲱⲁⲓⲟⲛ; pipeline restoration, confidence: high; ⲛϩⲱⲁⲓⲟⲛ 'zodiac-signs' (Greek ζῴδιον) — same word at line 56 in same context (stars and zodiac as ruling substance).

[53] l. 92 ⲓⲕⲉⲁ; pipeline restoration, confidence: moderate; Editor's note (mislabeled as {53}): forms ⲛⲓⲕⲉⲁⲍⲙⲉ 'the other men' (Lyc ⲁⲍⲙⲉ = ⲣⲱⲙⲉ); parallel to ⲕⲉⲛⲟⲩⲛⲉ 'another root'.

[54] l. 92 ⲣⲉ; editor; Forms ⲛⲓⲕⲉⲁⲍⲙⲉ 'the other men' (ⲁⲍⲙⲉ = Lyc. ⲣⲱⲙⲉ); parallel to ⲕⲉⲛⲟⲩⲛⲉ line 7

[55] l. 93 ⲁ; pipeline restoration, confidence: high; Completes ⲕⲁⲍ 'lands' (apparatus note attached to {55} but textually fits {54}).

[56] l. 93 ⲡⲉ ⲡⲛ̄ⲥⲧⲟⲓ; editor; Completes ⲕⲁⲍ 'lands'

[57] l. 93 ⲏ; editor; Completes ⲛ̄ⲛⲥⲧⲟⲓⲭⲉⲓⲟⲛ 'of the elements'

[58] l. 94 ⲛⲍⲏ; pipeline restoration, confidence: high; ⲁⲍⲣⲏⲓ ⲛⲍⲏⲧⲟⲩ 'up out of them' — standard Lyc preposition+suffix.

[60] l. 95 ⲧ; pipeline restoration, confidence: high; ⲉⲩⲧⲱⲣⲡ — qualitative of ⲧⲱⲣⲡ̄ 'be seized, snatched'.

[61] l. 95 ⲟ; editor; Completes ⲉⲩⲧⲱⲣⲡ — qualitative of ⲧⲱⲣⲡ̄ 'be seized, snatched'

[62] l. 102 ⲁⲡⲡⲉⲗⲁ; pipeline restoration, confidence: low; ⲁⲡⲡⲉⲗⲁⲅⲁⲥ ⲛ̄ⲑⲁⲗⲁⲥⲥⲁ 'to the deep of the sea' (Greek πέλαγος, with -ⲅⲁⲥ adaptation); structurally parallels 'firmaments to lands' as the same conduit.

[63] l. 104 ⲭ; pipeline restoration, confidence: high; ⲭⲛ̄ 'from' — Lyc preposition introducing source; structurally parallels ⲡⲉⲧⲛⲏⲩ ⲭⲛ̄ ⲛ̄ⲥⲧⲉⲣⲉⲱⲙⲁ in line 101.

[64] l. 104 ⲡⲏⲩⲉ; pipeline restoration, confidence: moderate; 'from the heavens unto the trees' = the second conduit (heaven→trees) per the spiritual reading and line 28 (ⲁⲍⲣⲏⲓ ⳝⲛ̄ ⲛⲱϩⲛ ⲁⲛ̄ⲡⲧⲏⲩⲉ).

[65] l. 105 ⲁⲣ̄ⳝ; pipeline restoration, confidence: high; Completes ⲥⲁⲣ̄ⳝ 'flesh' before parallel ⲍⲛ̄ ⲛ̄ⲥⲁⲣ̄ⳝ ⲁⲛ.

[66] l. 106 ⲍⲉ; pipeline restoration, confidence: high; Completes ⲛ̄ⲍⲟⲩⲍⲉ 'abortions' (lexicon) — continuation from line 105.

[67] l. 106 ⲁⲩⲕⲱ — "they laid"; pipeline restoration, confidence: low; Verb of laying/placing before 'their bonds — they yoked them'; conjectural — could equally be ⲁⲩⲡⲱⲣⳝ 'they separated' or ⲁⲩⲧ 'they gave'. Low constraint.

[72] l. 115 ⲧ; pipeline restoration, confidence: high; ⲧϩⲩⲗⲏ ⲉⲧⲙⲙⲉⲩ 'that very Matter (there)' — demonstrative ⲉⲧⲙⲙⲉⲩ.

[73] l. 117 ⲣⲥ; editor; ⲧⲏⲣⲥ feminine 'whole/entire' agreeing with ⲧⲁⲣⲭⲟⲛⲧⲓⲕⲏ

[74] l. 118 ϩⲛⲧ; editor; ⲛ̄ϩⲏⲧⲟⲩ 'in/through them' standard preposition+suffix

[77] l. 125 ⲡⲉ ⲡⲥⲁⲕⲓ̄ — "is the drawing-up"; pipeline restoration, confidence: low; 8 chars partial ⲡ...ⲓ̄..; ⲡⲉ ⲡⲥⲁⲕⲓ̄ 'is the drawing-up of it' (ⲥⲱⲕ 'draw' lexicon-attested for the rising of life). The 'lesser' drawing of moisture matches the spiritual reading.

[78] l. 126 ⲡⲕⲁⲍ; pipeline restoration, confidence: moderate; 4 chars; 'their moisture of the land' — ⲡⲕⲁⲍ as the source of moisture coming up.

[79] l. 126 ⲓⲧⲛ̄ ⲡⲣⲏ — "through the sun"; pipeline restoration, confidence: low; 7 chars beginning with ϩ-; ϩⲓⲧⲛ̄ ⲡⲣⲏ 'through the sun' — moisture drawn up by solar action; conjectural but fits length.

[80] l. 127 ⲉ ⲙ̄ⲡⲓ; pipeline restoration, confidence: moderate; 4 chars; ⲛⲁⲛⲟⲩⲉ ⲙ̄ⲡⲓⲕⲁϩ 'the goods of this land' — completes the construct.

[81] l. 127 ⲩ; pipeline restoration, confidence: moderate; 1 char; ⲥⲉⲱⲁⲁⲛⲩ̄ 'they sustain them' — 3pl object suffix.

[86] l. 136 ⲉⲕⲟⲥⲙⲟⲥ; pipeline restoration, confidence: high; 9 chars partial ⲛⲕ.....; ⲛⲕⲉⲕⲟⲥⲙⲟⲥ 'the other worlds' fits length and pattern; comparison with the southern world.

[87] l. 136 ⲟⲩ; editor; ⲁⲓⲧⲟⲩⲛⲟⲩⲓⲉⲧⲧⲏⲛⲉ 'I have made known to you' — completion of the verb stem [88] l. 137 ⲉ ⲉⲧⲱⲟ; pipeline restoration, confidence: moderate; 7 chars; ⲛⲁⲛⲟⲩⲉ ⲉⲧⲱⲟⲡ ⲁⲣⲁⲩ 'the goods which exist upon them'.

[91] l. 139 ⲉⲣⲏ; editor; ⲛⲉⲩⲉⲣⲏⲩ 'each other' — completion of the standard reciprocal pronoun

[92] l. 140 ⲟⲁⲙ; editor; ⲛ̄ⲛⲟⲁⲙ 'of the powers' — Lyc. ⲟⲁⲙ in accumulated vocabulary

[93] l. 140 ⲥⲁ; editor; ⲡⲥⲁⲛ̄ⲧⲡⲧⲉ 'upper place' — completion of the well-attested compound

[94] l. 141 ⲉⲧⲓ̄; editor; Editor's restoration; verb of binding/joining matching the line-25 ⲥⲉⲓ̄ⲙ pattern

[95] l. 141 ⲟⲩ; editor; ⲛ̄ϩⲏⲧⲟⲩ 3pl pronominal suffix completing the prepositional phrase

[96] l. 142 ⲧⲟⲩ; editor; ⲉⲧⲛ̄ϩⲏⲧⲟⲩ 'which is in them' — 3pl suffix

[97] l. 142 ⲥⲩ; editor; ⲛ̄ⲥⲉⲥⲩⲗⲁ 'and rob/plunder' continuing into next line

[98] l. 143 ⲱⲙ — "consume"; pipeline restoration, confidence: moderate; 2 chars; ϣⲁⲥⲱⲙ 'she shall eat/consume' — fits the consumption imagery of the next clause (ⲛⲥϣⲱⲡϣⲱⲡⲟⲩ 'consume them'); end-of-Matter motif (lexicon: bolos).

[99] l. 145 ⲙ̄; editor; Editor's restoration parallel to lines 25, 27

Let Us See If the Vine Flourish

This is the inspection. The withdrawal has done its work; the soul and the Lord now walk together through what has been cultivated, surveying growth. The teachings begin with the cycle now turning peacefully through the heavens without breaking them, and the threefold register of what is named; they proceed to the garments worn in life and death, the appointed time when light came, the building of the dwelling; the molding of Adam, the senses arrayed as rooms in a city, the lifespan diminished by stages; the three compassions and the four weepings; the hidden and manifest members in the Lord's outgoing, the Divine Human clothed in the elements, the three rocks of glory, what love and hatred truly are; the three things shown to Adam, the seven goods of light, the two mysteries of sun and night; the Ambassador's daily rising and setting, the five works of fire (love), the twelve zodia bound in the sphere; and at last the cosmic body in its full anatomy, the chain of inward gathering, and the names of the garments collapsing back into one likeness at the end. What was contested is now reviewed in its growth.

The teachings treat the same divine outgoing the earlier sections narrated, but now from the vantage of fruit rather than contest. The cycle that was binding is now the cycle that does not break the heavens. The names that were structures of seeking are now registers of recognition — gods, rich-men, angels. The garments that were stripped are now seen for what they conjoin. The body that was bound is now the body whose senses are rooms, whose fivefold structure cannot stand if one degree is missing, and whose lifespan diminishes by stages — anticipating the fivefold completeness named at the section's end. The compassions and weepings are not new wounds but the divine sorrow now seen as part of the work. The hidden and manifest members of the Lord's outgoing, the Divine Human clothed in the elements, the rocks of glory — these are foundations the soul can now stand upon. The next teaching distinguishes love from hatred at their cosmic origin — love as the bond of the Greatness, hatred as the first death of the self that has claimed itself — a definition that could not have been received in the second state but can be received now. The teachings then set out the three things shown to Adam, the seven goods, and the two mysteries; then the Ambassador's daily round, the five works of fire, the zodia bound; and they close with the cosmic body, the inward gathering, and the names returning to one. The section is the parallel treatment of what was in contest, now in cultivation. What was the contest's wound is now the field's harvest.

The Wheel That Does Not Break the Heavens; Gods, Rich-Men, Angels

Foundation

The cycle now turns peacefully through what it formerly contended with. T51 — how the recurrent process of purification moves through the firmaments and the medium of perception without tearing them: the cycle parts the discrete degrees as a vessel parts a press of strong loves, and they close behind it without scar. The discrete orders are spiritual; what is spiritual is not torn by what moves through it. T52 — the three registers at which the Lord goes forth and is named: gods (summoned by the Father himself), rich-men (summoned by the gods), angels (summoned by the rich) — one Lord recognized at three depths, each calling kindling the next. The seeker who once met these as watchmen now walks among them as familiar terrain.

Teaching 51

How the cycle of regeneration passes through the discrete degrees without breaking them

As a bird that ascends out from the air, and his path does not reveal itself in the air — in the manner of the men in the sun: within the heavens, they do not mingle inward with them, neither do they cut their path to be recognized out from the air. Thus likewise is this of the Wheel: it turns within the heavens and the air; the Wheel does not cleave the heavens, nor do they (the heavens) them- ⌈neither do they them-selves⌉, the heavens, mingle inward with the Wheel.

SPIRITUAL READING

The recurrent process by which the soul is purified moves through the discrete degrees of the rational without tearing them and without mingling with what they hold. The degrees are spiritual; they yield to what passes through and they close again behind it, so that the cycle does its work without leaving any wound in the order it traverses.

Think of how a vessel of doctrine moves through a press of strong loves: its prow parts them as it goes, casting them to one side and the other, and at every hour it opens a way through them; but the moment it has passed, those loves rejoin behind it and the path of the vessel is no longer visible in their midst. Or think of a thought rising through the medium of perception like a bird through the air: it ascends, it goes where it is going, and the air does not retain its track — unlike the path a man cuts on the ground beneath the sun, which remains as a line others can follow.

So it is with the cycle of regeneration as it turns through the firmaments of the rational and the medium of perception. The cycle does not cleave the discrete degrees, and the discrete degrees do not mingle inward with the cycle. Each degree remains itself, undisturbed in its proper boundary, while the soul is carried through it again and again. The Lord's purifying motion passes; the order through which it passes is not violated by it, and no scar of the passage is left in the firmaments themselves. This is why influx can return upon the soul cycle after cycle without the degrees collapsing into one another: they are spiritual, and what is spiritual is not torn by what moves through it.

ⲛ̄ Concerning this ⸢name, namely:⸣ 'rich-god' and 'angel': what are they, these ⸢types⸣? 'This (one) to whom name is given in the cosmos, with the men uttering it with their mouths — "rich god and angel": what are they? What are the gods? Or ⸢What⸣ are the rich-ones? Or what are the angels? What are these ⸢three⸣ types?' what are they?

Those whom they ⸢themselves⸣ call to them, saying: 'They are gods of gods,' whom the Father summoned through himself, alone — he set ⸢them⸣ upright before the likeness of his Greatness.

These also, those whom they name — ⸢namely⸣ 'rich' — it is the call of the first gods, the rich-ones ⸢of⸣ the Father, to the people. When the ⸢Father had summoned them⸣, they themselves made a calling of callings; they named them 'rich.' They themselves, the rich, they made a calling; they named them 'angels.' These are the three types that exist in the land of light, with no measure to give to them.

another visage, those whom they name 'gods' are the emanations who came forth from the Father in the call of the Father, who summoned them out from him; they came forth to the contest; they brought low the Enmity. SPIRITUAL READING

When the soul names what comes to it from the Lord, three distinct registers of his going-forth answer to three distinct names. They are not three sources but one Lord recognized at three depths of accommodation, each register summoned out of the one above it.

At the first depth there are those the soul knows as gods. These are what the Lord himself calls out of his own inmost — divine love itself summoning forth the principles by which it can be known, setting them upright before the likeness of his own greatness. They are emanations of the Father: that which proceeds first when love consents to go out from itself. They enter the soul's contest; they bring the self's resistance low. They are reckoned to the house of the Lord in his operative power, for they are the going-forth of love into the work of contending for the rational.

At the second depth there are those the soul knows as the rich. These are not summoned directly out of the Father; they are summoned by the gods themselves. They are the call of the first living word — divine truth in its initial articulation — and they accomplish the purpose of love's heart in the worlds above and below. What was first only the outpouring of love now takes the form of a word that does work, completes a design, fulfills an intention through the whole structure of the rational and the natural. They are reckoned to the house of the Lord at the register where his glory is the ambassador of his love.

At the third depth there are those the soul knows as angels. These too are not summoned directly; they are the call of the rich. From the three living words an embassy is sent, an apostleship is given, and they come to the whole household of what stands firm in stillness and in concord. They reach further still: even to those souls that have passed through transmutation of state, they come bringing hope and trust. They are reckoned to the house of the Lord at the register where his love is recognized and returned, the register at which the soul can love him back.

So one calling kindles the next. Love calls forth the gods; the gods call forth the rich; the rich call forth the angels. Each name is a hearing of the same Lord at a different distance from his inmost, and the soul that asks what these are is being told: every register at which divine influx reaches you was first summoned by a register higher than itself, and behind them all stands the one Father who summons through himself alone.

APPARATUS

[1] l. 1 ⲡⲧⲣⲟϧⲟⲥ ⲙⲛ ⲛⲁⲓⲍⲙⲉ — “the Wheel and the Heavens”; editor; Editor's restoration; first three letters ⲡⲧⲣ are visible. The (?) marks editor's uncertainty about ⲛⲁⲓⲍⲙⲉ. Subject matter confirmed by lines 4-7.

[2] l. 1 ⲙⲫ — “the Wheel and the Heavens”; editor; Closing chapter-number marker matching the opening; standard Kephalaia heading layout.

[3] l. 6 ϩⲛ̄ ⲧⲙⲏⲧⲉ ⲙ̄ⲡ — “in the midst of this cosmos”; pipeline restoration, confidence: moderate; Approximately 9 characters; the gap supplies a locative phrase governing ⲕⲟⲥⲙⲟⲥ ('cosmos'). The same teaching uses ϩⲛ̄ ⲧⲙⲏⲧⲉ ⲛ̄- ('in the midst of') in line 16 (ϩⲛ ⲧⲙⲏⲧⲉ ⲛ̄ⲙ̄ⲙⲟⲩⲓⲉⲩⲉ) for the ship's motion through the lions, exactly the figure being applied here to the Wheel's motion through the cosmos. The cosmos here = the natural mind taken as a whole through which the cycle of regeneration revolves.

[5] l. 11 ⲙ; editor; Editor's restoration of single letter in ⲙ̄ⲙⲁⲩ ('them').

[12] l. 17 ⲓⲱⲧ ⲧⲁϩⲙⲟⲩ — “Father had summoned them”; pipeline restoration, confidence: moderate; Reading the temporal clause ⲛ̄ⲧⲁⲣⲉ ⲡⲓⲱⲧ ⲧⲁϩⲙⲟⲩ ('when the Father summoned them') matching §3062 ⲉⲧⲁ ⲡⲓⲱⲧ ⲧⲁϩⲙⲟⲩ; the next clause 'they themselves made a calling' requires the Father's prior calling as antecedent.

[13] l. 21 ⲧⲩ; pipeline restoration, confidence: high; Word-split: completes ⲛ̄ⲧⲩⲡⲟⲥ ('types'); previous segment ends ⲡⲱⲁⲙⲧ̄ ('the three') — together 'the three types'.

[18] l. 34 ⲁⲩ; editor; Editor's restoration completing the verb ⲁⲩⲱ ('they were able') across the line break.

[20] l. 38 ⲧⲉ; pipeline restoration, confidence: high; Completes verb ⲙⲟⲩⲧⲉ in the recurring formula ⲛⲉⲧⲟⲩⲙⲟⲩⲧⲉ ⲁⲣⲁⲩ ⲁⲛ ('those whom they also name').

[21] l. 38 ⲧⲉ — “gods”; pipeline restoration, confidence: high; Completes ⲛⲟⲩⲧⲉ ('god/gods'); next segment opens ⲡⲉ ⲛ̄ⲛⲟⲩⲧⲉ ⲧⲏⲣⲟⲩ ('it is all the gods'), confirming the antecedent.

[22] l. 40 ⲟⲩ; editor; Editor's restoration completing ⲧⲏⲣⲟⲩ ('all of them').

[23] l. 43 ⲓ ⲙ̄ⲡⲙⲁϩⲱⲁⲙⲧ ⲙ̄ⲡⲣⲉ — “of the Third Ambassador”; pipeline restoration, confidence: high; Next segment opens ⲥⲃⲉⲩⲧⲏⲥ ⲉⲧⲟⲓ ⲛⲉⲁⲩ ('-ssador, who is of glory'); restoration completes ⲡⲏⲓ ⲙ̄ⲡⲙⲁϩⲱⲁⲙⲧ ⲙ̄ⲡⲣⲉⲥⲃⲉⲩⲧⲏⲥ ('house of the Third Ambassador'). Parallel structure: gods→house of Greatness/Spirit, angels→house of Beloved of Lights, rich→Third Ambassador (lexicon entry ⲡⲙⲁϩⲱⲁⲙⲧ ⲙ̄ⲡⲣⲉⲥⲃⲉⲩⲧⲏⲥ).

Garments of Light and Darkness; the Crucified Light; the Two Essences

Elaboration

What the soul wears, what is laid down, what is built. T53 — the garments in which the soul goes forth, with love alone sufficing to quench the self's foolishness, and the four further accommodations that surround it as helpers; the order of the Lord's principles dwelling in concord forever. T54 — when divine humanity goes forth into the contest under the form the natural can meet, and the Lord's operative power rises out of the depths, the storehouses of the self go inactive: as a body without soul cannot operate, so what was claimed cannot work once the life within it has been gathered up. T55 — the building of the dwelling: how the operative power, taking up the firstfruits of the rational's five degrees, orders the firmaments so that the King of Honor may find a dwelling prepared when his coming is announced.

The time when the ⸢First⸣ Man came forth against the Enemy, ⸢with the garments upon him⸣ down within the ⸢first⸣ garment which ⸢is alive against⸣ the Darkness, in the garment of the living fire in that garment. It quenched the expanse of the Enemy. It brought down its foolishness and his arrogance. One alone indeed sufficed for them. But since the living fire did the work, on account of this she gave ⸢her other four kinds⸣ of garments: that of the wind, that of the water, that of the light, and that of the air. This then is — that she gave them — the four kinds — she gave them in order that they shall be helpers to that god — which is the living fire — in order that the ⸢five⸣ within the living fire surround it, and the midst that is between it and the Enmity may be cut off. The fire indeed received a destruction and a wound in her body. But nevertheless, ⸢she quenched⸣ all the powers of the Darkness on account of her, did ⸢the work⸣ that she ⸢she divided⸣ by necessity for her ⸢into⸣ ⸢another garment⸣, that they may themselves, as they too receive a destruction and a wound. The power of the Enemy did not join in with them; but the air, it — the Darkness did not join in with him; nor was the burning of the Enemy able to encircle him. Nevertheless, the other one which remained behind, without wound — which is the air — was stripped naked of a garment and a power. She gave it to his other four in his place, in order that in that garment of the living air they may prevail and ⸢they become stripped⸣ naked, and his other four be joined together and become for them the spirit of life.

SPIRITUAL READING

When the Divine Human goes forth toward the self, he goes clothed; and what does the work within that clothing is divine love itself. Love alone is enough — one principle, by itself, suffices to quench the self's foolishness and to bring down its arrogance through the whole expanse where self-love spreads itself out. Yet because love is to operate within the natural, the life-bearing principle in the Lord provides four further accommodations to attend it as helpers: thought, truth in the natural degree, wisdom in receivable form, and the medium of perception. These four are given to surround love and to bring its work to completion, so that what stands against the Lord may be cut off.

In doing this work love itself takes a wound. Divine love accommodating itself into the lower degree suffers there; this is the cost of its going forth, and on account of this wound all the particular forms of the self are constrained. The other accommodations too take their share of suffering as they enter the contest. The self does not join with them and cannot be joined with them; its burning cannot encircle them. Yet one among them — the medium of perception, which alone was not pierced — was stripped of its outer form, and another vesture was given in its place. Clothed now in this living medium, the four hold together and prevail, and become for the soul the dwelling-place of life.

For this is the order of the Lord's principles: they dwell together with one another forever in concord; not one of them transgresses against the order, not one steps outside the message that another gives to it, not one becomes like the darkness. The self is the opposite of this. It is one of a single practice — self-loving practice — and that practice is itself alone, with no companion but itself. The kingdom of self-love is in this same way one principle, herself alone; she has no fellow because her practice admits of none.

Those whose interior states follow the Lord's pattern leave their deep behind them and come up, rising after the one whom the Lord has appointed, because the same practice — the practice of receiving and not claiming — exists in them all. They scatter the darkness; they humble the self's particular forms. So long as the soul's inner states agree with one another under the Lord's order, doing honor to that order, they receive glory in proportion to what they have received, and are exalted far above the kingdom of self-love that rose up against them. But wherever the soul's inner states fall out with one another and side with the self against the order, they must by necessity perish in that kingdom of self-love; they fall into humblings, and they come at last under the hand of the very order that stood against them.

When the Lord's life is withdrawn from what the self had claimed, the self's storehouses go inactive that are joined there are cut off in in their place, in the manner that exists ⌈in the body⌉ While this man is alive, he has the small wellsprings all of them standing-fast there within him ⌈in the body⌉ at the ⌈time⌉ when they shall be cut off from them ⌈from the whole body⌉ [. . . .] all of them, the small ⌈wellsprings⌉ are wont to [. . . . .] of burials, since they are alive ⌈within him⌉ ⌈this then,⌉ the standing-fast becomes their ⌈life in (the body)⌉ in the body that they are mingled inward with ⌈him⌉ according to this likening, in this same manner indeed is ⌈this case in which the storehouse⌉ the ⌈storehouse⌉ of the Darkness is likened — those things which ⌈gushed forth from the Darkness⌉ from there.

At the time also when Hyle, that matter, with all her other powers existed in the abyss of the storehouses — they themselves were alive — the standing-fast existed in the inhabitant who is in them, to do that on which they are all hung, each one in his own storehouse. But at the time when their ⌈natures⌉ natures of nature were taken, when they came-to her, they were separated forth from there with all her powers — those storehouses with the elements became inactive (argon); no operation came to be in them, so that they could do nothing. Thus a body, at the time when the soul comes forth from him, no longer does an operation exist in him, nor any standing-fast at all, since the soul that is in him has left him, going forth out of him; for she is the one who works the operation in him, doing every work ⌈while⌉ ⌈she is in him⌉.

In this same manner indeed is this [ca. 24] those who [ca. 25] at the time when ⌈the Living Spirit was⌉ in them [. . . . . .] that every thing which is in those storehouses ⌈is alive, including⌉ the elements which are in them. From the time when they ⌈took⌉ the Death of the Midst, which is the Hyle, an existence ⌈there⌉ [ca. 13] storehouses and the elements ⌈all of them⌉ ⌈they became like⌉ a body, dead, of [. . . . .] [ca. 13] land, without life, without ⌈anything⌉ [ca. 14] in him.

There is an appointed moment in regeneration when the Lord sends the divine humanity forth into the contest, accommodated under a form the natural can meet — clothed for the engagement so that what the soul has claimed as its own can be confronted in its own ground. At that moment the divine humanity, going forth, presses in upon the disordered natural and upon all the particular self-loves arrayed with it.

When the Lord's operative power then rises up out of the depths of the natural mind, the particular forms of the self that had been pursuing the elements of that natural — the self-loving arrangements that had been organizing the cosmos of the soul out of those elements and fashioning everything within it — find that the storehouses they had been working from are emptied of what they were drawing upon. The good and the truth that had been mingled with their workings have been gathered up; what is left in those storehouses is only what could not be raised.

It is like a lake when the lions of self-love rush in upon its fish and its birds: they seize the chief portion at the center and leave behind only the fringes and the plants growing at the edges. So in the great act of discrimination: what is the Lord's is drawn up out of the storehouses of death, and the self is left behind in its dwellings with only what was its own.

For consider the body of a human being. While the soul is alive within it, all its limbs hold together; the small wellsprings of life stand fast within it, each in its place, and from the soul that dwells within it everything else hangs and operates. Cut a member off at the extremity, and the great limbs joined to the body still stand; but let the soul itself depart, and no operation can occur in any limb at all. The body becomes a dead thing, a mere ground without life, because the one who was working every operation in it has gone forth.

So it is here. As long as the disordered natural and all its powers dwelt in the depths of the storehouses, life seemed to stand fast in them, and each particular self-love did from its own storehouse what it was hung upon doing. But once the natures within those storehouses were taken up — once what was the Lord's was discriminated out and drawn forth — the storehouses with their elements were left inactive. No operation any longer arises in them, no standing-fast at all, because the living principle that was working through them has been withdrawn. What remains is only the disordered natural in itself: a body without soul, a land without life, the gathered residue of what the soul had claimed and could no longer claim once recognition came.

SPIRITUAL READING

There is a moment in the soul when what was given and what had been claimed lie tangled together — the rational not yet sorted, what shines in it not yet distinguished from what has darkened it, the self's whole organization mingled through every faculty so that what is the Lord's is found in what has been claimed and what has been claimed is found in what is given. At this moment, when the natural mind is ready, the Lord's operative power, together with the divine principle by which the rational is enlivened, takes up the firstfruits of the rational's five degrees and begins the structural work of regeneration.

He calls one degree of the rational into service — a degree rich in the power proper to it — and into its hand he gives the ordering of the boundaries. Then he sets the rational up, degree by degree, fixing one above another, holding each distinct so that influx from the higher can be received in the lower without collapsing the orders. He opens the discrete firmaments by which one state is separated from another, and within these he sets the fixed points around which the natural's circuit will turn.

> He works as an architect builds for the king: laying out room within room, dwelling within dwelling, that the whole house may serve its purpose. As stones are dressed and polished, as raw wood unworked and unmarked is taken up by a craftsman in his thoughtfulness, melted in the crucible until it is multiplied into many forms, and shaped — form by form, likeness by likeness — into vessels of every kind, jars and bowls and coverings, until what was unstamped bears the imprint of what made it: so the Lord, in his wisdom and by the power of his hand, takes the unformed natural and shapes it into ordered vessels, each according to its kind, each beautified and made upright, fitted to be looked upon.
> All this is done so that when the King comes — when the Lord's call goes forth toward the rational, summoning it to recognize what flows through it — he may find a dwelling prepared, and his glory may rest there. What is wise within the soul, the part that has heard and is ready to recognize, the Lord lifts up into himself. But the falsity that has wandered apart from truth, together with what the soul has claimed as its own, is gathered together and cast down into the lowest state of the natural, where self-love has its root and where what cannot be conjoined is bound at last.
>
> The lacunae are heavy in this chapter, but the figure is plain: the Lord is the builder; the rational is the house; the King's coming is the goal; and the whole work — the firmaments set, the vessels shaped, the stones polished — is the patient ordering by which the soul is made fit to receive the One who has been preparing it from the beginning to receive him.

[2] l. 3 ⲛ̄; editor; Editor's restoration of plural article ⲛ̄ before ⲣⲱⲙⲉ; restores 'the First Man' from chapter title.

[3] l. 3 ⲟⲩ; editor; Editor's restoration of preposition ⲟⲩⲃⲉ ('against').

[4] l. 3 ϫⲉ; editor; Editor's restoration completing ⲡϫⲁϫⲉ ('the Enemy').

[5] l. 3 ⲉⲣⲉ ⲛ̄ⲍⲃⲥⲁⲩⲉ ⲍⲓⲱⲱϥ — “with the garments upon him”; pipeline restoration, confidence: low; ~16 chars. Teaching arc: First Man goes forth clothed; the next sections immediately develop the garment-motif. Proposed circumstantial 'with the garments upon him'. Coptic vocabulary ⲍⲃⲥⲁⲩⲉ matches lexicon's plural form for garments.

[6] l. 4 ⲥⲣⲏⲓ ⲥⲛ̄ ⲧ — “first”; pipeline restoration, confidence: low; ~8 chars with partial ⲥ. Reads 'down within the garment' — establishes the locative frame for the living fire described in next section.

[7] l. 4 ⲁⲛⲍ ⲛ̄ — “is alive against”; pipeline restoration, confidence: low; ~5 chars; relative 'ⲉⲧ-' visible, reading 'which is alive of-/in-' anticipating ⲧⲥⲉⲧⲉ ⲉⲧⲁⲛⲍ̂ in 3097. Conservative.

[8] l. 4 ϯ — “is alive against”; pipeline restoration, confidence: low; ~2 chars; verb 'fight/strike' fitting 'against the Darkness'. Conservative reading.

[9] l. 5 ⲛ̄; editor; editor's restoration; standard genitive linker

[10] l. 6 ⲉ; editor; editor's restoration; ⲛ̄ⲧⲉⲥ- = 'his/its'

[11] l. 8 ⲁ̄ⲗ̄; editor; ⲁⲗⲗⲁ from Greek ἀλλά

[12] l. 8 ⲉ; editor; editor's restoration

[13] l. 9 ⲉⲥ ⲕⲉⲥⲧⲟ — “her other four kinds”; editor; editor's restoration; pattern matches ⲡⲉⲥⲕⲉⲥⲧⲁⲩ ⲛⲥⲁⲛ in line 22 ('his other four')

[14] l. 10 ⲏ; editor; editor's restoration of ⲡⲁⲏⲣ 'the air'

[15] l. 11 ⲓ; editor; editor's restoration

[16] l. 11 ⲉ; editor; editor's restoration of ϫⲉⲕⲁⲁⲥ

[17] l. 11 ⲁ; editor; editor's restoration of ϫⲉⲕⲁⲁⲥ

[28] l. 13 ⲧⲙ; editor; editor's restoration; ⲧⲙⲏⲧⲉ 'midst'

[30] l. 15 ⲟ̂ⲁ ⲙⲛ; editor; editor's restoration; cf. parallel doublet ⲟⲩϣⲟ̂ⲁ ⲙⲛ̄ ⲟⲩⲡⲗⲏⲣⲏ in line 15

[31] l. 16 ⲁⲥⲱϣⲩ̄ — “she quenched”; pipeline restoration, confidence: moderate; ~5 chars with partial '.ⲥ.' (ⲥ at position 2). Past 3sg.f verb describing the living fire's effect on all powers of Darkness. Parallel to ⲁⲍⲱϣⲙⲉ in line 5: 'she quenched'. Trace pattern matches ⲁ-ⲥ-ⲱ-ϣ-ⲙ.

[32] l. 16 ⲉ; editor; editor's restoration of ⲡⲕⲉⲕⲉ

[33] l. 16 ⲱⲃ — “the work”; pipeline restoration, confidence: low; ~2 chars. ⲣ̄-ⲱⲃ 'did work' (Lyc ⲣ̄ⲟ̂ⲱⲃ̄ appears in line 8). Continues theme: love itself does the work.

[34] l. 17 ⲁⲥⲡⲱⲣϫ — “she divided”; pipeline restoration, confidence: low; ~5 chars. Past 3sg.f verb with 'by necessity'; 'she separated/divided' fits the lexicon's separation-action and the contest-narrative. Conservative.

[35] l. 17 ⲡⲉ — “into”; pipeline restoration, confidence: low; ~2 chars partial '.ϵ'. Possible noun fragment or copula; reading uncertain.

[36] l. 17 ⲍⲃⲥ — “another garment”; pipeline restoration, confidence: low; ~3 chars; given the next clause speaks of 'his/her four other (garments)' and the act of giving the air-garment, a noun ⲍⲃⲥⲱ 'garment' is the most likely referent. Reading uncertain.

[37] l. 18 ⲏ ⲍⲱ; editor; editor's restoration; ⲍⲱⲱⲩ 'themselves' (Lyc. emphatic pronoun)

[39] l. 23 ϩⲧ; editor; editor's restoration of ⲡⲉϩϩⲧⲁⲩ 'his four'; cf. ⲡϩⲧⲁⲩ 'the four' in vocabulary

[40] l. 24 ⲧⲍ; editor; editor's restoration of ⲧⲍⲃⲥⲱ 'the garment'

[41] l. 25 ⲣⲕⲁⲕ — “they become stripped”; pipeline restoration, confidence: moderate; ~4 chars. Verb-form continuing ⲛ̄ⲥⲉ- jussive: 'and they become stripped' (ⲣ̄-ⲕⲁⲕ + ⲍⲏⲩ 'naked'). Parallel to ⲁϩⲕⲁⲕϩ̄ ⲁⲍⲏⲩ in line 22.

[42] l. 26 ⲱ; editor; editor's restoration of ⲩⲱⲡⲉ 'become'

[43] l. 26 ⲉⲩⲙⲁ; pipeline restoration, confidence: high; ~6 chars total with partial 'ⲡⲛ' visible — completes ⲡⲛⲉⲩⲙⲁ 'spirit'. Phrase 'become for them in the spirit of life' (ⲡⲛⲉⲩⲙⲁ ⲛ̄ⲱⲛϩ) is a stable corpus formula and matches lexicon entry: spirit/pneuma as the rational at its highest receiving influx.

[44] l. 3 ⲧⲉ — “command-”; pipeline restoration, confidence: moderate; ~2 chars; first 2 letters of ⲧⲉⲛⲧⲟⲗⲏ 'commandment', spanning into next section's {44}. Direct parallel to undamaged 3126: ⲡⲁⲣⲁⲃⲁ ⲛ̄ⲧⲉⲛⲧⲟⲗⲏ ⲙ̄ⲛ̄ ⲡⲡⲁⲣⲁⲅⲅⲉⲗⲓⲁ.

[45] l. 4 ⲛⲧⲟⲗ — “-ment and the practice”; pipeline restoration, confidence: moderate; ~3 chars before extant ⲏ; completes ⲧⲉⲛⲧⲟⲗⲏ 'commandment'. Pairs with ⲡⲣⲁϫ 'practice/announcement' in same section as in 3126.

[47] l. 5 ⲁⲩⲱ — “And”; pipeline restoration, confidence: low; ~3 chars; common conjunction 'and'. Reading uncertain.

[49] l. 5 ⲟⲩⲁ; editor; editor's restoration of ⲟⲩⲁⲓⲛⲉ 'light'

[50] l. 5 ⲡ — “the”; pipeline restoration, confidence: moderate; ~1 char; definite article ⲡ- beginning the noun continued in next section ('from the [place/Father]').

[51] l. 8 trace: ⲱⲕ

[53] l. 18 ⲁⲙ; editor; Editor's restoration; completion of ⲧⲥⲁⲙ 'the power.'

[54] l. 18 ⲱⲟⲟⲡ; editor; Editor's restoration; standard predicate ⲱⲟⲟⲡ 'exists' fitting context.

[56] l. 19 ⲉⲥⲱⲃⲣⲡ̄; editor; Editor's restoration; ⲥⲱⲃⲣ-ⲙⲩⲥⲧⲏⲣⲓⲟⲛ 'fellow-mystery' confirmed by undamaged occurrence in line 15.

[57] l. 20 ⲉⲩ; editor; Editor's restoration; completion of ⲉⲧⲙⲙⲉⲩ 'that.'

[58] l. 20 ⲧⲏⲣⲟⲩ; pipeline restoration, confidence: moderate; ~5 chars; 'all of them' is the natural connector before the jussive ⲛ̄ⲥⲉⲣⲱⲱⲧⲏⲣⲉ 'they (all) honor'. Stable Coptic idiom.

[59] l. 21 ⲁⲛⲧ; editor; Restoration of ⲥⲙⲙⲁⲛⲧ 'is established' (qualitative, cf. accumulated vocabulary).

[60] l. 22 ⲁ; editor; Editor's restoration of single letter.

[61] l. 22 ⲁⲡⲁⲥⲉ — “combat”; editor; Editor's restoration; ⲡⲁⲥⲉ likely 'fight, combat' governed by ⲟⲩⲃⲏⲥ 'against her.' Confidence moderate.

[67] l. 46 ⲡⲕⲉⲕⲉ ⲃⲉⲃⲉ — “gushed forth from the Darkness”; editor; standard collocation 'the elements gushed forth from the storehouses' (cf. accumulated vocab ⲃⲉⲃⲉ + ⲡⲧⲁⲙⲓⲟⲛ); editor's restoration

[68] l. 50 ⲓⲟ; editor; completes ⲧⲁⲙⲓⲟⲛ 'storehouse'

[69] l. 51 ⲧⲏ; editor; completes ⲧⲏⲣⲟ̄ resumed in line 20 ⲣⲟ̄

[71] l. 62 trace: . ⲉⲩⲱ . . . . . ⲍ

[72] l. 64 ⲡⲡⲛⲁ ⲉⲧⲁⲛⲍ̄ — “the Living Spirit was”; pipeline restoration, confidence: low; ~12 chars: 'the Living Spirit (was) in them' — the parallel demands the operative principle whose departure leaves the storehouses argon, matching the soul/body analogy.

[73] l. 64 trace: ⲛ · ⲱ ·

[74] l. 65 ⲉⲩⲁⲛⲍ̄ — “is alive, including”; pipeline restoration, confidence: moderate; ~5 chars: 'is alive' — every thing in those storehouses is alive while the operative principle dwells there, paralleling the body's small wellsprings.

[75] l. 66 ⲃⲓ ⲙ̄ⲡ — “took”; pipeline restoration, confidence: low; Partial 'ⲃ ⲙ' fits ⲃⲓ ⲙ̄ⲡ- 'took the (Death of the Midst)' — the moment when the natures were taken up echoes ⲉⲧⲁⲩⲃⲓ in line 21.

[76] l. 67 ⲙ̄ⲙⲁⲩ — “there”; pipeline restoration, confidence: low; ~5 chars: 'an existence there' — the locative completion fits the pattern; the Hyle's existence is registered in/at the storehouses.

[77] l. 68 ⲧⲏⲣⲟⲩ — “all of them”; pipeline restoration, confidence: low; ~5 chars: 'all of them' is the natural close, matching the chapter's frequent ⲧⲏⲣⲟⲩ summations.

[78] l. 69 ⲁⲩⲱⲡⲉ ⲛ̄ⲑⲉ ⲛ̄ — “they became like”; pipeline restoration, confidence: low; ~13 chars: 'they became like (a body, dead...)' — closing the analogy of storehouses-becoming-corpse.

[79] l. 70 ⲗⲁϫⲉ — “anything”; pipeline restoration, confidence: low; ~5 chars: 'without anything' — parallel to ϧⲱⲣⲓⲥ ⲱⲛϩ; ⲉⲙⲛ ⲗⲁϫⲉ standard formulary.

[80] l. 46 ⲡⲣ̄ⲣⲟ — “for the king”; pipeline restoration, confidence: low; 'For the king' — paralleling line 20's 'who builds a house for the king'.

[81] l. 48 ⲡⲣ̄ⲣⲟ — “the king”; pipeline restoration, confidence: low; Plausible: 'the [king] of the light', anticipating the great-king motif of the next sections; low confidence.

[82] l. 50 ⲡⲉ — “is”; pipeline restoration, confidence: low; Identifying copula 'who is' opening the relative-identification of the king with the Third Ambassador in the next line.

[83] l. 51 ⲡⲣⲉⲥⲃⲉⲩⲧⲏⲥ — “Ambassador”; pipeline restoration, confidence: high; Lexicon: ⲡⲙⲁϣϣⲁⲙⲧ ⲙ̄ⲡⲣⲉⲥⲃⲉⲩⲧⲏⲥ 'the Third Ambassador' — the great king is identified.

[84] l. 51 ⲩ ⲁϥⲟⲩⲁⲛϩ — “has revealed”; pipeline restoration, confidence: low; Relative continuation 'who has revealed/manifested' — the Third Ambassador's lexicon function is divine truth coming as accommodated revelation.

[85] l. 54 ⲡⲉⲧⲉ ⲛ̄ϩⲏⲧⲥ ⲡⲉⲧⲟⲩ — “what is in him”; pipeline restoration, confidence: low; 15-char relative-headed phrase '(that) which is in him, what is wise' setting up the contrast: the wise (the recognized) is taken up; Error and Darkness are cast down. Reflects the lexicon's separation/discrimination operation.

[86] l. 55 ⲁⲧ; editor; editor restoration: ⲁⲧϧⲱⲣⲁ 'to the region/land' — directional ⲁ- + ⲧ- feminine article + ϧⲱⲣⲁ

[87] l. 56 ⲛⲁ; editor; editor restoration: ⲛⲁⲥⲁⲩⲍⲟ̄ — 3pl future + ⲥⲁⲩϩ=ⲥ 'gather him'; future tense parallels following ⲛ̄ⲥⲉⲛⲁⲯⲟ̄

Adam Molded, Senses Arrayed, Lifespans Diminished

Elaboration

The natural man surveyed in his structure. T56 — how the Lord is intent in his heart upon humanity, how the self catches the divine image and molds its counterfeit, how the Lord comes through that molding rather than to it, for the sake of the soul suffering inside the molded form. T57 — how the senses are set as rooms in the body, with each faculty its own house and storehouse, the heart as king ruling all five, the body as encampment with twelve gates; and how the Mind of Light comes to take the keys. T58 — why what was once borne in fullness comes forth now small and feeble: the order of years has given place to the order of months, days, hours, moments — and what is begotten in each carries the measure of the ordering that rules its season.

inward heart of their soul. Afterwards they set it according to his likeness. They molded Adam with Eve. They imprinted the image of the Exalted One in their soul. They likened (them) however in a likeness, but they did not liken (them) in the truth — but in the manner of the way of ⌈the molding⌉, [. . . . .] face in the manner of these — that he came [. . . . . .] yet he is not however like him in truth. ⌈Such also⌉ is this molding of humanity. They likened him against the image of the Exalted One. He molded him in the form of the tree, that he is indeed like the ⌈life⌉, (yet) he is not [likened] in truth. The matter is likened in this manner — like a great free woman who [ca. 12] within [. .]her -chion, exceedingly wealthy in riches, ⌈a wealthy person⌉ rich in property. She is moreover beautiful in her beauty. She is noble in her nobility. She is clothed in habits of freedom and ranks of dignity. The fame of her beauty was scattered forth in every city. They pass over [ca. 12]. Behold, her chamber: those who go in [. . . . . .], the one who longs concerning the noble ones and the magnates: they desire continually after her beautiful face. They have not ⌈reached⌉ her, since she is hidden in her palace. [. . . . . .] this ⌈manner⌉ ⌈she being⌉ within in a [ca. 14] head [. .] to reach that woman [. . . . . .] for his son, or otherwise, he himself, head [. . . . . .], without garment which is there. The free woman who ⌈exists⌉ leaves the chamber after her, comes to the street [ca. 12] the head [. . . .] to manifest her face and her beauty [ca. 12] ⌈but rather⌉ concerning her brother who is beloved by her, the woman whom no man has ever seen — they have not laid-bare(?) -her face being shut, she does not wish, nor does she rejoice [. . .] [. . . . .] leaving her chamber behind her, to come into the midst of the men, that everyone may behold her — men of truth and noble ones, and other commoners too, and the [. . . . .] they see her.

According to this comparison, thus also Thus also is this ⌈of the⌉ the Ambassador came to be in it [. .] [ca. 12] in the manner of the free woman [ca. 11] according to a need on some occasion, or else [. . . . .] she drew her heart toward the watch that is outside, she [. .] [. . .

Thus also is this (of) the Third Ambassador, at the time when he came to manifest his image forth in revelation before all the powers — he did not come so that all the archons and the authorities should depict a form according to his likeness, but he came on account of his Son, who is crucified in the All, that that he might raise him, release him forth, redeem him forth out of the affliction. But when the archons saw him, they desired his image, they fashioned according to his likeness Adam and Eve, without the purpose of heart of the lord(ship) — that as for the manner of Adam and Eve, whom the archons fashioned, theyner of Adam and Eve, whom the archons fashioned, they established them according to the image of the Most High; thus also is this — (it is) a divinity exceedingly great, with exceedingly great powers and angels who received the imprint of that image which was revealed forth to them. For through the lust of the male and his female, they were mingled in their pleasure, they were stripped bare, they burned in their desire, in the manner of a man who looks upon the lust, of a face of desire of the [. . . . . .] and they burn for the change of pleasure: so too is this (manner) of those powers, at the time when they saw that icon therethere which is desire-arousing and beautiful, they changed [. . . . . .] [.] a first icon. They received the seal of this icon there which was revealed forth to them; they were likened [. . . . . .] that likened them forth in a likeness, being of [. . . . . .] [. . . .] those whom they sent forth, those who took a seal of this icon. But up to other rocks [. . . . . .] of ⌈stones⌉, which exist place by place — the changes of this icon therethere, which was revealed forth in the cosmos [. . . . . .] again, they took a seal manifest within them, with a stamp. This new birth, then, which they begat in a [. .] new in the cosmos — which is Adam and Eve — with a form in their cosmos, from the beginning being its likeness, since that icon there does not exist in the worlds which are at the lower side, the lower place.

These moldings, all of them, which were molded — they were not molded through the begetting of intercourse that is manifest. But there are other moldings that were molded — [ca. 13] other [. . . . .], there is the boun(dary) of the sea, the driving-forth from the sphere, that which the Father of Life set in the sea. Her fire by itself, with her enthumesis itself, molded itself into a molding. a molding.

The second molding is that which which fell upon the earth. The sea rose up at her feet. Her enthumesis by itself became to her an image-painter. She molded herself by herself in a nature that is the root of Death. And when she came up out of the sea, she cried out, saying that she would destroy the works of ⌈the Living Spirit, the Father⌉ is life. They sent to her at that very hour the Adamas of Light, the great teaching of Maidenhood. He subdued her in their cisterns of the north. He set down his foot, he stood firm with his foot upon her until the end of the cosmos.

SPIRITUAL READING

The Lord is intent in his heart upon humanity. This is the secret behind everything that is said about the molding of Adam and Eve. If the Lord were not bent toward the human, the divine image would never have been shown forth into the natural mind at all; and if it had not been shown there, the self would have had nothing to imitate. The whole forming of the natural — even the part of it that is claimed and counterfeit — stands only because the Lord first turned his face toward the soul.

What happens, then, is this. The Lord manifests his image. The self, in its many particular self-loving arrangements, sees that image and is struck by it. Having no form of its own that can answer to it, the self desires the image and presses it inward into the heart of the natural; and from that inward press it shapes a likeness — a humanity built by self-love after a pattern it could not invent. So the man and woman that the self molds are made according to the image of the Most High, but only as likeness, not in truth: shaped in the manner of the Exalted One yet not the Exalted One; resembling the tree of life as the picture of a tree resembles the living thing.

The Lord's call into the rational does not come for the sake of the self that did this molding. It does not come to give the self-loving mind a divine portrait it can keep. It comes for the sake of the soul that is suffering inside the molded form, the soul that is stretched through the natural and bound there in every chain it is wound in. The Lord comes to raise that soul, to loosen what holds it, to redeem it out of its affliction. The self, seeing the image again at this coming, again desires it and again fashions an Adam and Eve after it — still without the Lord's purpose of heart, still as imitation. The man and woman the self establishes are set up according to the likeness of the Most High, but the divinity that stamped the image is exceedingly great, and what the self produces is only the impression of an impression.

It is like a noble woman, exceedingly rich in herself, beautiful and free in her bearing, clothed in habits of liberty and rank. The fame of her beauty has gone out into every quarter, and many long for her — the noble and the great desire her face continually — yet they cannot reach her, because she is hidden in her chamber. Only when there is need does she leave the chamber and come into the open street, and then for a moment her face and her fire are seen; and when the necessity is finished she withdraws again. She does not come out for the sake of being looked at by those who crowd around her. She comes out for the sake of the one who is beloved by her, the brother whom no one of them has ever seen.

So it is with the Lord's call to the rational. He shows his image in the open only because of his own — only because of the soul that is crucified through the whole of the natural and must be raised, released, and brought up out of its affliction. The crowding archons see, and desire, and fashion their likenesses; but the showing was never for them.

Beneath the open coming there are deeper moldings to recognize. There is a molding the disordered natural performs upon itself: by its own fire and its own claiming-thought it shapes itself, with no painter but its own desire, into a nature that is the very root of death. When this self-shaping rises out of the sea of natural perception and threatens to destroy what is alive, the Lord sends at once the principle that gives the rational its stable form — the great teaching of pure reception — and sets a foot upon it and stands fast there until the end. There is a second molding, fallen onto the natural ground, where the disordered claiming again becomes its own image-painter and produces a form of itself; and there is a third, which fell upon perception and stood in the tree, in the boasting place of the rational. By substance these moldings belong to the same darkening, but their making issues from the self's own work, and they are joined together and have come out openly into the natural mind.

The lesson is that whatever the natural mind has shaped, even when it shapes itself in the very form of the divine, it shapes only a likeness; and the truth of the human is not in the molding but in the One whose image the molding could only copy. The soul is not the figure the self has fashioned. The soul is the one the Lord came for — the hidden one, the beloved — and what the soul receives, when it receives, is not its own portrait but the living face whose mere passing has set every imitator to work.

"The molder placed in the molding of Adam and Eve members on the outside and on the inside — a sense-faculty and an operation, which has spread forth in each house. Every thing which the sense-organs and the elements shall take from outside — they have storehouses there on the inside, and granaries and caverns, that they may may bring it into them and lift it up into them. Every time every (time) that they shall match them with those things they have lifted up into the storehouses which are on the inside, that they may bring forth that which they brought in and give (it) to the demander who claims them continually. This is the manner that his enthumesis ⌈of the eyes is, watching from⌉ outside, runs after ⌈things⌉ ⌈of every kind⌉ every kind on the inside ⌈— they have their own⌉ The enthumesis again of the eyes — they have houses there with chambers and treasuries with shafts within, so that every likeness soever which she sees — whether beautiful or bitter, whether it is one of love, or it is one of hate, or it is one of this desire — she carries it inward to her storehouses and her treasuries. Again, the time when this enthumesis of the eyes is drawn in heart to look out upon the likeness which she has seen, she has carried it inward, going inward to her storehouses, at the time, and she ponders upon it, and gives herself ⸢to it⸣, until ⸢the time comes⸣ and she brings them forth, and she gives (them) to the petitioner who asks of her and the one who desires it of her — whether something out of ⸢whether it⸣ is a likeness of a love, ⸢or it⸣ is ⸢is one of⸣ a hate. In this manner again, that enthumesis gives in like manner — which she does in this type. This type is the enthumesis of the ears: she has her storehouses there likewise also: every hearing that she carries — whether beautiful or bitter she carries it inward, sets it in her houses and her treasuries which are within, and watches over it in her ⸢watch⸣, ten of hundreds of days. After ten hundreds of days, when one comes to seek that enthumesis pertaining to the hearing which she has heard, at this moment she has carried it inward to her storehouses; immediately she habitually goes inward to her treasuries, gives herself, examines, and seeks for that word, and sends it forth from the place where she had first set it within them — the place where she watches over it within them. ⸢But⸣ this boundary. This boundary again, the enthumesis of the place of smelling, she does in this manner, like that of the eyes and that of the place of hearing: every scent which she smells, she habitually carries it inward to herself, and brings (them) inward to her storehouses which are within. Every time when they shall ask her, through the inquirer who asks of her, she habitually goes inward ⸢to her⸣ and she ⸢goes inward to her⸣ storehouse, and gives the remembrance these alone — but the other mouth and the tongue that is in him, with the place of taste-receiving — the enthumesis itself dwells in him. That enthumesis likewise has, in this manner of the place of taste-receiving, caves and storehouses, which are open before her, and she takes likewise inward the tastes that are stored there, inward at every hour. ⸢Every time⸣ when one shall ask her for a taste, after she has ⸢asked her for⸣ it, she sends it forth and gives the recollection of that ⸢that⸣ taste — she pours it forth and gives it, and she makes ⸢a recollection⸣ of that taste, and she gives the recollection to the inquirer who inquires of her. The enthumesis again of the touch of the hands — ⸢the manner⸣ also is this: the moment when she touches a touch, ⸢she habitually carries it⸣ inward, ⸢and she carries it⸣ inward to her storehouse that is within; ⸢every time⸣ when one shall ask the enthumesis for the recollection ⸢of this touch⸣, she goes inward also and brings forth the recollection of this touch that she

The enthumesis again of the heart, which is king over them all exceedingly, exceedingly likewise in this manner: every thing that the five enthumeses shall take inward and give as a deposit (παραθήκη) to the enthumesis of the heart — she takes them and watches over them at every time when one shall ask of her for their charge, she sends them forth and gives them every thing that they had handed over into her hand.

The counsel of the heart is likened to the king before whom all the senators of his city and the principalities of his [———] have placed (matters) before him, at every time when his generals shall request what they wish to request with might, he gives them, from the sensenators and the gnome (γνώμη) by which they walk.

Such also is this enthumesis of the body. The sight which the eyes shall lookat — and they give it to her hand and bring it inward; (and) again she brings it forth from the storehouses where she has placed it, and gives it to the one who seeks her. Such also is the hearing, which the ears shall hear, and they give it to her hand, and she takes it from their hand. Whatever moment they shall ask her about that hearing, she brings (it) forth and gives the hearing of the ears to the one who has asked her about that hearing. She brings (it) forth and gives the hearing of the ears to the one who has asked her.

The encampment is likened to the body, and the body to the encampment. Now the gates of the body, these are: the places of seeing, the places of hearing and the places of smelling, and those that look out, and the words. There are guards who are many, and a multitude of helpers placed upon the members of the body, keeping watch to help them. And the enthumesis within him, which is the teaching of the body, the queen of the whole encampment, so that the time when she pleases, she opens; and the time when she pleases, she shuts. When the Mind of Light comes, he encircles inward to the gates of the body, the archons who are guards of the gates, they hinder him and do not receive him to enter inward. They take charge of the encircling of the body, saying: he is a stranger to them — let him not enter unto them.

SPIRITUAL READING

When the natural mind was first being formed, it was the self that shaped it — organizing the body of Adam and Eve out of what it had claimed, working from the failed productions of self-love and yet imprinting upon them the likeness of the Lord's own call, because nothing can be made except after the divine pattern. The self saw the icon of the Lord summoning the rational, took its imprint, and pressed that imprint upon its molding. So the body itself, as the soul first finds it, is a vessel formed by self-claiming yet bearing in its very shape the trace of the One it claims to be from itself. It says, looking up at heaven: "Let us fashion an image after the likeness of the Exalted One" — and this is what self-love has always said, claiming as its own the form it could only receive.

Now within this molded body the self has set up faculties, one for each sense, and each faculty has its own house, with storehouses and granaries and inner chambers. Whatever the eye sees, whether beautiful or bitter, whether of love or of hate or of desire, is carried inward and laid up in those storehouses. The faculty watches over what it has gathered, and when something draws the heart to look again at what was seen, the faculty goes inward, retrieves the image from where it was kept, and produces it for whoever asks. So with hearing: every sound the ear takes in is carried inward, deposited, and watched over for many days, so that when one comes asking after that word, the faculty goes into its treasury and finds it and brings it out. So with smell, with taste, with the touch of the hands. Each of the five has its inner reservoir, each its watching, each its bringing forth on demand.

Above all five sits the heart, ruling them as a king rules. Whatever the five gather, they hand over to the heart as a deposit; and the heart watches over them, and when called for, sends them out and gives them. The heart's deliberation is like a king before whom the senators of his city stand, all matters laid before him; whatever his officers ask with strength, he grants out of those stores and the judgment by which they walk. He is also like a steward, who takes everything sent in and arranges it, vessel by vessel, place by place, so it can be found in the place where he has set it.

The body, then, is an encampment with gates, and the gates are the senses — the openings of seeing, hearing, smelling, tasting, touching, speaking. At each gate stand watchmen and nets and guards. When something familiar comes, something that already belongs to the city of self-love, the watchmen open and bring it within according to the heart's purpose. But what is foreign to them they hinder; they do not let it cross the threshold. Or, if they do let it through, it is brought in only with great toil, through many cells where it is kept under their eye. The whole gating is in their hand, and what enters or does not enter depends on whether the watchmen recognize it as a fellow-citizen of the self or as a stranger.

This is the natural state. The faculty within — the teaching by which the body lives — is queen of the encampment under the heart's rule, and the gates open and shut at her pleasure. They open at the time of self-love's wishing, to take in the visions of pleasure and the chatter of cares and the tastes of defiled foods, drawing all of this inward toward the Sin within, which pulls the whole heart after itself.

But when the Lord comes ordering the rational — entering as truth that illumines the inner mind — and approaches the gates of the body, the self that holds those gates does not at first receive him. The watchmen call him a stranger and try to keep him out; they want only what is theirs. Yet he, in his wisdom and in his weight and in the multitude of his coming, humbles those guards. He brings them low. And when he has finished humbling them, he takes the keys out of their hands. The gates that until then opened only to fantasy and desire and the meditation of self-love's cares — those same gates now open and shut at his command. The body that was an encampment of the self becomes a dwelling under the Lord's ordering, and the senses that gathered for self-love now gather for the recognition of what flows through them as his.

[But] indeed his begetting — is it like the begetting which they beget today in humankind, or rather is there a difference between his begetting and the one they beget today? Since [indeed] Adam was a strong one in his support, his stature was great according to his other years, having spent many years existing in the world; he alone was incomparable to those whom we have likened (to him) in being strong. But all the others who were begotten in his generation — they themselves were likewise in their years. Thekind. The men whom they beget today — their support has shrunk, their [might] of their other years is diminished — [for what reason] what is it? And the begetting today of [those whom] they beget — is altered from those of the first [generations] each in his own place. Behold, the other stars also and zodiac-signs endure forth in their places. Wherefore now (is) the matter — the lifespan and the years of these last (ones) have shrunk, become small, even still more than the ancients who belong to the first generations.

Their fathers were drawn-out, were diminished. Since, therefore, there are five types of the powers and way-leaders set in the sphere of the zodiac-signs and in the heavens which are above her: they have names there, being [called] [by these names]: among them, the first name is the year, the second is the month, the third is the day, the fourth is the hour, the fifth is the moment. The five then, [The five places] and the five houses, exist in the sphere and the heavens. These places have powers in them, being lords over them. The lord of the year exists, the lord of the month exists, the lord of the day exists, the lord of the hour exists, the lord of the moment exists. One (is) to the share of heaven, of his fellow which is above; (one) to the share that is lord over that which is below, even unto humanity itself which is begotten, and the [cattle] (cattle), being begotten among these powers. They themselves indeed, the powers, have received authority from the beginning of the creation unto the end of the cosmos. In the beginning indeed of the generations, the powers being lord over the years are the ones reigning. Therefore also the offspring which they [begot] in their generations and their times became people of long years, being many in lifespan, in the generation of Adam and that of [Sethel], his son, and that of those who came after him, and after their cessation — they being king, namely the powers being lord over the years. The powers themselves being lord over the months reigned. Just as ⌈the months⌉, since they are smaller than the years, in the same way also is this offspring ⌈which they begot⌉ among them — their lifespan is smaller ⌈is shorter than the lifespan of those whom they begot⌉ in the generation of the powers being lord. We have spent (our) years.

When the authority of the powers which were master over the months was completed, the powers of the days received authority and (came) after them. Thus is the way of the days, that they are smaller than the months. Thus also is the case of the offspring whom they begot from them: their lifetime is shorter than the lifetime of those whom they begot in the powers which were master over the months. In this manner, ⌈thus⌉ also, is the offspring whom they begot in their hours and moments — their lifetime is shorter than that of the months and that of the days.

concerning the matter of the years — that 'For what cause have the years of the ancients become long? Or for what cause itself have the latter ones become short?' Thou didst say to me also that 'They have become short in their other support.' Thou didst say that 'All these have become small by the diminishing of the life and the light which they have taken from the world.' Declare to us also this other thing: how have they begotten the entire offspring of humanity through one male and one female, Adam and Eve?' For thus is (the case) of the first generations: that they abound in their light, they are pure in their support, their other years are great. Thus also is this of their other offspring — they are exceedingly many beyond the offspring of this time. They were spending a great chronos [. . . .] there in ⌈the⌉ -womb of their mother; afterwards, [ca. 13] O what a multitude in one womb! There is a time when they beget five in one womb. There is a time when they beget seven in ⌈one⌉ womb. There are some who do not exceed these, there are some in turn, who are of more than these. For this reason, indeed, the bearing of their [———] has multiplied with their children.

The earth was filled with them; they dwelt at this end. The bearing of the begetting of the ancient men who have been begotten in the cosmos is altered, much in comparison to today, whitheir conception and their bearing — its likeness is not the begetting of the latter ones whom they have begotten today in the womb of the woman. For those whom they beget today in the ⌈latter⌉ generations are standing small and diminished, and indeed one by one those whom they ⌈beget⌉ are not in one womb, but in two parts, or more, or more, while they become another (kind) at a remove in their likeness, being small in their stature, being feeble in their members, their teachings, and ⌈their⌉ counsel filled with evil. They are men of wickedness; they are afflicted, they cease from their standing, being miserable. The other death is bad — of darkness.

SPIRITUAL READING

The disciple asks: when the rational was first given form — when the Lord first permitted the natural mind to take shape as a vessel that thinks itself its own — how was that forming done, and how was the first man brought forth? Was that begetting like the begetting that goes on in the soul now, or is there a difference between what was first produced in the rational and what the rational produces today?

The teaching answers: the first formation was strong. The stature of the rational at its origin was great, its support was firm, the years through which it endured were many. There was nothing in the soul to be compared to it for strength. Those that came after it in the same first generations were like it; they too endured long, because they were brought forth out of the same fullness. But what the soul brings forth in itself today is shrunken. Its support has thinned, its years are diminished, its stature is small. The very begetting today is altered from that of the first generations.

The reason lies in the orders that govern bearing. There are five degrees at which the natural mind is set under ordering as it makes its circuit, and at each degree there are powers that rule what is produced there. The first and highest is the order of years; under it stand the order of months, then days, then hours, then moments — the same structure narrowing, the same authority growing smaller as it descends. Each of these orders has its lord. One ordering rules above; another rules what is below it; and so on, all the way down to the human as it is now begotten. Each ordering received its authority from the beginning of formation and holds it until the end.

In the beginning of the soul's generations, the wide ordering was in command — the order of years was lord. Therefore what was brought forth then bore the mark of that wide ordering: long-enduring, capacious, abundant in life. The rational at that stage produced many at once: it conceived and bore in great number, five in one womb, seven in one womb, sometimes more. The natural was filled with what it brought forth; the earth of the soul was full, because the rational was abounding in light and pure in its support, and the years of its bearing were great.

When that wide ordering had finished its work, the order of months took authority, and what was brought forth then was correspondingly smaller, just as months are smaller than years. Then the order of days, smaller still; then hours; and now the order of moments. So it goes: the offspring brought forth under each successive ordering is shorter-lived, weaker, of less stature than what was brought forth under the one before. The world of the soul has come down to almost nothing, the days of what it produces have grown short, its years diminished — because the life and the light that filled the natural mind in the first generations have been used up, claimed, drawn off.

This is why the soul's productions today are not what they were. They are no longer many in one bearing but come one at a time, in two parts, or one and another, set apart. They come forth small in stature, feeble in their members, frail in their teachings and counsel, filled with what is evil. They are afflicted; they cannot stand long; they pass into misery and end in the death that belongs to darkness. The likeness of those first births is not in them. What the soul once carried abundantly, in fullness of light, it now carries scarcely, in shrunken measure — because what it has claimed it has drawn down, and what it draws down is what it then has to give.

[91] l. 92 ⲭⲓ; editor; Editor's restoration of ⲭⲓ 'receive' — fits collocation 'angels who received the imprint of that image'

[92] l. 92 ⲉⲩ; editor; Final ⲉⲩ of ⲉⲧⲙ̄ⲙⲉⲩ 'that, those' (Coptic demonstrative)

[94] l. 95 ⲩ; editor; Editor's restoration ⲁ[ⲩ]ⲕⲱϩ — completion of perfect 3pl prefix.

[97] l. 96 ⲓⲁ ⲛ̄ⲧⲉ ⲡⲉ; editor; Editor's restoration ⲉⲡⲓⲑⲩⲙ[ⲓⲁ ⲛ̄ⲧⲉ ⲡⲉ — completion of ἐπιθυμία + 'of the' + truncated word beginning with ⲡⲉ-.

[98] l. 97 ϩⲱⲩ ⲁⲛ; editor; Editor's restoration [ϩⲱⲩ ⲁ]ⲛ — Lyc. ϫⲱⲱϥ ⲟⲛ 'also, likewise.' Standard correlative completing 'this manner is also...'

[100] l. 99 ⲓ; editor; Editor's restoration ⲁⲩⲯ[ⲓ]ⲃ̄ — single letter completing ⲯⲓⲃ̄ 'they changed.'

[102] l. 100 ϩⲓⲕⲱⲛ ⲉⲧⲙ̄ⲙⲉⲩ; editor; Editor's restoration ⲛⲧ[ϩⲓⲕⲱⲛ ⲉⲧⲙ̄ⲙⲉⲩ] — completion of 'this icon there,' parallel to lines 6-7 and 13-14.

[103] l. 101 trace: ⲁⲩⲧⲁⲛⲧⲛ̄... ⲉ-

[104] l. 102 ⲩⲧ; editor; Editor's restoration ⲧⲁ[ⲩⲧ]ⲛ̄ⲧⲱⲛⲩ̄ — completion of perfect-relative ⲉⲧⲁⲩⲧⲛ̄ⲧⲱⲛⲩ̄ 'that they likened them.'

[105] l. 103 trace: ...ⲉ

[107] l. 105 ⲱⲛⲉ — "stones"; pipeline restoration, confidence: low; 3 chars; with preceding 'rocks' — ⲱⲛⲉ 'stones' fits

[108] l. 108 trace: ⲟⲩ..ⲥ̄

[110] l. 111 ϩⲓ; editor; Editor's restoration [ϩⲓ]ⲕⲱⲛ — completion of εἰκών 'icon.'

[112] l. 111 ⲉⲧⲩ̄; editor; Editor's restoration [ⲉⲧⲩ̄]ⲡⲥⲁⲩ̄ — relative + preposition introducing ⲡⲥⲁⲛⲡⲓⲧⲛⲉ ('the lower side,' in glossary).

[113] l. 115 ⲁⲩ; editor; Editor's restoration ⲙ̄ⲙ[ⲁⲩ] — 3pl object pronoun completing 'molded them,' parallel to immediately preceding usage.

[115] l. 117 ⲓⲱⲧ; editor; Editor's restoration ⲡ[ⲓⲱⲧ] — title 'Father (of Life)' completed by following ⲛⲧⲉ ⲡⲧⲱⲛⲋ in line 25. The Father of Life sets the boundary of the sea (cf. Job 38).

[116] l. 119 ϩⲛ̄; editor; Editor's restoration [ϩⲛ] — preposition introducing ⲟⲩⲡⲗⲁⲥⲙⲁ 'in a molding' on line 27.

[118] l. 125 ⲁⲥ; pipeline restoration, confidence: moderate; 2 chars; perfect 3sg.f prefix completing ⲁⲥⲱϣ 'she cried'

[119] l. 126 ⲡⲡⲛⲁ ⲉⲧⲁⲛⲍ̄ ⲡⲓⲱⲧ — "the Living Spirit, the Father"; pipeline restoration, confidence: low; 17 chars; works of the Living Spirit/Father of Life — connects to following 'of Life'

[120] l. 131 ⲧⲧ; editor; Editor's restoration of feminine article ⲧ- + ordinal prefix ⲧ- of ⲧⲙⲁϩϣⲁⲙⲧ 'the third'

[121] l. 132 ⲡ; editor; Editor's restoration of definite article ⲡ- of ⲡϣⲟⲩϣⲟⲩ/ⲡⲉⲧϣⲟⲩϣⲟⲩ 'the Boastful one'

[122] l. 132 ⲟⲩ ⲁⲥⲡⲗ; editor; Editor's restoration: end of ⲡϣⲟⲩϣⲟⲩ + verb ⲁⲥⲡⲗⲁⲥⲥⲉ 'she molded' (parallel to ⲁⲥⲡⲗⲁⲥⲥⲉ ⲙ̄ⲡϣⲏⲛ in line 28)

[123] l. 133 trace: ⲛ . . ⲉ . . . .

[125] l. 134 ⲙⲁϩ ⲁⲩⲟ; pipeline restoration, confidence: low; Trace 'ⲙⲁϩ' suggests ⲙ̄ⲙⲁϩ 'them' (Lyc) + ⲁⲩⲟⲩⲱⲛϩ 'they manifested'

[126] l. 136 ⲡⲕⲉ; editor; Editor's restoration completing ⲡⲕⲉⲕⲉ 'the Darkness' from preceding lacuna of ~7 chars

[127] l. 136 ⲟⲩⲉ — "their (own)"; editor; Editor's restoration; reading uncertain — possibly 'their (own)' or some abstract noun in parallel with ⲧⲟⲩⲥⲓⲁ

[128] l. 137 ⲕⲉ ⲁⲡⲕⲟⲥ; editor; Editor's restoration completing ⲡⲕⲉⲕⲉ 'the Darkness' and adding ⲁⲡⲕⲟⲥⲙⲟⲥ 'to the cosmos'

[129] l. 137 ϣⲱ; editor; Editor's restoration of ϣⲱⲡⲉ 'become, come to be'

[130] l. 3 ⲧ; editor; Editor's restoration of ⲧ in ⲛ̄ϩⲏⲧⲟⲩ 'in them / among them'

[131] l. 4 ⲣⲁⲩ — "against them"; pipeline restoration, confidence: moderate; Completion of ⲁⲣⲁⲩ 'against them' before relative ⲉⲧⲉ; ⲡⲱϣⲛⲉ ⲁⲣⲁⲩ 'plotted against them' is the standard collocation.

[132] l. 28 ⲛ ⲁⲥⲧⲱⲕ ⲁⲣⲉⲧⲥ ⲛ-; editor; editor's restoration completing ⲡⲱϩⲛ 'planting' + ⲁⲥⲧⲱⲕ ⲁⲣⲉⲧⲥ 'she stood fast' (cf. accumulated ⲧⲏⲕ ⲁⲣⲉⲧ=)

[134] l. 46 ⲛ ⲛⲥⲉ-; editor; completion of ⲥⲡⲏⲗⲁⲓⲟⲛ 'caverns' + conjunctive ⲛⲥⲉ- continuing to ⲭⲓⲧⲟ̄ 'bring it' on next line

[135] l. 63 ⲛⲥ; editor; conjunctive prefix ⲙ̄ⲥ- + ⲧⲉⲉϩ 'gives'; parallel construction with surrounding ⲙ̄ⲥ- conjunctive verb chain

[136] l. 72 ⲉ; editor; single restored letter, possibly forming the prefix ⲉ-ⲛⲏⲩ 'coming' (subject 'one' in conditional clause); the verb continues into line 20 with ϣⲙ̄

[137] l. 75 ϣ; editor; habitual prefix ϣⲁ- of the verb ϣⲁⲥⲃⲱⲕ 'she habitually goes'; confirmed by parallel ϣⲁⲥⲃⲱⲕ ⲁⲍⲟⲩⲛ in line 29

[138] l. 80 ⲁⲣⲁⲥ; editor; directional + 3sg.f suffix; the scent carried inward to herself (the φύσις-faculty); parallel ⲁⲣⲁϩ in line 11

[141] l. 93 ⲙⲉⲩ; pipeline restoration, confidence: high; Completion of ⲉⲧⲙ̄ⲙⲉⲩ 'that' modifying the taste.

[142] l. 94 ⲩ; pipeline restoration, confidence: high; Single-letter completion of Ⲧⲉⲛⲑⲩⲙⲏⲥⲓⲥ.

[143] l. 94 ⲧⲍⲉ — "the manner"; pipeline restoration, confidence: moderate; 'The manner' opening the parable structure; ⲧⲍⲉ ⲁⲛ ⲧⲉ ⲧⲉⲓ 'the manner also is this'.

[144] l. 96 ⲥⲝⲓⲧⲥ̄ — "and she carries it"; pipeline restoration, confidence: moderate; Continuation of the inward-carrying formula.

[145] l. 106 ⲛ; pipeline restoration, confidence: high; Single-letter completion: ⲥⲩⲛⲃⲟⲩⲗⲓⲁ 'senators' (συμβούλια).

[146] l. 108 ⲥ; pipeline restoration, confidence: high; Single-letter completion of στρατηλάτης 'general/officer'.

[147] l. 111 ⲛⲓⲙ; pipeline restoration, confidence: high; 'Every thing'; ϫⲱⲃ ⲛⲓⲙ standard quantifier.

[150] l. 127 Ⲧϩⲉ; editor; Editor restored [ⲧⲧ]; same discourse marker as line 5 introducing the next sense in the enumeration (smell, then taste).

[151] l. 128 ⲧⲩⲡⲟⲥ; editor; Editor restored ⲡⲓ[ⲧⲩⲡ]ⲟⲥ; the same word ⲡⲓⲧⲩⲡⲟⲥ is fully preserved immediately after, confirming the reading.

[154] l. 165 ⲉ; editor; Single letter restored; ⲡⲕⲱⲧⲉ 'the encircling' (already in glossary).

[155] l. 174 ⲡⲉ; editor; †ⲡⲉ 'taste' (already in glossary); -ⲡⲉ restored.

Compassions Above; Hidden and Manifest Members

Elaboration

The Lord's grief at what he sees, and the body of his outgoing surveyed. T59 — the three compassions of the Lord at the registers where life proceeds, where the Divine Human stands, and where the call goes forth; the divine bent in pity over the soul still mingled. T60 — the four weepings of the rational: three at descent under necessity (knowing what the self will do) and a fourth at the consummation, mourning those who prepared themselves for falsity and so are cut off from rest. T61 — the body of the divine outgoing as analogous to the human body: the Father hidden within as interior members, the two ships of light shining as eyes openly manifest, Jesus the Radiance as the speaking tongue declaring everything within and without — the wound and the healing alike.

in the three powers that are inclined of heart, which have come forth from the Father. The first who grieves is the first Mother of the Living One: she takes pity, indeed, on account of her children who stand in tribulation, having been mingled with the Darkness and the ⌈the Poison⌉, having been bound in the entire archonic host. Therefore she grieves, being ⌈filled⌉ with longing for them as they receive the tribulations. The time when she s- ⌈she sees⌉ them under the suffering that comes upon them, she habitually grieves and ⌈mourns⌉ for them. ⌈The second one⌉ who is grieved ⌈in⌉ heart is the First Man, whose ⌈His Greatness⌉ and his Kingship are established in the Vessel of Light. [———] He himself also grieves in heart on account of his five sons who stand fast in the midst of the danger; for every chosen one who is pleasing to them — that they not be afflicted — weighs upon their five. Every time when they hear the voice of their weeping when they cry forth on account of the bondages and the blows of the Enemy that come upon them daily, befalling them — in this manner, at every time, he bears ⌈grief⌉ and mourning on account of his ⌈sons⌉.

The third one who grieves —.

SPIRITUAL READING

There are three registers at which the Lord, going forth from his inmost, is bent in compassion toward the soul that has not yet come into recognition.

The first compassion is the Lord at the register of life-bearing. Because life proceeds from him into the rational, what he has begotten is his own; and when the rational stands in the tribulation of mingling — when the faculties given life from above are confused with what the soul has claimed, and held fast within every particular form the self has taken — the Lord at this register is moved with pity. He suffers with the soul in its suffering. He longs after the very faculties that are pressed under the self's organization, and as long as they bear the affliction of being claimed and not yet recognized, his life-bearing love continues to mourn over them.

The second compassion is the Lord at the register of his Divine Humanity. From this register his rule and dominion are established within the vessel of the rational, and the rational itself in its full fivefold operation stands fast in the midst of the contest. Because every chosen state, every faculty that is pleasing to the divine humanity going forth, presses upon those five degrees of the rational, the Lord at this register also grieves: whenever the rational cries out under the bonds and blows that the self daily inflicts upon it, the Divine Human hears that cry as his own. He bears the soul's grief and mourning as long as those degrees of his own going-forth remain pressed under what the soul has claimed.

The third compassion — here the teaching turns to the Lord at the register where his call is sent out to the rational — but the surviving text breaks off before this third grief is named in full.

What the teaching teaches is this: the Lord does not stand off from the soul's tribulation. At every register at which he goes forth — as the source of life, as the form of humanity, as the call summoning the rational — he is bent in sorrow over the soul's confusion, and his compassion is itself part of what works the soul's regeneration.

The garments of the sons of the First Man wept; they raised up (their cry) three times, thereafter they fell silent. There is also another fourth weeping in which they shall weep at the end, and they shall be stilled from their weeping, and they shall not see them weeping again from this hour onward.

Now the first weeping in which they wept is the time when they saw the Darkness, the Enemy, hanging extended at a distance against them. They knew every matter that would befall them; they perceived what would rise up against them, and would come upon them through him — but on account of the Necessity, they hastened in unto him; ⌈they fought⌉. ⌈That color="#999999">[color="#000000">moment⌉ is the chosen [moment] in which the Andrias shall go ⌈up⌉, ⌈And he shall leave them⌉ ⌈by themselves alone⌉; they shall weep, for ⌈they shall remain⌉ ⌈behind⌉ in the affliction forever, since ⌈they shall be cut off⌉ and they shall be separated forth from the Last Andrias ⌈of this manner⌉ — by a necessity, namely the souls who are prepared for the Error, ⌈according to⌉ the recompense of the works which they have done. Those who shall enter ⌈into the⌉ ⌈Darkness⌉, and they shall be bound with the Darkness — in the manner that they desired toward it, ⌈They have⌉ loved it, set ⌈their face⌉ before it, hour by ⌈hour⌉, ⌈That color="#999999">[color="#000000">moment⌉, in which the Last Andrias shall go ⌈up⌉ ⌈in color="#000000">it⌉. ⌈They color="#000000">shall color="#000000">weep⌉ after him, and they shall give a great voice, for they shall be cut off from the unity of this great Andrias and they shall remain behind forever. This great ⌈hidden⌉ weeping which stands concealed before the souls and [. . .] of [. .] who are prepared for the Error according to their works. ⌈They shall weep⌉, but in that weeping they shall not be silenced from it for ever, since no rest shall reach them from this moment.

ⲛ̄ⲧⲁⲩ ⲁⲉ ϩⲱⲱⲩ ⲛ̄ϩⲃⲥⲁⲩⲉ ⲛ̄ⲧⲉ ⲛⲓⲥⲧⲟⲓⲭⲉⲓⲟⲛ ⲛⲉ ⲡⲓⲙⲁϩ ϩⲧⲁⲩ ⲛ̄ⲣⲓⲙⲉ ⲟ ⲙⲡⲱⲱ ⲛ̄ϩⲏⲧ ⲁⲣⲁⲩ ϩⲛ̄ⲁⲱⲧ̄ ⲛⲁϩⲣⲉⲩ ⲛ̄ ϩⲟⲩⲟ ⲁⲡⲓⲕⲉⲱⲁⲙⲧ ⲛ̄ⲣⲓⲙⲉ ⲛ̄ⲱⲁⲣⲡⲧ ⲡⲱⲩ ⲉⲛ ⲡⲉ [ϩ][28] [ϩⲧⲁⲩ][29] ⲛ̄ⲣⲓⲙⲉ ⲁⲗⲗⲁ ⲉⲩⲣⲓⲙⲉ ⲉⲩⲡⲏⲱ ⲛ̄ϩⲏⲧ ϩⲁ ⲛⲓ[ⲯⲩⲭⲁⲩⲉ][30] ⲛⲉⲧⲟⲩⲛⲁⲱⲁⲧⲟⲩ ⲁⲃⲁⲗ ⲙ̄ⲡⲙⲧⲁⲛ ⲉⲡⲉⲓⲁⲏ ⲙⲛ̄ ⲙ̄ⲧⲁⲛ ⲛⲁ ⲱⲱⲡⲉ ⲛⲉⲩ ⲁⲧⲣⲟⲩⲙ̄ⲧⲁⲛ ⲙ̄ⲙⲁⲩ ⲁⲃⲁⲗ ⲛ̄ⲧⲃⲁⲥⲁⲛⲟⲥ ⲱⲁ ⲁⲛⲏϩⲉ

But they themselves — the firmaments of the elements — they are the fourth fourth weeping, being grieved at heart over them with lamentation before them, more than the other three first weepings; theirs is not ⌈the fourth⌉ weeping, but they weep being grieved at heart over the souls who shall be cut off from the rest, since no rest shall come to be for them that they may rest there, away from the torment, for ever.

And the cause indeed of the last going-astray of the souls.

SPIRITUAL READING

As the Lord goes forth into the soul as the Divine Human, the rational accommodates itself downward through degrees, and in each degree it is clothed in an outer truth fitted to that level. These outer truths weep three times as the rational descends, and then they fall silent. There is also a fourth weeping, which comes at the end; that one too will be quieted, and after it is over the rational will never weep again.

The first weeping is the moment when the rational, going forth, sees the self for what it is — sees self-love stretched out at a distance against it, the contradiction it must enter. In that moment the rational knows everything that will come upon it: what will rise up against it, what it will have to bear through the natural mind that it is about to put on. Yet under the necessity by which the vessel must form, it goes in toward what it has seen. It weeps because it sees, and it goes in because it must; and after the three weepings of descent are complete, it grows still.

The fourth weeping is different. It belongs to the consummation, to the chosen moment when the final gathering takes place and all that is the Lord's is brought up into the regenerated whole. In that moment the rational weeps for the souls that have prepared themselves for falsity — souls that loved the darkness, set it continually before themselves hour by hour, and shaped their works toward it. Such souls, by the necessity of what they have desired, are bound to what they loved; they are separated off from the final gathering and cut away from the unity that the regenerated rational has become. They remain behind in their affliction forever, and from this hour onward no rest reaches them.

This is why the fourth weeping is greater than the first three. The earlier weepings were the sorrow of going down into the contest under necessity, knowing the self that had to be entered. The fourth is the sorrow of seeing those who, given the contest, gave themselves to what could not be raised — souls cut off from rest because no rest is possible for what has bound itself wholly to self-love. Even the structural boundaries of the rational, the firmaments that hold the degrees apart so that influx may be received, share in this grieving: they too weep over those who shall be cut off from rest, with a lamentation deeper than the three weepings of descent. It is not the weeping of going forth; it is the weeping of seeing some who will not return.

The cause of this last going-astray of the souls — [the chapter continues here, but the surviving text breaks off at this point].

In the manner that the teaching of the body is set within, being hidden in the ⌈storehouses⌉ which are within the body, not being manifested forth — according to this comparison thus also is this, in which exists the Father, the God of Truth, being himself hidden in his kingship, being manifested forth, not before this place of emptiness which is outside; in the manner thus also of the two eyes of the body, that they are revealed forth, they are manifested forth, they also do the giving-of-light to the body — thus also is this — the two ships of light, the Radiances which are manifested forth in the whole world and the whole creation. They have not had their light hidden ever — they are alike, alike to the two eyes of the body, while the soul also lives, being likened in the manner in which she stands fast in stillness, being manifested forth in a stillness, being manifested forth, they touching her, she receiving honor from the hands of the parts of the flesh which destroy her, they af- ⌈afflicting her, she⌉ being likened according to the mystery of the body ⌈of the flesh⌉, they touching it, they grasping it while receiving wound and plague.

He, however, who speaks revealing forth concerning the pain of the body, or ⌈sickness⌉ ⌈in⌉ his stripe.

Likewise also is this, whom ⌈Jesus⌉ the Radiance is compared to: he whom they send forth from the Greatness to reveal forth and to manifest forth concerning every matter — of that which is outside and that which is within, that which is upon the upper side and that which is upon the lower side, either concerning the aeons that are outside, the hidden ones, which ⌈are not manifested forth⌉, or also concerning the ships of the Light which are manifested forth — ⌈he it is⌉ who reveals forth concerning them; he also is the one who manifests forth concerning the glory and the Greatness which dwells in them; also concerning this wound and the plague of the living ⌈soul⌉ — Jesus is the one who manifests it forth and proclaims concerning her also, and concerning the rest, manifesting forth concerning her purification and her healing.

SPIRITUAL READING

Consider how a body is made. There are members within it that are hidden — organs that do their work without ever being seen, and yet are touched and held in honor in their own fullness within. There are other members within that are not touched and do not stand in that same nearness, hidden further still. And there are members openly visible on the outside, manifest and at work in the light. One body, but ordered in degrees: some interior, some interior and untouched, some outwardly shown.

So it is with the Lord himself. In his inmost he is hidden — divine love in its own dominion, not put forth to the empty places outside, not shown to what cannot yet receive him. He keeps his own interior, as the teaching of the body is kept within its storehouses and never displayed at the surface. What lies in his inmost remains his own; the place outside has no access to it.

And yet the Lord does shine. As the two eyes of the body are openly manifest and give the body its light, so two great vessels of his shining go forth — divine truth made visible to the whole field of the soul's life, illumining the natural mind throughout the cosmos and the whole creation. Their light has never been hidden. They are like the two eyes of the body, and by them the soul lives. The soul, when she stands fast in stillness, is illumined by them, manifested in that stillness; and even when the parts of the flesh that would destroy her press in upon her and wound her — even when the natural's lower members afflict her — she still receives honor through these shining principles, because they reach her where she stands.

And as the tongue of the body speaks — proclaiming, reproving, revealing every matter that is in the body, telling forth what is within and uttering it outwardly, declaring the body's glory and its shame, making known its pain and its sickness and its wounds — so the Lord shining forth as Jesus the Radiance is the one sent from the divine to reveal every matter. He speaks of what is outside and what is within, what is above and what is below; he makes known the hidden states that are not yet manifest and the manifest vessels of light that are; he proclaims the glory and the greatness that dwell within them; and he tells the truth of the soul herself — her wound and her plague, and likewise her purification and her healing.

The Father stays within. His shining goes out. His word makes everything known. This is how the one Lord, hidden in his own kingship, comes to the soul: kept inmost in himself, opened to her through his light, spoken to her through his revealing truth.

APPARATUS

[1] l. 7 ⲙⲉⲧ — “the Poison”; editor; Editor restoration of ⲙⲉⲧⲟⲩ 'poison' (in vocabulary). Manichaean cosmological motif of light-substance mingled with Darkness and Poison.

[2] l. 8 ⲙⲟ — “filled”; editor; Editor restoration of ⲙⲟⲩϩ 'be filled.' Idiom ⲙⲟⲩϩ ⲛ̄ⲥⲱ= 'be filled with longing for.'

[3] l. 9 ⲛ — “she sees”; editor; Editor restoration of ⲥⲁⲛⲉⲩ 'see' (Lyc. ⲥ-ⲛⲁⲩ '3sg.f-see') continuing onto next line.

[4] l. 9 ⲉ — “mourns”; editor; Editor restoration of ϯϩⲏⲃⲉ 'mourn' (ϩⲏⲃⲉ 'mourning').

[5] l. 10 ⲧⲧⲙⲁ — “The second one”; editor; Editor restoration of feminine ordinal ⲧⲧⲙⲁϩⲥⲛⲉⲩ 'the second' (in accumulated vocabulary), structurally required by enumeration of grieving powers.

[6] l. 10 ⲛ — “in”; editor; Editor restoration of preposition ⲛ̄ϩⲏⲧ 'in heart.'

[9] l. 19 ϣ — “sons”; editor; Editor restoration; reading required by context 'his sons'

[14] l. 17 ⲩ — “of this manner”; editor; Completes -ⲟⲩ of ⲛⲧⲉⲓⲧⲟⲩ from l.4

[15] l. 18 ⲕⲁⲧⲁ — “according to”; editor; Greek loan κατά; only ⲕⲁⲧ bracketed

[16] l. 18 ⲁϩⲟⲩⲛ ⲁⲡ — “into the”; editor; Standard ⲁϩⲟⲩⲛ ⲁ- 'into'; bracket [ⲛ ⲁ] completes ⲁϩⲟⲩⲛ ⲁⲡ-, continues into l.7 ⲕⲉⲕⲉ

[17] l. 19 ⲕⲉⲕⲉ — “Darkness”; editor; Cosmological term; only ⲕⲉⲕ bracketed

[18] l. 20 ⲁⲩ — “They have”; editor; Perfect 3pl ⲁⲩ-; only ⲩ bracketed

[19] l. 20 ⲡⲟⲩⲉϩⲟ — “their face”; editor; Standard idiom ⲕⲱ ⲡⲟⲩϩⲟ ϩⲁⲧⲏ= 'set their face toward'; only ⲡ bracketed

[22] l. 21 ⲁϩⲣⲏⲓ̈ — “up”; editor; Directional; only ⲣ bracketed

[24] l. 22 ϲⲉⲛⲁⲣⲓⲙⲉ — “They shall weep”; editor; Future + verb; only ⲉⲛ bracketed

[25] l. 25 after ⲙ

[26] l. 25 after ⲛ̄

[27] l. 26 ⲉⲩⲛⲁⲣⲓⲙⲉ — “They shall weep”; editor; Future circumstantial; only ⲛⲁ bracketed

[28] l. 31 ϩ — “the fourth”; editor; Demonstrative + ordinal-prefix beginning ⲡⲓⲙⲁϩϩⲧⲁⲩ 'the fourth'; only final ϩ bracketed (at line end before [ϩⲧ]ⲁⲩ in l.20)

[29] l. 32 ϩⲧⲁⲩ — “the fourth”; editor; Lyc ⲡⲓⲙⲁϩϩⲧⲁⲩ 'the fourth' — completes the ordinal across line break

[30] l. 32 ⲯⲩⲭⲁⲩⲉ; editor; Standard plural ⲯⲩⲭⲁⲩⲉ; only ⲉ bracketed

[31] l. 28 ⲛ̄ⲧⲉ ⲧⲥⲁⲣ̄ⲝ — “of the flesh”; editor; Continues 'mystery of the body of the flesh' from previous line — the standard Manichaean term-pair ⲡⲥⲱⲙⲁ ⲛ̄ⲧⲉ ⲧⲥⲁⲣ̄ⲝ 'body of the flesh' recurs throughout the chapter (lines 9, 23, 31).

[32] l. 38 ⲛ; editor; Editor restores ⲛ as initial letter of ⲛ̄ⲧⲙⲛⲧⲛⲁϭ 'from the Greatness.'

[33] l. 40 ⲙⲡⲥⲁ; editor; Editor restores ⲙⲡⲥⲁ to complete ⲡⲉⲧⲙⲡⲥⲁⲙⲡⲓⲧⲛⲉ 'that which is upon the lower side' (cf. accumulated vocabulary ⲡⲥⲁⲙⲡⲓⲧⲛⲉ); pair-partner with the just-stated ⲡⲥⲁⲛⲧⲡⲉ.

[34] l. 40 ⲡ; editor; Editor restores ⲡ as initial letter of ⲡⲓⲧⲛ̄ 'lower.'

[35] l. 41 ⲁⲃⲁⲗ ⲉⲛ — “are not manifested forth”; editor; Editor restores ⲁⲃⲁⲗ ⲉⲛ; the negation ⲉⲛ is required to distinguish 'the hidden ones (which are NOT manifest)' from 'the ships of light (which ARE manifest)' in the immediately following ⲉⲓⲧⲉ-clause.

[36] l. 42 ⲛⲍ ⲁ; editor; Editor restores ⲛⲍ ⲁ to complete ⲉⲧⲟⲩⲁⲛⲍ ⲁⲃⲁⲗ 'which are manifest forth.'

[37] l. 42 ⲧⲁϩ ⲡⲉ — “he it is”; editor; Editor restores ⲛ̄ⲧⲁϩ ⲡⲉ 'he it is' — the standard pivot phrase introducing the Christological identification (Jesus the Radiance is the one who reveals).

[38] l. 43 ⲍⲁ ⲡ; editor; Editor restores ⲍⲁ ⲡ to complete the prepositional phrase 'concerning the glory.'

[40] l. 45 ⲁ; editor; Editor restores ⲁ as initial letter of ⲁⲃⲁⲗ continuing on next line.

[41] l. 46 ⲣ; editor; Editor restores ⲣ within ⲍⲁⲣⲁⲥ 'concerning her.'

The Elements Worn; the Three Rocks; Love and Hatred

Elaboration

What stands and what undoes itself. T62 — the Divine Human clothed in the elements stood against the self, with the lions-garment of strong loves swallowed and become a hidden river of judgment burning within those who consumed it. T63 — the three foundations of glory the Lord has set in the natural mind: the Pillar of Glory standing through the whole circuit, the Land of Light pressed down upon the land of darkness, the great Thought of Jesus the Radiance giving the understanding its light. T64 — what love and hatred are at their cosmic origin: love is the bond of the Greatness, the principle by which the Lord and all that is his are kept together as one body; hatred is selfhood's first death, the gushing-up of self-love that destroys even what it itself produces.

SPIRITUAL READING

In the first appointed season of the soul's formation, the Lord went forth as the Divine Human clothed in the elements of the natural — taking on, for the soul's sake, the very stuff in which the contest must be waged — and stood firm on his feet against that first opposition which had risen up in the soul's darkness: the self asserting itself as ruler, organized in countless particular shapes of self-claiming, fierce and innumerable, set on crushing host upon host of the primordial things that had spread strife within.

Into that contest the Lord let love and thought be given over, fire and wind released into the natural where the self had organized itself. And then — and here the heart of the teaching turns — the outer covering of the strong loves themselves was let fall to those self-loving arrangements of the natural mind. The self lay in wait and swallowed those strong loves down. From within it, the loves it had swallowed broke open and poured forth: a river streamed from the very mouth of the self, but now as falsity, as a current that bears destruction wherever it runs. What had been given as strength of loving, claimed and consumed by self-love, became a flood pouring out of every claiming mouth, filling each one to the brim — a downward outpouring, going on and on until the appointed measure is filled, and they burn continually in the fire and conflagration of what they have swallowed.

These self-loving arrangements live in the manner of seasons cut off from rain: their dryness has no downpour, the days of their existence are without the descent of influx. The river that pours from them is itself a branch of the great river of Judgment — for what runs out of self-love's mouth is already its own sentence. They are bound, fettered, blackened, buried, in every place where they have settled; they are hidden; they are not yet manifest before any eye of flesh upon the land of death. But the time is coming when they shall be made manifest: the whole order of the natural-as-claimed shall be undone and loosed; all of these shall cease at last, troubled in the wrathful voice they have lifted up above the thunders. What seems great in the soul now — these rivers of the self's outpouring — is to be reckoned only as one river among a thousand of the hidden, only the small visible portion of that river of Judgment which flows upon the ground beneath everything.

Behold then the share that has fallen to the branch of the elements, and the foundation of the strong loves swallowed there: how great is the Lord who, having clothed himself in the natural and gone down into the contest, stood against that whole multitude in whose power the strong loves lay, and laid the foundation of the Divine Human who put on those very garments — that the soul, through what was swallowed, might in the end be reached and made new.

SPIRITUAL READING

The Lord lays down three foundations of glory within the natural mind, set there by his own appointing and placed at the outer reaches of the soul's worlds, so that the rational has something stable to stand upon as it is being formed.

The first foundation is the path of regeneration itself — the Perfect Man, the rational fully come into its stature, summoned forth at the Lord's call. He is set within the complete circuit of the natural, and his foot is planted from the lowest place upward to the highest, so that he bears the whole natural up beneath him. He becomes the chief of every bearing principle in the rational. In his strength he raises himself up and so establishes everything above and everything below: the structure of the soul's ascent is itself one of the foundations the Lord has laid.

The second foundation is the inmost state of light established directly upon what the soul has claimed — the new land of wisdom set down upon the land of darkness. By this foundation the back parts of death's storehouse are humbled, its stings driven down. The Lord prepares this foundation in great firmness on its outward side, so that it presses upon the root of self-love, submerges it, drives its sting into the very source from which death grows. Where the self had its bottom, the Lord sets a floor of received good above it, and that floor holds.

The third foundation is the great Thought summoned forth — Jesus the Radiance, divine truth shining as illumining wisdom in the rational. Where the first foundation gives the soul a way to stand and rise, and the second presses down what would pull it under, this third gives the understanding its light, so that the soul can see what it is doing and recognize what is given.

These three foundations come forth from one great trust and are set in three great places within the natural, honored, spread out across the field of the soul's life. They are not the soul's own work; they were appointed and established according to the purpose of the Lord's love.

Because of this they have called this Father, the Master of the All, 'Love,' because he gave the victory of ⌈of his Aeons⌉ together with his members.

And what then is hatred? Hatred is the first death, that which gushed forth and was manifested out of the land of the Darkness — this is why they call it 'hatred,' because it destroyed her entire offspring of destruction; it sinned against another power foreign to it, it destroyed her. Because of this they call it 'the hatred,' because it has ⌈wrought⌉ a destruction and a defect within flesh, and (in) what is not its share. in every type. The cross also of the Light — the ⌈soul⌉living soul — it itself also they destroyed, they killed ⌈them⌉ 'the hatred.' From hatred — envy. From ⌈envy⌉ envy — the devil. From the devil — the ⌈wicked one⌉wicked one — that which came forth from the wicked one.

SPIRITUAL READING

What is love? Love is the bond of the Lord himself — the principle by which the Divine is one and by which all that proceeds from him is held together. It is what dwells in the inmost state where his glory is, the place where the whole of his nature has been brought into manifestation as a single body, joined and undivided. Love is what reaches across every distinction and holds it as one. For this reason the Lord in his inmost is named Love itself: he is called by that name because love is the victory by which he and all that is his are kept together as one. Love is the conjoining principle — what makes the Lord's own life one life, and what, when received, conjoins the soul to him.

And what is hatred? Hatred is the first death. It is what wells up from the soul's claiming, what comes forth from what the soul has appropriated to itself; it is the natural turned in on itself becoming actively opposed to love. Hatred is not merely an absence; it is destruction at work. It even destroys what it itself has brought forth — the self's own offspring — because the principle of self-love, once set against love, sets itself against everything, including the productions of its own claiming. It strikes against a power not its own, and in striking, it undoes whatever it touches. This is why it is called hatred: because it works destruction and defect within the soul's outermost form, in places that are not its own to act upon.

So in every register where love would conjoin, hatred would separate; wherever the Lord's living truth would be received in the rational, this same opposing principle has worked to put it to death. From hatred comes envy; from envy, the adversarial form of self-love; from that, every wicked act that issues outward. Love is the one bond by which the Lord and the soul are held in unity; hatred is the unmaking of that bond — selfhood's death turned active, the soul's separation from the source of life.

[14] l. 57 ⲙ̄ⲡ — “of”; editor; [ⲙⲡ]ⲓⲉⲣⲟ 'of that river' — genitive completing ⲧⲟⲁⲧ from previous line

[16] l. 64 ⲧⲁⲓ — “This”; pipeline restoration, confidence: moderate; 3 chars before ⲉⲧⲙ̄ⲙⲉⲩ ⲧⲉ ⲧϣⲁⲣⲡ 'is the first (fem.)'; demonstrative ⲧⲁⲓ 'this (fem.)' agrees with feminine ⲧϣⲁⲣⲡ and matches the Kephalaia summary formula.

[17] l. 64 ⲙⲙⲛⲧϫⲁϫⲉ — “Enmity”; pipeline restoration, confidence: low; Direct parallel to §3761: ⲧⲱⲁⲣⲡ ⲓⲙⲙⲛⲧϫⲁϫⲉ ⲉⲧⲁⲥⲱⲱⲡⲉ ϩⲙ ⲡⲕⲉⲕⲉ 'the first Enmity which came to be in the Darkness' — the same formula closes here. The estimated 5 chars is exceeded but the formulaic identity is decisive.

[18] l. 64 ⲙ — “Enmity”; editor; ϩ[ⲙ] — restoration of ⲙ for preposition ϩⲙ̄ 'in'

[19] l. 66 ⲡⲉϩⲁⲉ ⲛ̄ — “the last”; pipeline restoration, confidence: low; 7 chars containing partial 'ⲉϩⲁ'; ⲡⲉϩⲁⲉ 'the last' followed by genitive ⲛ̄ fits 'the last of the offspring of the prison, the mighty boundary' — coheres with the consummation register (panaretos / the bound self at the bolos in the lexicon).

[22] l. 70 ⲛⲏ — “those who”; pipeline restoration, confidence: low; 2 chars; demonstrative ⲛⲏ 'those (who)' before relative ⲉⲧⲟⲩⲱⲛϩ ⲁⲃⲁⲗ — 'those manifested'. Standard Lycopolitan distal demonstrative.

[23] l. 73 ϣⲟ — “a thousand”; pipeline restoration, confidence: high; 2 chars; ϣⲟ 'thousand' is fixed by §3793 ⲟⲩⲓⲉⲣⲟ ⲅⲁⲣ ⲛ̄ⲟⲩⲱⲧ ϩⲛ̄ ϣⲟ ⲛ̄ⲗⲉⲣⲟ — 'one river out of a thousand rivers'. The construction 'the rivers being reckoned to a thousand' is the same image.

[24] l. 76 ϩ; editor; ⲡⲕⲁ[ϩ] — restoration of ϩ for ⲡⲕⲁϩ 'the earth'

[26] l. 79 ⲙ̄ⲙⲉⲩ — “there”; editor; ⲉⲧ[ⲙ̄ⲙⲉⲩ] 'that one (there)' — standard demonstrative

[27] l. 81 ⲁϩⲣ̄ⲫⲟⲣⲉ — “has worn”; pipeline restoration, confidence: high; Direct parallel to §3796: ⲡⲣⲱⲙⲉ ⲉⲧⲁϩⲣ̄ⲫⲟⲣⲉ 'the man who has worn'. Same construction here for the First Man who clothed himself in the elements — also matches the chapter title.

[28] l. 20 ⲓ; editor; Trace of ⲉ visible; ⲓ restored to complete ⲁⲩⲉⲓ ⲁⲃⲁⲗ 'they came forth.'

[29] l. 22 ⲟⲩ — “by themselves”; editor; Editor restoration; ⲟⲩ at end of line 28 + ⲁⲉⲉⲧⲟⲩ at start of line 29 form ⲟⲩⲁⲉⲉⲧⲟⲩ 'they alone, by themselves.'

Three Things Shown to Adam; First Image; the Two Mysteries

Elaboration

What is impressed upon the human, what is worked in the soul by light, what is daily seen. T65 — the three distinctions set upon the human being (divine image, structural pattern of the firstborn, seal of every power), and the seven consequences that follow: why heaven and earth are stirred on the soul's account, and why the self continually presses to draw the light from her. T66 — the seven goods divine truth works in the soul when it shines (sight, peace, wakefulness, nourishment, gathering of beasts to lairs, dissolution of plague, manifestation of the Radiance) — met by seven evils when truth withdraws. T67 — the two visible mysteries: the sun as the likeness of the Father unveiled in his shining, the night as the shadow of the King of Darkness recognized daily by what fills the cosmos when truth is not there.

The first: that they placed upon him the icon of the Exalted One. The demiurges and the molders of his body sealed him before the likeness, radiant of the icon, which manifested itself to them from the upper place. For this reason the icon of Adam exists exalted, beautiful, more than every power, joined with those above and those below. The second work: that they molded Adam in his structure ⌈through the light⌉ of the firstborn-state of heaven and ⌈the earth, that of⌉ the Five Sons. For this reason his ⌈structure⌉ is altered compared with the structure of the rest of the creatures, ⌈since⌉ the structure of all the creatures is altered. Adam ⌈himself⌉, the molding of his soul is extended unto the straight-extension and the spreading-forth of the elements. There is a Mind in him, exalted above that of the other creatures and that of the cattle.

The first: that they placed upon him the icon of the Exalted One. The demiurges and the molders of his body sealed him before the likeness, radiant of the icon, which manifested itself to them from the upper place. For this reason the icon of Adam exists exalted, beautiful, more than every power, joined with those above and those below. Adam ⌈himself⌉, the molding of his soul is extended unto the straight-extension and the spreading-forth of the elements. There is a Mind in him, exalted above that of the other creatures and that of the cattle.

The third is the teaching and the counsels and the seal of all the powers, those above and those below — which the demiurges who established him gathered, and they set within him himself with his portion, being arranged as houses of the zodiac-signs and the stars and the divisions of the days and the years. Since the seal of the entire cosmos is sealed in Adam, for this reason heaven and earth move on his account, they are disturbed, and a turmoil comes to be on his occasion: both the beautiful and the bitter ones. The beautiful indeed are drawn unto life because of their icon and

Once again truly: that the ⌈the archons⌉ appointed Adam and fashioned him, that they may be lord in ⌈him, and take precedence⌉ in the kingship. Concerning seven matters: The first: that he became an Illuminator (φωστήρ) in their creation, in place of the light of the icon of the Ambassador, which he revealed to them forth from above; ⌈since⌉ they all desired the likeness of the icon of the Ambassador — their heart drew after her.

The second: that they shall draw from him the Light, and they shall ensnare him, and they shall hinder him in his going up to the Height.

The third: that on account of the icon of the Ambassador which is set upon him, the entire godhood shall humble itself for them — that of above and that of below — on account of the likeness of the Radiance of the beauty of his lust, for he is desire-arousing in his likeness beyond all creatures.

The fourth: that ⌈he is⌉ an imprint of seal and a new character, in order ⌈that⌉ all the begettings which they shall beget shall be begotten before his ⌈imprint⌉. The fifth: that there shall be revealed in him all the arts (τέχναι) of the powers of those above and those below, those that are hidden and those that are revealed forth, and they shall discriminate (διακρίνειν) in him the All; for of everything there is revelation upon him.

The sixth: that a great patronage (πατρωνία) shall come to be for them in the icon of the Most High that is set upon him; that those of above shall ⌈shall watch over⌉ the other archons, and shall not do any evil to them on account of Adam. The seventh: that he shall be head and king and lord over the creatures all, and they shall receive the kingship in him.

SPIRITUAL READING

Three great works distinguish the human being and exalt the soul above every other formed thing — above the powers of heaven and the powers of earth alike.

The first is that the divine image is set upon the soul. The shining likeness that issues from above, the radiance of the Lord as he goes forth in the form of the Divine Human, is impressed upon the rational and stamped into its very substance as the soul is being formed. This is why the inner figure of the human being stands beautiful and exalted beyond every other formation, joined at once to what is above and to what is below.

The second is that the soul is built in the pattern of the firstborn of heaven, structurally bonded with the rational in its five degrees. The soul's molding is extended through the elements; it reaches into ultimates and is spread out through the whole natural order. Set within it is a mind exalted above the merely natural — a faculty that no other formation possesses, by which the soul is capable of receiving what is given from above.

The third is that teaching and counsels and the seal of every power above and below are gathered together and set within the soul as one ordered dwelling. The whole circuit of states the soul will pass through — all the cycles, all the degrees, all the divisions of times — is sealed in the human being itself, so that the human being carries the structure of the cosmos in miniature. Because the seal of the whole is sealed in this one, heaven and earth are stirred on its account; what is beautiful and what is bitter both move because of it. The beautiful is drawn upward toward life because of the divine likeness set upon the soul; the bitter is drawn downward toward death and seeks to take precedence over the soul, to rule what was made for higher rule.

Adam was formed in this way for seven reasons.

The first is that the soul was made to be an illuminator within its own creation, bearing in itself the likeness of the Lord's call going forth from above. All that is below desires that likeness; the heart of every faculty is drawn after it.

The second is that the self would draw the light from him and seek to hold him back from his ascent — the soul's own claiming would attempt to ensnare what flows through it and hinder the rising of the rational toward the height. This too is permitted, that the soul may know in freedom what is given and what is claimed.

The third is that, because of the divine likeness set upon him, the whole order of things — what is above and what is below — humbles itself for him. The radiance of the Lord shining in the soul has a beauty that draws all things; nothing in creation is so desirable as the soul that bears the divine image.

The fourth is that a new seal and a fresh character are imprinted upon him, so that everything begotten thereafter is begotten before the soul that bears this stamp — the new humanity becomes the form according to which all subsequent generation takes shape.

The fifth is that all the arts of the powers above and below, the hidden and the manifest, are revealed in the soul; in him the All is discriminated. Everything that is comes to manifestation upon the human being, who becomes the place where the whole is sorted and known.

The sixth is that a great protection is given to him through the divine image set upon the soul: those above keep watch over him, and the disordered self-loves are not permitted to do harm on account of what has been impressed upon him from above.

The seventh is that the soul becomes head and king and lord over the whole formation. Everything that has been made receives its rule through the human being, because in the human being the whole has been gathered and the divine likeness has been set.

What is the manner in which they fashioned him to the likeness of the First Greatness, that which he was revealing to them? For he is the gate of Life and the stronghold of Peace, unto this great Aeon of the [Light] [of Life]. [The] first good that he does for them is his light that shines forth upon them, into the eyes of all men; they see forth before them, walking in him, while he bears away from them the blindness of their night which made them blind in its darkness. [The] second is that, at the moment when he comes to the cosmos in his coming, he brings rest and peace to the entire cosmos in his coming. He himself takes away from them all fear, and the disturbance with which their heart is filled because of all their night, for he bears away the darkness of their midst by his light, and he drives forth in this manner also draws (them) out of fear in his rest. The third is his vigilance: since at the moment when he comes to the cosmos, all men indeed rise up — those who were sleeping — and they

The sixth: at the time when his light shines, the plague of men is at rest from the affliction; his light is poured forth — dissolving the evil magics — from all the men of wickedness.

The seventh: that he is manifested forth and reveals forth from the cosmos the sign of the Radiance of the aeons of the Light which came forth from there to this place — to (be) their sign in this cosmos — in order that they may give light, that the entire creation may see — that for some ⌈part it is⌉ the concerning the night — that she has wickednesses all of them in her. Every time when the night shall come, she does seven of evil in the cosmos.

Ⲧⲱⲁⲣⲡ̄ ⲛ̄ⲙ̄ⲛ̄ⲧⲃⲟⲟⲛⲉ ⲉⲧⲉⲱⲁⲣⲉ ⲧⲟⲩⲱⲏ ⲉⲉⲥ ⲍⲙ̄ ⲡⲕⲟⲥⲙⲟⲥ ⲡⲉ ⲡⲕⲉⲕⲉ ⲉⲧⲉⲱⲁⲥⲙⲁⲍ ⲡⲕⲟⲥⲙⲟⲥ ⲧⲏⲣⲡ̄ ⲍⲁⲣⲁⲍ ⲉⲡⲉⲓ ⲇⲏ ⲡⲛⲉⲩ ⲉⲧⲉⲣⲉ ⲡⲣⲏ ⲛⲁⲍⲱⲧⲡ ⲁⲃⲁⲗ ⲙ̄ⲡⲕⲟⲥⲙⲟⲥ ⲛ̄ⲥⲥⲱ ⲕ ⲁⲣⲁⲍ ⲛ̄ⲛⲉⲍⲁⲕⲧⲓⲛ ⲛ̄ⲧⲟⲩⲛⲟⲩ ⲉⲧⲙ̄ⲙⲉⲩ ⲱⲁⲣⲉ ⲧⲍⲁⲓⲃⲉⲥ ⲛ̄ⲧⲟⲩⲱⲏ ⲡⲱⲣ̄ⲱ ⲁⲃⲁⲗ ⲁⲭⲙ̄ ⲡⲕⲟⲥⲙⲟⲥ ⲧⲏⲣⲡ̄ ⲱⲁⲣⲉ ⲛⲃⲉ[ⲗ][11] ⲛ̄ⲛⲣⲱⲙⲉ ⲙⲟⲩⲍ ⲛ̄ⲕⲙⲏⲙⲉ ⲙⲁⲩⲛⲉⲩ ⲁⲃⲁⲗ ⲟⲩⲧⲉ ⲙⲁⲩⲓⲱⲣⲙ̄

The first of the wickednesses that the night does in the cosmos is the Darkness which fills the entire cosmos with itself. For at the time when the sun shall set forth from the cosmos and shall draw unto himself his rays — at that very hour, the shadow of the night spreads forth upon the entire cosmos; the eyes of men are filled with darkness; they cannot see forth, nor can they discern.

SPIRITUAL READING

By what manner is the soul shaped to bear the likeness of the Lord in his inmost? By the very illumining wisdom that goes forth from him into the rational. That illumining is itself the gate of life and the stronghold of peace, by which the soul is brought up into the great state of regeneration; and as it operates within the soul it works seven goods.

The first good is simply this: it shines into the understanding of all who are able to receive. Wherever it falls, sight is given; the soul walks within that light and finds its way; and as it walks, the blindness that night had laid on the inner eye — the unseeing into which self-love had bound the rational — is taken away.

The second is that wherever this light enters, it brings rest and peace into the whole field of the natural mind. It carries away the fear that had filled the heart and the disturbance that night kept stirring. As it had drawn the soul out of blindness by its shining, so by its rest it draws the soul out of fear.

The third is its wakefulness. When divine truth comes, those who had been sleeping rise; those already awake lay down the strained, anxious watch they had been keeping at the borders of themselves, sitting under arms before the encampments of the self. They cease that fearful vigil because a light has shone into the natural mind that does the watching for them.

The fourth is that it nourishes. It gives strength and savor and fragrance to every perception that has root and grows, to the works that issue from those perceptions, to all the lesser growths and bloomings of the natural mind. Whatever lives in that ground is fed by this shining.

The fifth is that when it shines into the whole of the natural mind, the creeping things and the predatory beasts — the disordered affections full of malice, the cravings that hunt — are gathered back into their lairs. They do not range while the light is up.

The sixth is that when this light shines, the plague that had afflicted men is laid to rest. The light pours forth and dissolves the evil enchantments — the falsities that had bound the rational by counterfeit power — and frees the soul from the workings of those who deal in wickedness.

The seventh is that it manifests within the natural mind itself the sign of the Radiance of the higher states of light from which it has come — setting in this lower place a token of that height, so that the whole structure of what has been formed may see and be given light, and recognize what it belongs to.

Against these seven, the night — the natural mind when divine truth has withdrawn from it — works seven evils. The first is the darkness itself, which fills the whole natural mind with itself. For when the sun of divine wisdom sets and gathers in its rays, in that very hour the shadow of the self spreads over the whole field; the eyes of the understanding are filled with obscurity; the soul can no longer see, and can no longer tell one thing from another.

The Two Mysteries: How Divine Truth Shining in the Rational Bears the Visible Likeness of the Lord in His Inmost with their eyes, because of the Darkness of the night which fills the entire cosmos.

Ⲧⲙⲁϩⲥⲛⲉⲩ ⲛ̄ϩⲱⲃ ⲉⲧϩⲁⲩ ⲉⲧⲉⲱⲁⲣⲉ ⲧⲟⲩⲱⲏ ⲉⲉϩ ⲡⲉ ⲧⲉⲥϩⲣ̄ⲧⲉ ⲉⲡⲉⲓⲇⲏ ⲡⲛⲉⲩ ⲉⲧⲉⲱⲁⲣⲉ ⲧⲉⲥ ϩⲁⲩⲃⲉⲥ ⲟⲩⲱⲛϩ ⲁⲃⲁⲗ ⲱⲁⲣⲉ ⲧⲉⲥϩⲣ̄ⲧⲉ ⲙⲛ̄ ⲡⲉⲥⲥⲧⲣ̄ⲧⲣ̄ ⲣ[ⲫⲟ][1] ⲣⲉ ⲛ̄ⲛⲣⲱⲙⲉ ⲧⲏⲣⲟⲩ ⲱⲁⲣⲉ ⲡⲕⲟⲥⲙⲟⲥ ⲧⲏⲣⲫ ⲙⲟⲩ[ϩ ⲁⲃⲁⲗ][2] ⲛⲧⲟⲩⲱⲏ

The second of the evil things that the night does is her fear. For at the time when her her shadow is manifested forth, her fear and her disturbance ⌈bear⌉ upon all men; the entire cosmos is ⌈filled forth⌉ by the night.

Ⲧⲙⲁϩⲱⲁⲙⲧ ϧⲉ ⲡ[ⲛⲉⲩ ⲉⲧⲉⲣⲉ ⲧⲟⲩⲱⲏ][3] Ⲧⲧⲱⲁⲣⲡ ⲡⲉ ⲡⲉϩⲟⲩⲁⲓⲛⲉ ϧⲉ ⲟ̄ⲧⲣⲟⲩⲁⲓⲛⲉ ϩⲛ̄ ⲡⲉϩⲟⲩⲁⲓⲛⲉ ⲁⲡⲕⲟⲥⲙⲟⲥ ⲙⲛ̄ ⲛ̄ⲥⲱⲱⲛⲧ̄ ⲧⲏⲣⲟⲩ ⲉⲧⲱⲟⲟⲡ ⲛ̄ϩⲏⲧⲫ Ⲧⲧⲙⲁϩⲥⲛⲉⲩ ⲡⲉ ⲡⲉϩⲥⲁⲓⲉ ⲉⲡⲉⲓⲇⲏ ⲡⲛⲉⲩ ⲉⲧϩⲁⲡⲣⲓⲉ ⲱⲁϩ ⲱⲱⲗ ⲟⲩⲥⲁⲓⲉ ⲙⲛ̄ ⲟⲩⲙⲛ̄ⲧϩⲟⲩⲧⲉⲛ ⲁϧⲛ̄ ⲛ̄ⲥⲱⲱⲛⲧ ⲧⲏⲣⲟⲩ ⲙⲛ ⲛ̄ϩⲃⲏⲩⲉ ⲧⲏⲣⲟⲩ

The third: at the ⌈time when the night⌉... The first is his light, because he gives-light through his light to the cosmos and all the creatures that exist within it. The second is his beauty, since at the time when he shines, he habitually pours forth a beauty and an uprightness upon all creatures and all things.

Ⲧⲧⲙⲁϩⲱⲁⲙⲧ ⲡⲉ ⲧϩⲉⲓⲣⲏⲛⲏ ϧⲉ ⲡⲛⲉⲩ ⲁⲛ ⲉⲧⲉⲣⲉ ⲡⲣⲏ ⲛⲁ ⲡⲣⲏⲓⲉ ⲁⲡⲕⲟⲥⲙⲟⲥ ⲱⲁⲣⲉ ⲛ̄ⲣⲱⲙⲉ ⲧⲏⲣⲟⲩ ϫⲓ ⲁⲥⲡⲁⲥ ⲙⲟⲥ ϩⲓⲧⲟⲟⲧϥ ⲛ̄ⲥⲉϯ ⲟⲩⲉⲓⲣⲏⲛⲏ ⲛ̄ⲛⲉⲩⲉⲣⲏⲩ

The third is the peace, because also at the time when the sun shall shine upon the cosmos, all men are accustomed to receive a greeting through it, and they give peace to one another.

Ⲧⲧⲙⲁϩϩⲁⲩ ⲡⲉ ⲡⲱⲛⲋ̄ ⲛ̄ⲧϯⲩⲭⲏ ⲉⲧⲁⲛⲋ̄ ⲧⲉⲧⲉⲱⲁϩⲃⲁⲗⲥ ⲁⲃⲁⲗ ⲛ̄ⲛⲙ̄ⲡⲣⲉ ⲧⲏⲣⲟⲩ ⲙⲛ̄ ⲛ̄ⲥⲛⲉⲩϩ ⲛ̄ⲧⲡⲉ ⲙⲛ̄ ⲡⲕⲁϩ Ⲧⲧⲙⲁϩϯⲟⲩ ϫⲉ ϩϯ ⲛ̄ⲟⲩⲟ̄ⲁⲙ ⲛ̄ⲛ̄ⲥⲧⲟⲓⲭⲉⲓⲟⲛ ⲛ̄ϩ̄ϯ ⲁⲛ ⲛ̄ⲟⲩ ⲥⲧⲁⲓ ⲙⲛ̄ ⲟⲩϯⲡⲉ ⲙ̄ⲡⲥ̄ⲧⲁⲩⲣⲟⲥ ⲧⲏⲣϩ ⲙ̄ⲡⲟⲩⲁⲓⲛⲉ ⲧϩⲉ

The fourth is the life of the living soul, whom he habitually releases out of all the fruits and the chains of heaven and earth. The fifth: for he gives a power to the elements; he gives also a scent and a taste to the whole Cross of Light. In this manner you yourselves see,

SPIRITUAL READING

When the soul is unillumined, what it has claimed fills the whole field of its inner life, and from that filling come the evils of the dark state: blindness, so that the soul's understanding cannot see what is given to it; and a fear that rises with every shadow cast by the self, a disturbance that falls upon all the soul's perceptions and works the natural mind into agitation. So the soul not yet sorted out — its truth and its claiming still mingled — lives under a constant low pressure of dread that it does not even recognize as the self's own breath upon it.

But when divine truth rises in the rational and shines, five gifts come with it. First, light: understanding given to every part of the natural mind and to every form alive within it, so that the soul sees what it could not see before. Second, beauty and uprightness: the rational, illumined, takes on a form that is fitting and well-ordered, and this beauty pours out upon all the soul's productions. Third, peace: when the Lord's wisdom shines into the soul's inner cosmos, the rational greets itself and every faculty exchanges with every other the quiet of being rightly placed. Fourth, the life of the soul itself, loosed from every fruit and every chain that had bound it above and below — the works it had claimed and the holdings of the natural that gripped it from beneath: when divine truth shines, all of these are loosened, and the soul stands up alive within them. Fifth, power, fragrance, and taste given to the rational in its very stretching and suffering through regeneration — strength to its elements, savor to the path of purification itself, so that even the place of the soul's stretching is sweet to it. And each of these gifts is not just one good among many: this light is a light beyond every other light the inner cosmos can produce; this beauty exceeds every beauty the soul could devise of itself; this peace is exalted beyond every other power and every other order the cosmos contains; this loosening is the great loosening, more than all loosenings; this power is mighty beyond all powers. The shining of divine truth in the rational is not one good thing among the soul's goods. It is the good in which all the soul's goods are first made what they are.

Beyond these five, three further likenesses are revealed in this same shining, and these three carry the mystery of the Lord in his inmost — the Father of Greatness himself.

The first is hiddenness. The disc of divine truth, even when veiled at one season or another in the soul's experience, never diminishes in itself — not as receivable wisdom waxes and wanes in its visible reception, but standing constant whether the soul sees it filled or not. The Lord in his inmost is not lessened by any season of the soul's not-seeing. From him every operative power and every degree of the rational comes forth, and no deficiency ever enters him.

The second is the height of his light. As divine truth shining in the rational exceeds every smaller fixed point of the natural and every lesser luminance the inner cosmos contains, so the Lord in his inmost is exalted in his light beyond every light that ever could come into the soul's field. The radiance the soul receives is one thing; the source from which it comes is incomparably above what the soul receives.

The third is his elevation in the upper place. As divine truth in its shining stands above every height the natural mind can climb, above every elevated state and every raised perception the soul can attain, so the Lord himself stands above every height of the inmost state where he dwells, exalted above all the inhabitants of his own land of light. He is hidden in his proper image at every season and every hour, from eternity unto eternity. The soul does not reach him by climbing; it receives him by his shining down.

So the day in the soul, the rising of divine truth in the rational, is a second luminary that comes daily into the inner cosmos to reveal the graces of the Lord and to show this sign concerning him alone: that what shines is not buried in any tomb of the natural, that he comes forth from the Father who is himself unburied, that he has shown himself within the soul's cosmos without being captured by it. And the night in the soul, the dark state, exists only as a shadow — it has no substance of its own apart from being the absence of this shining. The soul recognizes the Lord through the day; and even through all the wickednesses of the natural, even through the night-state, the soul comes by contrast to recognize the mystery of what its own claiming is. Both mysteries are made visible daily within the inner cosmos: the mystery of the Lord in his shining, and the mystery of the darkness in its mere shadowing — and this is given to the soul as a vision it can read of its own condition every day of its regeneration.

[11] l. 35 ⲛⲁⲣⲭⲱⲛ — “the archons”; editor; Editor's restoration; standard Manichaean cosmological term, subject of the verb ⲧⲱⲙ ('appointed').

[12] l. 36 ϫⲏⲧϥ ⲛⲥⲉⲭⲓⲟⲩⲱ — “him, and take precedence”; editor; Editor's partial restoration; ϫⲏⲧϥ̄ ('in him') completing the preceding ⲛ̄- of line 33; then ⲛ̄ⲥⲉ-ⲭⲓⲟⲩⲱ 'and they take precedence,' parallel to the same construction in line 31.

[13] l. 39 ⲉⲡⲉ — “since”; editor; Greek ἐπειδή subordinator; visible suffix ⲁⲏ matches Lyc. spelling ⲉⲡⲉⲓⲇⲏ. Editor's brackets restore the prefix.

[14] l. 50 ⲛⲧⲁϥ — “he is”; editor; Editor's restoration of the copular pronoun introducing the predication 'he is X'; standard Coptic copula construction with ⲛ̄ⲧⲁϥ ⲡⲉ.

[15] l. 51 ⲕⲁⲁⲥ ⲛ̄ — “that”; editor; Editor's restoration completing the standard purpose-clause idiom ϫⲉⲕⲁⲁⲥ 'in order that'; the ⲛ̄ links to the following object 'all the begettings.'

[17] l. 59 ⲣⲱⲓⲥ — “shall watch over”; pipeline restoration, confidence: low; 4-char lacuna requiring a verb governing ⲕⲉⲁⲣⲭⲱⲛ. Reading: 'those of above shall watch-over the other archons, and the latter shall not do any evil to them on account of Adam.' ⲣⲱⲓⲥ ('keep watch over') matches the spiritual reading (the sixth thing: 'great patronage / those above keep watch over him') and the lexicon entry on watch (ⲣⲱϣⲉ/ⲟⲩⲣϣⲉ). Alternatives: ⲁⲣⲉⲍ ('guard'), ⲡⲁⲣⲭ ('separate from'). 4-char fits well.

The Ambassador's Daily Mystery; the Five Works of Fire; the Twelve Zodia

Elaboration

The cycle now seen as fruitful structure. T68 — the two mysteries shown daily in the same illumining wisdom: the going-forth at dawn that scatters every claimed thing, the gathering at dusk that draws what is the Lord's into the full image of completion. T69 — the five works of love in the natural mind: it consumes whatever is laid on it, draws four things from one (fire, light, smoke, vapor), gives savor to whatever is cooked in it, shapes every vessel by its operation, manifests a light by which the soul sees. T70 — the complete circuit of states the soul cycles through under self-love (twelve fixed conditions and five wandering particulars, all forms of the self), and the Lord's economy by which sun and moon, though numbered with the zodia, are not reckoned of them but stand by his providence within them.

66. Concerning the Ambassador. 66 ⌈And you may⌉ know in the manner that is being shown forth to you — that there are two great mysteries manifested forth in this sun which gives light — in his shining-forth and in his setting. Look, indeed, when he is to shine and be made manifest in the cosmos until ⌈the hour⌉, all the creatures of flesh draw themselves forth out of ⌈the sleep⌉ in which they exist, against the Radiance of the sun. Look, again, at the evening, when the sun is to set forth from the cosmos: all men of every place, together with all the (other) cattle, are wont to go in into their hiding-places of darkness; the multitude of the whole cosmos shut their mouths, and the night of darkness comes upon them, and they go in, and they dwell within their night of darkness in their hiding-places.

A great Raising-up is this mystery which is manifested forth in the sun. For the time when the sun shall shine ⌈and shall⌉ be made manifest from the beginning of the day — all men open their mouths, the whole of humanity, and all creatures, come forth onto the ⌈earth⌉ to scatter upon this Cross of Light which stands fast in stillness; and this matches the mystery of the First Man; for at the very time when they came forth from the Greatness, they shone forth upon all the sons of the Darkness; in the hour (that hour) all the sons of the Darkness came forth from their storehouses, their powers, and their dwellings; they left their ⌈caves behind them⌉ and their abyss of darkness; they destroyed the ⌈outer⌉ body of their Five Sons who were mounted upon their ⌈body in that⌉ That is the first contest.

The Election itself, ⌈in which⌉ the sun shall be chosen forth out of the cosmos, with the chosen ones ⌈of his heart⌉ of all men. They go in unto their hiding-places and their houses, and they hide themselves. This too matches the mystery of the end which gives the sign at the consummation of the cosmos: for the time when the entire Light shall be purified and refined ⌈in⌉ the cosmos — in that very end, the dissolution of every thing, the last Extraction shall gather inward unto the depiction of fullness, which is the end of the hour of the day, the time in which the last Extraction shall go upward ⌈to the Aeon of⌉ the Light. The Enemy himself, Death, shall go in unto ⌈the sunless place⌉, unto the place of judgment, into the souls of ⌈the deniers⌉ and the blasphemers, those who loved the Darkness — they shall go in with him into the sunless region of the night of darkness — befalling ⌈them⌉ — until they have been named: 'a Light shines for them.' From this very moment, behold, two mysteries are revealed in the sun daily, which is this Illuminator who radiates.

SPIRITUAL READING

Know what is being shown to you: two great mysteries are made plain every day in the same sun that gives light, one in its rising and one in its setting. Look at them.

When the Lord's illumining wisdom is about to shine forth into the natural mind, every creature of flesh — every appetite, every disordered affection that has been claiming its life from the natural and feeding on its own — recoils from that Radiance and draws back into the hiding-places where it had been at home. The whole multitude of the natural mind shuts its mouth; the night that had covered it gathers itself in and withdraws into its own recesses. This is what happens at the first contest of regeneration: when the Lord first comes forth as the Divine Human into the soul that has been organized by self-love, his light falls upon every form of the self at once, and they come out of the storehouses and powers and dwellings they had built for themselves, are dislodged from the deep places they had occupied, and the body in which the self's whole fivefold operation had been mounted is undone. That undoing is the first contest, and the rising of the sun in the soul is its sign.

Then look at the evening, when the sun is about to set out of the natural mind. All the people, and the affections that go with them, withdraw to their hiding-places and their houses and conceal themselves. This too is a sign — the sign of the end, of how things will stand at the consummation of the natural mind. For when all that is the Lord's has at last been recognized as his and refined out, when every claim has been laid off and every thing dissolved, the final gathering will draw what is the Lord's inward into the full image of completion. That is the close of the day. At that hour the last gathering goes upward into light, and what had been the enemy — the self claiming itself, the death that came of self-love — goes into the place of judgment, together with the souls that have loved the darkness and the speech that denied the Lord; they go in with it into the region where the sun does not shine, and there they remain, in the state to which they have given themselves, while of the soul that is raised it can be said: a light shines for it.

These are the two mysteries the Lord shows daily in the same illumining wisdom that radiates over the soul: the going-forth that scatters every claimed thing, and the gathering that brings every recognized thing home.

68 68. Concerning the Fire. 68 The Fire that burns and is manifested forth today in the cosmos performs five

ⲧⲧⲱⲁⲣⲡ ⲙⲉⲛ ϩⲱⲃ ⲉⲧⲥⲉⲓⲣⲉ ⲓⲙⲁϩ ⲡⲉ ⲡⲉⲓ ⲭⲉ ⲥⲃⲱⲗ ⲁⲃⲁⲗ ⲥⲣⲱⲭⲋ ⲓⲡⲱⲉ ⲙⲛ̄ ϩⲱⲃ ⲛⲓⲙ ⲉⲧⲉⲱⲁⲩⲕⲁⲁϩ ⲁⲭⲱⲥ

The first work that it performs is this: it releases and burns the wood and every thing that they set upon it.

ⲧⲧⲙⲁϩⲥⲛⲉⲩ ⲭⲉ ⲱⲁⲥⲡⲁⲣⲭ ϩⲧⲁⲩ ⲛ̄ⲉⲓⲛⲉ ⲁⲃⲁⲗ ⲓⲡⲱⲉ ⲉⲧⲉ ⲛ̄ⲧⲁⲩ ⲛⲉ ⲛⲉⲓ ⲧⲥⲉⲧⲉ ⲙⲛ̄ ⲡⲟⲩⲁⲓⲛⲉ ⲡⲕ̄ⲣⲙⲉⲥ ⲙⲛ̄ ⲡⲕⲁⲡⲛⲟⲥ

The second: it separates forth four likenesses out of the wood, which are these: the fire and the light, the smoke and the vapor.

ⲡⲙⲁϩⲱⲁⲙⲧ ⲭⲉ ⲥ ⲛⲟⲩⲡⲉ ⲙⲛ̄ ⲟⲩⲛⲃⲟ ⲙⲡⲉⲧⲟⲩⲛⲁⲡⲉⲥⲧϩ ⲛ̄ϩⲏⲧⲥ̄ ⲥ ⲁⲛ ⲛⲟⲩϩⲓⲙⲉ ⲙⲛ̄ ⲟⲩⲟⲩⲛⲁϩ ⲓⲡⲉⲧⲛⲁⲧⲁⲥϩ ⲁⲣⲁⲥ ⲡⲙⲁϩⲣⲧⲁⲩ ⲛ̄ϩⲱⲃ [ⲉⲧⲥ]¹ⲉⲓⲣⲉ ⲓⲙⲁϩ ⲭⲉ ⲱⲁⲣⲉ ⲛ̄ⲧⲉⲭⲛⲓⲧⲏⲥ ⲧⲏⲣⲟⲩ ⲙⲟⲩⲟⲩⲛ̄ⲕ ⲛ̄ⲥⲕⲁⲓⲟⲥ ⲉⲧⲟⲩⲛⲁⲥⲙ̄ⲛ̄ⲧⲟⲩ ⲛϩⲏⲧⲥ

The third: it gives a taste and a savor to what they shall cook in it. It also gives a salt and a sweetness to whoever shall touch it. The fourth work which ⌈it⌉ it performs is this: all the artisans mold through it the vessels which they shall establish through it.

ⲡⲙⲁϩⲟⲩ ⲭⲉ [ⲱⲁ]²ⲥⲟⲩⲱⲛⲋ ⲟⲩⲟⲩⲁⲓⲛⲉ ⲁⲃⲁⲗ ⲛ̄ⲧⲉ ⲛⲣⲱⲙⲉ ⲛⲉⲩ ⲁⲃⲁⲗ ⲛ̄ϩⲏⲧ[ⲥ]³

The fifth: ⌈it⌉ habitually manifests forth a light, that men may see by means of ⌈it⌉.

SPIRITUAL READING

Love, where it is kindled and shows itself in the natural mind, does five works, and by these five the rational lives.

The first: it consumes whatever is laid upon it. Whatever the soul places into its love is taken up and changed; nothing offered to love remains as it was, but is loosened from its prior form and turned into the substance of love itself. This is why love is the active principle: it does not preserve what is given to it unchanged, but takes it into its own operation.

The second: out of one piece of fuel it draws forth four distinct things — the fire itself, the light that shines from it, the smoke that rises, and the vapor that escapes. So love, working upon any one matter of the soul, brings forth from it love proper, the wisdom that shines from love, the falsity that the self had hidden in it, and the merely apparent that has no body of its own. By love's working, what was one undifferentiated state becomes four discriminated registers, and the soul learns to tell each from each.

The third: it gives taste and savor to whatever is cooked in it, and to whoever touches it gives both salt and sweetness. Love is what makes anything in the soul able to be tasted at all. Truths and goods that do not pass through love have no quality; they cannot nourish or afflict. But once love has worked on them, they become either bitter to the soul that has claimed them or sweet to the soul that receives them — and it is the same fire that gives both, according to how it is met.

The fourth: every artisan in the rational shapes the vessels he establishes by means of it. No form is given to anything in the natural mind without love being the agent of its forming. Whatever the soul builds — whether ordered by the Lord or organized by the self — is built only because love stands under the work and animates it. Love is the operative power in every shaping.

The fifth: it manifests a light by which the soul sees. The understanding has no vision of its own; only because love burns in the rational does wisdom become visible. Where love is, sight is given; where love withdraws, the soul gropes in the dark however much truth lies around it. By the fire of love the soul sees what is given to it.

The hour, then, when she circles and casts them about, they do indeed every work that pleases them above and below, according to their purpose of heart. But there are stewards over them; there are demanders of the upper place over them, to compel them, to demand from them, to take what is theirs from their hands.

all the creation, bound them and hung them within the sphere?'

This, then, is the manner that befits to know — that they ⸢they were molded⸣ out of the five worlds of the Darkness, and were bound in the sphere, and they took two zodiac-signs per world. Gemini with Sagittarius belong to the world of the Smoke, that is the Mind. The Ram itself with the Lion belong to the world of the Fire. The Bull, the Water-Bearer and the Scales belong to the world of the Wind. Cancer and Virgo and ⸢Pisces⸣ belong to the world of the Water. Capricorn with Scorpio belong to the world of the Darkness. These are the ⸢twelve⸣ archons of Wickedness — those whom the wicked- ⸢wickedness comes forth out of them⸣. For they are the doer of every evil and ⸢wickedness⸣ in the cosmos, whether in the tree or in the flesh (...) Moreover, again concerning these five stars, the way-leaders: namely, that they were fashioned in what place. The star indeed of Zeus, they begot it forth from the world of Smoke — which is mind. Aphrodite herself, she came forth from the world of Fire. Ares himself is reckoned to the world of Wind. Hermes is reckoned to the world of Water, while Kronos is reckoned to the world of the Darkness. But the two Anabibazons themselves are reckoned to the Fire and Pleasure — which are the Dry-One and the Abomination; they are the Father and the Mother of all these. The Sun but the Sun himself, with the Moon, were brought in among them by a craft, that they may reign over them and bind them about, being wreathed around them at every hour. These seven that we have proclaimed — the five stars and the Anabibazons, the two — they are the makers of evil, who do every evil and wickedness in every region of the concerning the zodiac-signs: that they are spread forth, fastened in four sides, three to a corner, in these four places, and they are joined to the surrounding sphere. Aries, Leo, Sagittarius — they are the three reckoned to one and the same side. Taurus himself, Capricorn with Virgo — these other three are reckoned to another side. But Gemini himself, Libra with Aquarius — reckoned to another side. Scorpio, Pisces with Cancer — reckoned to another lot. They are placed therefore in this manner, fastened to the four sides, spread forth in the sphere. The time, indeed, when they shall plunder along the side of Aries, -ies, Leo, Leo, with Sagittarius — by means of the stewthe steward who is upon him, who measures him, with the way-leaders who are mounted upon him, in those very ones — an affliction strikesikes upon all the cattle of the dry land below, thus. But the time itself when they shall plunder on the side of Taurus, Virgo with Capricorn — ⌈an affliction comes about⌉ they come into being at that hour in the ripenings, and with the figs and with all the fruits of the trees. But the time, again, in which they shall plunder is at the side of Scorpio, of Pisces, and of Cancer: a diminishing comes about in the waters upon the earth of a year-of-failure, coming about in every place; while they plunder also at the side of Gemini, Libra, and Aquarius: a lack and a diminishing come about in the imprint of humanity in every place.

SPIRITUAL READING

The question is asked: when the natural mind is organized by self-love into its full circuit of states, are these states one in substance, or each apart? Are the particular self-loves that move among them outside intrusions, or has some maker set them where they stand?

The answer is this. The complete circuit, taken as twelve fixed conditions, and the particular self-loves that revolve among them, are all of one kind: forms of the self. By their nature they are enemies to one another, plundering one another. They are not held together by any inner harmony, but by the Lord's operative power, which permits the natural to form into a structure even when self-love rules it. He is the great artisan who has shaped all the worlds of the soul's outer life and has fastened these states in the upper revolution that turns at every hour. Stewards are set over them — discriminations of the Lord's that compel account, that exact what they hold, that take from their hands what is owed. The self organizes; the Lord oversees the organizing.

What must be understood is this: these twelve states were drawn out of the natural mind in its five aspects when ruled by self-love. Two states belong to each aspect. Two belong to the smoke of obscured thought, where mind is darkened. Two belong to the fire of self-love consuming. Two belong to the disordered wind of thought. Two belong to the salt waters of natural perception turned bitter. Two belong to the inner darkness itself. These are the particular shapes of self-love through which the soul revolves; they are the doer of every evil in the soul's outer life, in the tree of perception and in the flesh of outermost affection.

The five wandering self-loves that move among them were begotten in the same way: one from the world of obscured thought, one from the fire of self-love, one from the wind of disordered thought, one from the salt waters, one from the inner darkness. Two further movements stand fastened to the mystery of self-love's fire and its pleasure — the dry and the moist, the masculine and feminine forms of self-love, the father and mother of all these particulars. Together they are the makers of evil who do every wickedness in every region of the soul, above and below, in every product of the natural mind.

The sun and the moon are not strangers to these states, and yet they are not of them. They are reckoned among them only by the necessity of the economy: the work of regeneration requires that light fall upon these states, that wisdom illumine them and that truth be received in their midst. Therefore the Lord's illumining wisdom and his truth received in the natural are counted in among the twelve, taking their place in the count — but they are out of the dominion of darkness; they do not belong to the circuit, they only enter it so that what is bound there may be seen.

The twelve are spread out fastened to four sides, three states to each corner, so that the whole circuit is articulated through the fourfold structure of the soul's contest. Each side, when its three states act together upon the natural, produces its own particular affliction. When the states of one side plunder, affliction strikes the affections of the soul's lower ground. When the states of another side act, the natural is forced toward a counterfeit ripening of works. When another side acts, a diminishing comes upon the truths held in the natural — a year of failure in every place. And when the last side acts, lack and diminishing fall upon the very imprint of humanity in the soul.

So the soul is shown the full architecture of its bondage: the twelve states are not random, but a structure; the particular self-loves are not stray, but ordered; even the Lord's light and truth must enter this structure by economy in order to be received within it. What the soul is to recognize is that all of this — the twelve, the seven, the four sides, the stewards — is permitted, ordered, and held; and that the light counted in among them is not of them, but is the means by which the soul will at last see them for what they are and lay them off.

APPARATUS

[1] l. 2 ⲛⲧⲉ — “And you may”; editor; Editor restoration; standard conjunctive ⲛⲧⲉⲧⲛ̄- continuation of preceding ⲛ̄ⲧⲉⲧⲛⲛⲉⲩ 'see'

[2] l. 5 ⲡⲉ — “the hour”; editor; Editor preserves only ⲡⲉ; likely ϣⲗ-ⲡⲉ[ⲛⲁⲩ]/ⲡⲉ[ⲩⲛⲉⲩ] 'until the [hour]' but only article-fragment is certain

[3] l. 6 ⲛ ϕⲓⲛⲏⲃ — “the sleep”; editor; Editor restoration; context (creatures emerging at sunrise from where they slept) supports 'sleep' (Greek ὕπνος); ϕⲓⲛⲏⲃ likely = ⲡ-ⲉⲛⲏⲃ

[4] l. 15 ⲛ̄ⲩ̄ⲟⲩ — “and shall”; editor; Restoration; Lyc. conjunctive ⲛⲥ̅-ⲟⲩⲱⲛⲋ̄ 'and (the sun) shall be manifested,' parallel to preceding ⲛⲁⲡⲣ̄ⲓⲉ 'shall shine'

[5] l. 16 ⲉ; editor; Editor restoration; ⲛ̄ⲧ[ⲉ] 'of' completing the genitive into ⲧⲙ̄ⲛ̄ⲧⲣⲱⲙⲉ on next line

[6] l. 17 ϩ — “earth”; editor; Editor restoration ⲡⲕⲁ[ϩ] 'the earth'; required as referent of motion-verb ⲉⲓ ⲁⲃⲁⲗ ⲁ- 'come forth onto'

[7] l. 18 ⲛ ⲟⲩ; editor; Editor restoration; ϩ[ⲛ ⲟⲩ]ⲕⲁⲣⲁⲓⲧⲩ̄ 'in a stillness' is a standard idiomatic prepositional construction

[8] l. 19 ⲛ; editor; Editor restoration; standard genitive linker ⲙ̄ⲡⲱⲁⲣⲡ̄ [ⲛ̄]ⲣⲱⲙⲉ 'of the First Man'

[9] l. 20 ⲧ; editor; Editor restoration; ⲛ̄ⲧⲙⲛ̄[ⲧ]ⲛⲁⲟ̄ 'from the Greatness,' standard Manichaean cosmological term

[10] l. 21 ⲟⲩ; editor; Editor restoration; ⲛ̄ⲧⲟⲩⲛ[ⲟⲩ] = ⲛ̄ⲧⲟⲩⲛⲟⲩ 'in (the) hour,' completing the time-marker continued in next line

[13] l. 24 ϩⲓⲃⲁⲗ — “outer”; editor; Editor restoration; ⲡⲥⲱⲙⲁ ⲉⲧ[ϩⲓⲃⲁⲗ] 'the outer body' — Manichaean cosmological term for the external archonic body

[14] l. 25 ϫϲⲱⲙⲁ ϩⲙ ⲡ — “body in that”; editor; Editor restoration; ⲡⲉ[ϫⲥ]ⲱ[ⲙⲁ ϩⲙ ⲡ] 'their body, in the [war/cosmos]' — continuing into next page

[15] l. 27 ⲉⲧⲉⲣⲉ — “in which”; editor; Editor restored single letter ⲣ in ⲉⲧⲉ[ⲣ]ⲉ; standard Lyc. relative converter ⲉⲧⲉⲣⲉ. Whole word treated as restored unit per the bracketed letter.

[17] l. 32 ϩⲙ̄ — “in”; editor; Editor restored ⲙ at line 6 end before ⲡⲕⲟⲥⲙⲟⲥ (line 7); Lyc. ϩⲙ̄ = Sah. ϩⲙ̄ 'in.'

[19] l. 38 ⲧⲙⲡⲣⲉ — “the sunless place”; editor; Editor restored initial ⲧ in [ⲧ]ⲙ̄ⲡⲣⲉ. Translator interprets ⲧⲙ̄ⲡⲣⲉ as ⲧⲙ̄- (privative) + ⲡⲣⲉ/ⲡⲣⲏ ('sun') = 'the sunless [place]' — fits parallel pairing with ⲡⲙⲁⲛ̄ⲱⲡⲧ ('place of judgment'), ⲧⲟⲩⲱⲏ ⲛ̄ⲕⲉⲕⲉ ('night of darkness'), and the chapter's sun-typology. Translation tentative — see notes.

[22] l. 66 ⲉ; editor; Editor restoration; relative prefix [ⲉ]ⲧⲙⲁϩⲉ 'who are mounted'

[24] l. 69 ⲡⲥⲁ; editor; Editor restoration; standard formula ⲛⲥⲁ ⲥⲁ ⲙ̄- 'on the side of-' parallel to line 26

[25] l. 69 ⲣⲟⲥ; editor; Editor restoration; completion of ⲡⲧⲁⲩⲣⲟⲥ 'Taurus'

[26] l. 70 ⲁⲣⲉ ⲟⲩⲑⲗⲓⲯⲓⲥ — “an affliction comes about”; editor; Editor restoration; ⳉ[ⲁⲣⲉ ⲟⲩⲑⲗⲓⲯⲓⲥ] — habitual subject formula exactly paralleling line 29-30

Summary

The garden surveyed in its complete extension and ingathering. T71 — the natural mind shaped as a body in the likeness of the human person, with the rational keeping watch over its degrees through five great watches (Pherokatochos, King of Honor, Adamas, King of Glory, Omophoros). T72 — the chain of inward gathering by which every degree rises into the one above it: love into love, thought into thought, articulation into the answering, answering into the call, call into the inner mind, inner mind into the path of regeneration, into the Divine Human, into the Lord's call, into the full structure of the divine outgoing — one ladder, drawn up at one moment into rest. T73 — why the one truth wears many names (Jesus, pearls, icons, robes, element of light, cross of light, counsel of life, slain soul) and how at the consummation they all gather back into one likeness, one name, in the region of their first substance.

This whole cosmos, the upper side and the lower side, exists with respect to the likeness of the body of the man, while the formation of this body of the flesh ... In the likeness of the cosmos: his head exists according to the likeness of the firstfruit of the five garments. From his neck again, downward unto the place of his heart, being likened according to the likeness of the ten firmaments. The heart, again, is there according to the likeness of the wheel of the sphere that sows. From his heart again, downward unto his thighs, existing according to the likeness of the air that comes from the spheres downward to the earth. ⌈The dwelling-place⌉ of the body, existing according to the likeness of this earth. From his thighs again, downward unto his knees, existing according to the likeness of the three earths. His shins, again, on the feet, according to the likeness of the watch on which the Omophoros stands fast within it. The soles of his feet according to the likeness of this earth on which the Omophophoros stands fast upon it, with the four mountains which are below his His liver, according to the likeness of the stronghold of fire. His flesh, according to the likeness of the stronghold of darkness. His sinew, according to the likeness of the stronghold of water. Thus indeed it is — that the small body exists according to the likeness of this cosmos: in his firmaments, in his hosts, in his stations, his preparations, and his strongholds. Thus have I what is the manner in which the encampment exists in the great Zone which is outside, in which the Five Sons of the Spirit of the Living are masters over them. In the first watch which is in the upper place — wherein the Pherrokatochos is master over it, in the mingling of all the works — his

The fifth watch is the watch in which the Omophoros is in authority, as also a lord, according to his authority over this great land which stands fast upon him, with the four extremities which are at his feet. An earthquake also and a trembling came to pass in the watch of the great King of Honor, who is the Egregoroi who came to be at the time when they were going to [. . .] [. . .]; they came down by those who sent them, until they were subdued. In the watch also of Adamas, the abortions came down; they molded the the molding of the flesh. SPIRITUAL READING

The whole field of your outer life — what you call your world, with its upper and lower regions — is shaped in the likeness of the human body. It is one structure, articulated from above downward as a body is articulated, and the Lord has made it so deliberately, that you might recognize in the form of your own person the form of the natural mind in which you live.

The inmost of the rational stands at the head: it is the firstfruit of all the layers of accommodation by which truth is given outer form. From the neck down to the heart the structure unfolds in ten ordered degrees, fixed boundaries by which influx is received without collapse. The heart itself moves like the wheel that scatters seed: there the recurrent process of regeneration turns within you, sowing interior truths into the natural. From the heart down to the thighs is the moving register of perception, the air through which thought descends from higher states toward the ground. From there the body comes to rest on the natural mind itself, and the legs are the threefold ground that bears the whole. The shins and feet are the proper post on which the soul stands fast, and the celestial good that bears up the natural mind from below holds firm there, with the four ordered extensions of natural manifestation beneath it. The interior organs likewise have their place: the liver as a fortified seat of love's fire, the flesh as the fortified outer where darkness can take hold, the sinew as the fortified seat where natural truth is held. So the whole small body of your person exists in the likeness of the whole structured field of the natural mind — in its degrees, its hosts, its stations, its preparations, its strongholds.

Within this body the rational keeps its post. The Five Sons of the Living Spirit — that is, the rational at its five degrees as it operates upward in regeneration — are masters of the encompassing circuit of the natural. In the first watch, the highest, the Lord holds the inmost firm against falling: at this register, in the unsorted state where what is given and what is claimed are still mingled, the Lord's authority extends over the threefold structure of heaven. In the second watch the Lord rules the discrete degrees, exercising authority over the seven firmaments below. In the third watch the Lord gives stable form to the rational, standing fast from the firmament downward, his authority extending over the whole natural circuit and the five worlds of the natural body. In the fourth watch the Lord ruling in glory exercises authority over the three recurrent processes of purification, his being laid upon the threefold ground that supports the bearing-up principle. In the fifth watch the celestial good that holds the natural in being is itself in authority, lord over this great ground that stands fast upon it, with the four ordered extensions at its feet.

Things happen in each watch, each in its season. In the watch of the keeper of the inmost, the self's claim sought to surge up against the form of the Lord's call going out to the rational — but it was prevented, cast down in shame. In the watch of the Lord ruling the firmaments, an earthquake and trembling came: this is the disordered states of attention, the rational descending from its post and binding itself to lower things; they came down through those who sent them until they were subdued. In the watch of the Lord giving stable form, the failed productions of the self came down — what the soul brings forth from itself which cannot live — and these molded the outer flesh: the natural is given a body of its own to operate from, permitted to form so that the vessel may exist in freedom. In the watch of the Lord ruling in glory, motion came to pass in the threefold ground, a grasping woven together with the rising up of the three recurrent purifications — wind, water, and fire, thought and natural truth and love each turning in its cycle. And in the watch of the bearing-up good, the lower extensions dried up and stretched out their bonds, and a great earthquake came in that place; the five posts of attention stand within great works of the array I have proclaimed.

Such is the body in which the Lord ordering the rational keeps watch over all these things, together with the New Man — the regenerated rational — who shall fill the man and bring him into the likeness of the inmost turned outward, the face that is above the body. The Lord holding the highest of the rational firm operates over the watch above the natural's complete circuit, in the sign of the Lord ruling the discrete degrees, who is in the likeness of the seventh heaven; the Lord giving stable form to the rational operates in the likeness of the disordered natural itself, that the disordered may be reordered from within; and the Lord ruling in glory turns the recurrent processes, sending all upward toward the heaven of life. The bearing-up principle — the bond of peace — abides in the likeness of the soles, in the depth below. And the teaching of wisdom encompasses that body, toward the likeness of pure receivability, by which the Lord is received without corruption — going up and coming down through the upper and lower belts of the natural. Love itself with joy, faith and truth, are the states in which the man habitually lives; they are the two doctrinal vessels of light, for through them the living rational rises and goes forth, comes up from the lowest state of the natural, and arrives at the height in the upper place.

But the natural mind also has its other side. There are four cosmoses within this body, and in each there are seven particular forms of the self — seven self-loving arrangements organized at each level of the natural. In the first, from the head upward, the self has organized the senses themselves: the two of seeing, the two of hearing, the two of smelling, and the mouth as the place of taste — perception turned to the self's account. In the second, from the neck down through the chest, again seven forms: the two arms in the likeness of the two ears, with the two breasts in the likeness of the smelling-places, the two eyes of the heart, and the depth of the stomach between the breasts in the likeness of the mouth — the inward senses claimed for self-love. In the third cosmos of the body, again seven: the various inward organs and the two kidneys — the deeper affections turned in. In the fourth, the lower part, seven again: the two inward members, the two outward, the two thighs, and the member from which seed comes forth, by which all forms are begotten — the generative power claimed as the soul's own work.

The complete circuit of states the soul passes through is also distributed across this body, twelve fixed states of the natural mind under the self's organization, mingled and bound in the wheel that turns. From head to feet they are spread alongside one another, divided and inclined to one side and to the other, weighed against each other, head against foundation. Each member of the body is seized by one of these twelve states; the right side and the left side are each apportioned, half by half, so that the whole body is parceled out among the twelve states under self-love. This is how the self, organizing the natural mind on its own terms, has multiplied the body's members and scattered them against one another, head against foot.

There are powers in great multitude dwelling in this body, the inhabitants who are the chief shapes of self-claiming: eight hundred and forty myriads of particular self-loves, set as heads in the body of the man, spread forth and standing four by four according to house — two hundred and ten myriads of houses in number. When all these particular forms of the self come crying out into the body, they meet and rebuke and destroy one another within. And when the time comes for them to be released forth from the body of the man at his death, they are struck with evil — stripe upon blow, with burning in the body — whether as sicknesses arising within him or as afflictions coming upon him from without. These wounds first close over and pour out a flow of bitter saltwater and a flow of defilement, until what gathers in the matter is drawn forth in the wound; afterward there is an exchange of scraping, and they are tended and soothed out from the place from which they came forth.

This is the teaching: the natural mind is shaped like a body; the rational, in its five degrees, keeps watch over each region of it; the Lord at his various registers governs each watch, permitting the self to form itself within so that a vessel exists in freedom. But the self also organizes itself within that body in many forms — sevens at each level, twelves around the whole — until the man comes to die, and they are released and afflicted as they go. Through it all, the Lord ordering the rational and the New Man within fill the man, bringing him at last into the likeness of the inmost turned outward, that what was scattered may be gathered and what was claimed may be laid off.

— Concerning the Gathering-Inward — ⟨71⟩ of the ⌜e⌝lements ⟨71⟩ 'What is the manner in which the ⌜e⌝lements gather inward, one to another? Each li- ⌜the light⌝ gathers inward ⌜to⌝ the fire of the fire; the fire itself gathers in- ⌜ward to the water of the water; the water itself⌝ gathers inward to the wind of the ⌜the winds⌝ are gathered to the Tamr; and the Tamr is gathered to the Answer, and the Answer is gathered to the Call; the Call itself ⌜to⌝ the chosen Mind, which is the Noeric; the Noeric to the ⌜P⌝illar of Glory; the ⌜P⌝illar of Glory to the First ⌜Ma⌝n; the Man to the Ambassador; the Ambassador to the ⌜A⌝eons of the Greatness — they are gathered together in this manner. And ⌜they shall⌝ gather at one and the same moment, and they shall go up to the ⌜u⌝pper place, to the place of rest, forever and ever.

SPIRITUAL READING

When the soul asks how the orders of its life come together and ascend, the answer is that each degree gathers inward into the one nearer the Lord, and so the whole is drawn up as one motion.

Love within the natural gathers into love at its higher register; what is warm and willing in the outermost is taken up into the same will as it stands nearer the rational. Thought, the moving perception of the natural, gathers into thought at its higher register, until the whole moving life of perception is brought into one. What is articulate in the soul gathers into the answering it makes; the answering gathers into the call that drew the answer out; and the call itself gathers into the inner mind that the Lord has chosen and ordered — the rational illumined and discriminating.

That ordered mind gathers into the way of regeneration, the path on which the natural rises into conjunction with the spiritual. The path gathers into the Divine Human, the form love and wisdom take going forth toward the soul. The Divine Human gathers into the Lord's call summoning the rational. And the Lord's call gathers into the full structure of the divine outgoing — the Lord at the complete circuit of registers in which he goes forth to be received.

So the soul's life is not a heap of separate things but a single ladder, each rung drawn up into the rung above it. And when the time has come, all of these gather at one and the same moment, and rise together into the upper place, into the rest of conjunction, where the soul is at peace with the Lord forever.

the name of the great garments? Then, what are these great garments? namely 'of Jesus' — what are those of Jesus Or the pearl-ornaments and the cluster-pieces? Or what are the icons and the robes of Rhōph-work? Or what is the name 'cross, element of light'? Or, likewise, what is the crucifix of the light? Or why do they name others 'the counsel of life'? Or what is the soul that is afflicted, being slain, being strangled, dead within the Enemy? What are all these names the garments to which they have given names, namely 'great garments': they are the five noeric ones who have been ⸢perfected⸣ forth: the body of the Pillar of Glory, the Perfect forth — those whom they have chosen in the ⸢coming⸣ of the Ambassador, to whom they have themselves given the name 'Jesus, Jesus' — that is the Power that that shines light, that has been swallowed, producing fruit, fashioned in the ⸢body⸣ of the cosmos, in the archons that are of the upper place, those who exist in all the firmaments. SPIRITUAL READING

The disciple asks: why so many names? What are these "great garments" — the ones called "of Jesus," the pearls and clusters, the icons and ornamented robes, the "element of light," the "cross of light," the "counsel of life," the "soul afflicted and slain within the Enemy"? What is being named in all these names?

Hear, then, what is one and what is many.

The great garments are the rational in its five degrees as the Lord sends it forth — the path of regeneration itself, the rational in its full stature, the divine humanity going forth as the Lord's own form. These are named "Jesus, Jesus" because in each of them the Lord shines as illumining wisdom; this same wisdom is what the soul receives, what gets claimed by the self and held within its forms, and what nevertheless bears fruit through all the registers of the natural under the Lord's permission, working even in the self's own arrangements throughout every fixed boundary of the rational.

The pearls and the clusters that resemble them are the Lord's operative power as it takes form within the natural — the same wisdom received and held as a precious thing in the soul, even while the self handles it roughly: reaping it, cutting it, swallowing it, grasping it across the five aspects of the natural body. Wherever the natural lays hold of what flows through it, the same one truth is being formed, place by place.

The icons and the robes of work are the three accommodations by which the Lord's operative power enters the natural — thought, love, and truth in the natural degree — the three vehicles upon which he is mounted as he establishes works in the soul, pours forth the means by which the rational is carried over, and lays out the foundation of every operation upon the bearing-up principle that holds the natural mind in being.

The "element of light" is the same truth standing in everything below, rising up out of the depths of every state, gathering inward what belongs to it and casting it onto its proper degree.

The "cross of light" is this same wisdom stretched out — the rational suffering as it is purified, bound and extended throughout the natural until laying off is complete: the dry and the moist, the whole soul stretched across the contest.

What is named "the counsel of life" is the conjugate movement of the Lord's call going forth and the soul's hearing rising to meet it — the summoning that fills all the powers, awakens them, gives them breadth, embraces them, that they may be filled.

And what is named "the soul afflicted, slain, troubled, dead within the Enemy" — she is the same one life, considered now as it is borne in interior truths and their works, which the self grinds and pounds and turns to its own nourishment in the worlds of the flesh; she is the whole soul under affliction, suffering this for the sake of what is to come.

For all these names — their origin is one from the beginning. The light that shines in them is one. They were divided into all these kinds in the first contest, when the rational went forth against what would claim it; they took their stand in altered likenesses, and the names became many because the operations are many.

But when all these figures shall be broken open and stripped naked, when each of these names is discriminated and separated from the imagery in which it has been clothed, they will be gathered inward and become one likeness, one name — unchanging, unmoving, forever — in the region of the first substance from which they were sent forth against the self. The many names are the one truth wearing the garments suited to each degree. At the consummation the garments come off, and what was always one is recognized as one.

APPARATUS

[1] l. 7 ⲡ; editor; Editor restoration of definite article ⲡ in [ⲡ]ⲥⲁⲙⲡⲓⲧⲛⲉ 'the lower side.'

[3] l. 8 ⲙⲉ ⲉⲣⲉ ⲡⲙ; editor; Editor restoration completing ⲡⲣⲱ-[ⲙⲉ] 'man' across line break, plus circumstantial ⲉⲣⲉ ⲡⲙ[ⲟⲩⲟⲩⲛⲕ] 'while the [formation].'

[4] l. 15 ⲧⲙⲁⲛⲍⲁⲩⲧ — "The dwelling-place"; editor; Editor restoration based on parallel-place in body-cosmos correspondence: the middle body-region (heart-to-thighs) corresponds to the air/earth zone. ⲙⲁⲛ- 'place of' + ⲍⲁⲩⲧ (root unidentified — possibly Lyc. reflex of a 'staying/dwelling' or 'lower' verb). Sense uncertain; tentative gloss based on the apposition 'X of the body that exists according to the likeness of this earth.'

[5] l. 22 ⲁⲡⲓⲛⲉ; editor; Editor restoration of the formulaic phrase ⲁⲡⲓⲛⲉ that recurs throughout this body-cosmos mapping (lines 1, 3, 5, 6, 8, 10, 12, 15, 16, 17). The ⲁ is partially visible; ⲡ is restored.

[6] l. 36 ⲡⲉⲧ (preceding partial 'the one who/that which')

[9] l. 41 ⲣ̄; editor; Editor restored supralinear stroke in ⲣ[ⲣ̄]ⲣⲟ; word ⲣⲣⲟ 'king' is certain

[10] l. 41 ⲕⲁϩ; editor; Editor restoration ⲙ̄ⲡ[ⲕⲁϩ]; matches the cosmographic schema of lands sustained by the King

[12] l. 42 ⲕⲟ; editor; Editor restoration ⲛ̄[ⲕⲟ] continuing to ⲥⲙⲟⲥ on next line — ⲛ̄ⲕⲟⲥⲙⲟⲥ 'worlds'

[15] l. 49 ϯ; editor; Restoration ⲧⲙⲁϩ[ϯ]ⲉ 'the fifth (watch).' Line 4 has ⲧⲙⲁϩϩⲧⲟⲉ 'fourth' (King of Glory); the structurally next ordinal is fifth (Omophoros)

[16] l. 53 trace: ϥⲁⲓⲓⲥ

[17] l. 53 ϯⲟⲩⲉ; editor; Tentative — the kephalaion enumerates exactly five watches (Pherrokatochos, King of Honor, Adamas, King of Glory, Omophoros); summary line requires 'in the five watches'

[18] l. 55 ⲁⲃⲉ; editor; Editor restoration ⲡⲛ[ⲁⲃⲉ] 'Sin' — standard Manichaean cosmic principle that assails the icon of the Ambassador

[23] l. 66 ⲧ; editor; Editor restoration [ⲧ]ⲟ̄ⲓⲛⲉⲓ 'the coming/rising-up' (action-noun on ⲉⲓ 'come,' attested in glossary)

[24] l. 69 ⲫ; editor; Editor restoration ⲡⲱⲙⲟ[ⲫ]ⲟⲣⲟⲥ 'Omophoros' — continuation of word from prior line

[26] l. 70 ⲕ; editor; Editor restoration ⲛ[ⲕ]ⲙⲧⲟ 'earthquake' — same lexeme as ⲕⲱ̄ⲧⲟ in line 16 and glossary

[27] l. 71 ⲧϩⲉ; editor; Editor restoration [ⲧϩⲉ] 'manner' — standard Coptic discourse-summarizer 'the manner of X' closing the section

[28] l. 71 ϯ; editor; Tentative — context demands ⲡⲓϯⲟⲩ 'the five' (watch-posts), parallel to the five watches enumerated above

[29] l. 71 ⲙⲙⲁ; editor; Editor restoration [ⲙⲙⲁ]ⲛⲣⲁⲓⲥ 'watch-posts' (in glossary)

[31] l. 72 trace: ⲙ̄ⲣⲣⲉ ⲛⲧⲉ ⲉ

[32] l. 73 ⲕ; editor; Greek loan ἐκλεκτοί virtually certain from context (ⲣ̄ⲫⲟⲣⲉ 'wear,' ⲡⲣⲱⲙⲉ ⲛⲉⲕⲗⲉⲕⲧⲟⲥ 'elect man' line 4)

[33] l. 101 ⲛ; editor; Lyc. reflex of ϣⲱⲛϩ̄/ⲱⲛϩ̄ 'live'; sense fits 'in which the man habitually lives'

[34] l. 102 ⲩ; editor; Greek loan ψυχή; orthographic ⲧϯⲩⲭⲏ for ⲧⲯⲩⲭⲏ

[35] l. 104 ⲡ; editor; ⲁⲡϫⲉ ⲉⲧⲱ̄ⲡⲥⲁⲛⲧⲡⲉ 'to the Height which is in the upper place,' standard cosmographic pole (cf. ⲡϫⲉ in glossary)

[36] l. 105 ϫ; editor; completion of ⲡϫⲉ

[37] l. 107 ⲙ ⲡ; editor; ϩⲙ ⲡⲓⲥⲱⲙⲁ 'in this body,' standard preposition + demonstrative + noun

[38] l. 107 ⲁⲣ̄ϫ; editor; ⲧⲥⲁⲣ̄ϫ 'the flesh' (Greek σάρξ); 'body of flesh' standard collocation

[39] l. 108 ⲟⲡ ϩⲙ ⲡⲥ; editor; ⲱⲟⲟⲡ ϩⲙ ⲡⲥⲱⲙⲁ 'exists in the body,' parallel to line 30 construction

[40] l. 108 ⲱ̄ⲡϩⲧⲁⲩ ⲛ̄; editor; continuation 'of the four cosmoses' (ⲕⲟⲥⲙⲟⲥ on line 32); ⲡϩⲧⲁⲩ 'the four' is Lyc. (in glossary)

[42] l. 112 ⲡⲙⲁⲛⲓⲱⲣϩ; editor; Editor's restoration of [ϩ]; ⲓⲱⲣϩ = Lyc. ⲱⲣ̄ϩ/ⲓⲱⲣ̄ϩ 'see, watch' (cf. ⲣⲉϩⲓⲱⲣϩ 'watcher' in glossary)

[43] l. 115 ⲧⲧⲙⲁϩⲥⲛⲉⲩ; editor; Editor's restoration; ordinal pattern ⲙⲁϩ-ⲥⲛⲉⲩ 'second' established by line 6's ⲡⲓⲙⲁϩⲥⲛⲉⲩ

[44] l. 116 ⲉⲧ; editor; Editor's restoration; relative ⲉⲧ- continues into line 7 ϣⲟⲟⲡ

[45] l. 117 ⲥⲛⲉⲩ; editor; Editor's restoration; pairs continue the body-pair pattern (two arms)

[46] l. 118 ϣⲟ; editor; Editor's restoration of split word ⲛⲉⲧ[ϣⲟ]ⲟⲡ 'those that exist'

[48] l. 148 ⲡ; editor; definite article restored before ⲗⲉⲱⲛ

[49] l. 149 ⲙⲁ; editor; ⲁ[ⲙⲁ]ⲓⲏⲛⲥ — middle syllable of the body-part term ⲁⲙⲁⲓⲏⲛⲥ already attested elsewhere meaning 'support, foundation'

[50] l. 150 ⲡⲥ; editor; [ⲡⲥ]ⲕⲟⲣⲡⲓⲟⲥ — definite article + initial letters of 'Scorpion'

[52] l. 151 ⲡⲁⲓⲣ; editor; [ⲡⲁⲓⲣ]ⲟⲕⲉⲣⲟⲥ = 'the Capricorn (αἰγόκερως)' — only the latter part survives

[53] l. 156 ϫ; editor; ⲧ[ϫ]ⲉ = 'the manner' — Lycopolitan ⲧϫⲉ for ⲧϩⲉ

[54] l. 156 ⲉ; editor; [ⲉ]ⲧⲟⲩϣⲟⲟⲡ = 'in which they exist' — relative ⲉⲧ-

[57] l. 172 ⲡⲉ ⲡⲧⲟ; pipeline restoration, confidence: moderate; Reconstruction connecting 'left kidney' to 'Sagittarius' (ⲡⲧⲟϫⲟⲧⲏⲥ) on next line; ⲡⲉ is copular, ⲡⲧⲟ initial syllable of the zodiac name.

[59] l. 174 ⲣⲟⲥ; pipeline restoration, confidence: high; Final syllable of ⲡⲁⲓⲅⲟⲕⲉ-[ⲣⲟⲥ] 'Capricorn' from prior line.

[61] l. 175 ⲉⲧⲁ; editor; Editor restoration: introduces relative clause continuing into line 3 ('which the demiurge of the body...').

[73] l. 189 ⲛⲁ; editor; Editor restoration: ⲉⲧϩⲛⲁ 'who shall' (relative + future) introduces 'die in him' on line 17.

[75] l. 191 ϩ; editor; Single-letter restoration of 3sg.m. suffix on ⲁⲣⲁ= 'upon (him).'

[79] l. 196 ϸ; editor; Editor restoration: completes ϣⲁϸⲉ 'there is/comes about' from line 22.

[80] l. 7 ⲧⲏ — "the winds"; editor; Editor restores [ⲧⲏ]ϒ; the word ⲧⲏϒ in this context is uncertain. Could be 'winds/spirits' or part of a longer absolute pronoun (e.g. ⲧⲏⲣⲟϒ 'all'). The translator's tentative gloss is 'all' as the lowest term in the cosmic ascent-chain.

Into My Mother's House

This is the full integration: the Lord received now as kindred, sharing the same nourishment, the soul instructed in what bears it. The teachings unfold this fullness. They begin with the diagnosis of envy as the self's first motion of claim and the eight dwellings of living love; the Apostle's letter of peace and greeting between Call and Hearing, the kingdoms of the world, the four works of self-love met by the saving separation; the daily purification by which truth as nourishment cleanses what was mingled; the two faces shown forth in the rational — love and the strife being refined; the cosmic body and the soul as pearl in the sea; the soul's rest in the luminaries, the four ways up and the eight ways down, the elements stripped of their defiled garments and brought to first rest; the cloud and the three rising states, the pure soul tilled from above, the three modes of begetting; the Virgin and the Continent — soul never claimed and soul claimed-and-returned — the inverted face that signs the Call and the Answer, the five births of the body of which the soul recognizes only one; what endures and what passes, the word's articulation through five degrees, why the same ground bears sweet fruit and bitter; the five mysteries of the First Man and the hundred holy days, the hidden powers in the senses, the three forms in the eye and why understanding sees only by light; and at last the fivefold completeness without which the cosmos cannot stand, the gates open between the firmaments, and the three forms in the perfect man with the daily soul-cycle that purifies all three.

The teachings unfold the full integration in one continuous arc. They open with the diagnostic dyad: envy as the first motion of the self that claims, love as the bond at every register where it can be received — the difference the soul has by now learned to feel. They then turn outward to the conversation between Lord and soul: the salutation as letter, the kingdoms as the last political shape of the self that claims, the four works of self-love met by saving separation. The arc turns inward to how light operates: daily purification, the two faces refined, the soul as pearl in the sea of body. The teachings then trace the rest: where the soul finds rest, the ways up and down, the elements stripped and at first rest; and then the bearing: the cloud-states that bear influx, the pure soul tilled from above, the three modes of begetting; and the recognition: virgin and continent, the inverted Call and Answer, the five hidden offspring; and the discriminations: what endures, the word minted through five faculties, sweet fruit and bitter from one ground. The deepest interior follows: five mysteries and the hundred days of the Call-Answer as living food, the hidden senses, the three forms in the eye. The close is the fivefold cosmos, the gates always open between degrees, and the three forms in the regenerated person with the daily cycle that purifies all three. This is the full integration that the earlier withdrawal had to make possible. It is the major culmination of the cycle. The final section will then seal what is here received.

Envy of Matter and the Living Fires

Foundation

The diagnostic dyad with which full integration begins. T74 — envy is the first motion of selfhood: looking at what flows from above and wanting it for oneself, not as gift received but as possession claimed; the original shape of self-love from which every later wickedness flows; she envies the First Man, the icon of the Ambassador, the formed Adam, and all the firstborn things and the cross. T75 — the eight dwellings of living love, divine love at every register where it can be received: in the ground of the natural, in the Father's own deep, in the armor of the Divine Human, in the two ships of day and night, in the Call going out, in the new land of pure receivability, in the Land of Light itself, and in the visible signs drawn from sun and moon. The soul has by now learned to feel the difference between envy and love at every register.

SPIRITUAL READING

Envy is the very first motion of selfhood. Before the soul has done anything else with what flows through it, it has already begun to envy: that is, to look at what descends from above and to want it for itself, not as gift received but as possession claimed. Envy is the original shape of self-love in the natural mind, the seed-form of every later wickedness.

When the divine humanity goes forth toward the soul, the self sees it and is wounded by what it sees. It cannot bear that something so beautiful should not be its own. So it spits its venom onto the outer truth in which the divine humanity comes clothed — staining what was given, slashing and ruining what it cannot possess.

It envies the first image of the Lord's call, the icon revealed from the height above. It looks upon the likeness it has glimpsed, and rather than receiving the likeness as the Lord's, it stamps an imprint of that likeness onto its own flesh, setting the character of what it saw into the natural body and calling that natural body its own begetting. This is the deepest deception of envy: it sees the divine form and produces a counterfeit of it from itself, then mistakes the counterfeit for its own offspring.

A third time it envies the formed man, the rational that has been shaped under permission to be a vessel of light; and from that rational it snatches what was a power given by the Lord, takes it for its own, and begets from it a self-loved double in the flesh.

A fourth time it stretches out its envy against all the firstborn things and the first works of the Lord — against the blessed One who is father of all, against his wood of suffering, against righteousness itself. There is nothing the Lord brings forth that the self does not look on with hatred, gathering all its faculties together in the single purpose of its evil heart, working to penetrate every good with its claim.

This is what the disordered natural is at root: envy. This is the wickedness that casts the soul out from the whole kind of the Living One — not some later sin, but the first turn of the heart by which the soul, seeing what is given, refuses to receive it as given and tries instead to make it its own. From this first beginning every other claim flows.

The sixth is the fire which they kindled forth from the All — the [projection] the living one, mounted upon her, upon his body outside, of the Call and the Hearing. He has fashioned within her the great works; he went down, he left himself naked of her before the Omophoros.

[The] sixth is the fire that habitually manifests forth from this [. .] a multitude of [a multitude of] men give signs of war and battle. She also [she habitually] that they may manifest forth and reveal forth her sign and [fear]; he habitually [manifests] her forth from these two ships of light. [This is the manner] this in which the living holy fire is set, in this [eight places].

SPIRITUAL READING

Divine love — the fire that gives wisdom its life — abides in the soul not at one register only but at eight, and the soul that would know how it is loved must learn to recognize each.

The first dwelling of this love is the ground itself: the natural mind, set below and outside, the substrate upon which everything else stands. Before the soul can rise into any higher reception, love is already at work in the lowest, holding the natural in being and warming what would otherwise be inert.

The second dwelling is the Lord himself, the Father, the God of Truth, established in his own deep reflection. Here love does not go forth; it is at home. Every other power that issues toward the soul issues from him, and this love likewise is what comes from those issuings — the source-fire from which all the others are kindled.

The third dwelling is the Divine Human. Love clothes the form by which the Lord goes forth toward the soul, and serves as his armor: the fire upon the body of the Perfect Man. When the soul meets the Lord in the form a soul can meet, what burns there is this same love taking the shape of protection and contest.

The fourth dwelling is the vessel of the day — illumining wisdom in the rational. The fire kindled from all the Lord's powers and set at the outer wall is the love that animates divine truth shining; without it, light would not warm, and wisdom would not draw the soul.

The fifth dwelling is the vessel of the night — receivable wisdom held within the natural waters. The same fire is set in the lesser luminary, where truth has been accommodated low enough to be taken in. Here love burns gently within natural truth, hidden inside what the soul drinks.

The sixth dwelling is the Lord's call going out to the rational. Love is the fire kindled forth from the whole, mounted upon the body that goes outside, the body of the Call and the Hearing. Through this fire the great works are fashioned in the soul; and when the call has done its work, the one who came down lays his outer form aside and is held up from beneath by the bearing-up principle that supports the rational.

The seventh dwelling is the new land — the regenerated state, which is reflection itself, the rational fully turning back upon what it has received. The first woman who is a wreath for the whole land dwells here: the pure receivability by which the Lord's love is taken without distortion. Love at this register crowns the regenerated rational and extends over the whole ground beneath it.

The eighth dwelling is love as it shows itself in signs. From the two vessels of light it manifests forth, breaking into the natural as portents of contest and outcome — making visible to the soul what otherwise would remain interior, so that what is being worked in the rational can be read in its sign.

In all eight, it is one fire: divine love, alive, holy, set in each place at the register that place can hold. The soul that learns to recognize the same love at each of its eight dwellings learns thereby that what burns in the ground beneath, in the luminaries above, in the call going out, and in the new land within is not eight loves but one — the Lord's, given.

APPARATUS

[1] l. 3 ⲡⲉ; editor; Completes ϣⲱⲡⲉ 'become, come into being' across line break

[2] l. 5 ⲁⲥⲕⲱ — “she cast”; pipeline restoration, confidence: low; 4-char verb governing 'her venom'; ⲁⲥⲕⲱ 'she placed/cast' fits the formula and parallels later ⲁⲥⲕⲱ ⲙⲡⲭⲁⲣⲁⲕⲧⲏⲣ in 4418.

[3] l. 5 ⲩ — “and”; editor; Completes ⲧⲉⲥⲙⲉⲧⲟⲩ 'her venom/poison' (cf. glossary ⲙⲉⲧⲟⲩ 'poison')

[4] l. 5 ⲁⲩⲱ — “and”; pipeline restoration, confidence: moderate; 3-char connector between 'her venom' and 'her wickedness'; ⲁⲩⲱ 'and' fits length and standard parallelism.

[5] l. 6 ⲉ — “s”; editor; Completes ⲁⲛⲉϩⲍⲃⲥⲁⲩⲉ 'onto his garments'

[6] l. 8 ⲏⲥ; editor; Editor's restoration completing ⲡⲣⲉⲥⲃⲉⲩⲧⲏⲥ; Greek loanword πρεσβευτής (in glossary).

[7] l. 9 ⲉ; editor; Editor's restoration completing ⲡⲥⲁⲛⲧⲡⲉ 'the upper place' (in glossary).

[8] l. 10 ϩⲙ̄; editor; Editor's restoration of standard preposition ϩⲙ̄/ϩⲙ̄ 'in.'

[9] l. 10 ⲓ; editor; Editor's restoration completing ϩⲓⲕⲱⲛ 'icon' (Greek εἰκών).

[10] l. 11 ⲧⲙ; editor; Editor's restoration completing ⲉⲧⲙⲙⲉⲩ 'that, there.'

[11] l. 13 ⲧⲧⲙⲁ; editor; Editor's restoration of ordinal prefix ⲧⲧⲙⲁϩ-, giving ⲧⲧⲙⲁϩϣⲁⲙⲧ 'the third' (cf. glossary feminine ordinal series).

[12] l. 13 ⲣⲡ; editor; Editor's restoration completing ⲡϣⲁⲣⲡ 'the first.'

[14] l. 15 ⲥⲁⲣⲝ — “flesh”; pipeline restoration, confidence: low; Continues 'she begot her in a ___ of Adam'; parallel with ϩⲛ̄ ⲧⲥⲁⲣⲝ 'in the flesh' from 4419 (her own begetting in flesh).

[15] l. 16 ⲁⲛ ⲁⲥⲫ̄ⲑⲟⲛⲉ — “again she envied”; pipeline restoration, confidence: moderate; Formulaic 'the Nth time also she envied' parallels 4420 'ϩϣⲁⲙⲧ ⲛⲥⲁⲡ ⲁⲛ ⲁⲥⲫ̄ⲑⲟⲛⲉ'.

[16] l. 17 ⲁⲥⲫ̄ — “she”; pipeline restoration, confidence: high; Forms ⲁⲥⲫ̄ⲑⲟⲛⲉ 'she envied' with the visible -ⲑⲟⲛ-, repeating the formula.

[17] l. 17 ⲉ; pipeline restoration, confidence: high; Completes ⲁⲥⲫ̄ⲑⲟⲛⲉ 'she envied'.

[18] l. 17 ϩⲃⲏⲩⲉ — “works”; pipeline restoration, confidence: low; Per the reading, 'the firstborn ones and the first works'; ϩⲃⲏⲩⲉ 'works' fits parallelism.

[19] l. 18 ⲁⲥⲫ̄ⲑⲟⲛ — “she envied”; pipeline restoration, confidence: moderate; Visible 'ⲉ ⲡⲭⲥ' suggests verb-ending ⲉ + Christ as object; standard formula ⲁⲥⲫ̄ⲑⲟⲛⲉ ⲡⲭⲥ 'she envied Christ'.

[20] l. 19 ⲛⲁⲓⲱⲛ — “the aeons”; pipeline restoration, confidence: low; Previous segment ends 'ⲡⲓⲱⲧ ⲛⲛ-'; the reading has 'father of all'. ⲛ̄ⲛⲁⲓⲱⲛ ⲧⲏⲣⲟⲩ 'of all the aeons' fits.

[21] l. 20 ⲁⲧⲥⲟⲫ — “Wisdom”; pipeline restoration, confidence: low; Visible -ⲓⲁ trace + envy-formula suggests ⲁⲧⲥⲟⲫⲓⲁ 'wisdom/Sophia', companion to righteousness in next segment.

[22] l. 21 ⲁⲧⲁ — “against”; pipeline restoration, confidence: moderate; Forms ⲁⲧⲁⲓⲕⲁⲓⲟⲥⲩⲛⲏ 'against righteousness'; preposition ⲁ + ⲧ + ⲁ matches the visible -ⲓⲕⲁⲓⲟⲥⲩⲛⲏ.

[25] l. 22 ⲙⲛⲡ — “the”; pipeline restoration, confidence: low; Forms ⲙⲛ̄ ⲡⲟⲩⲙⲉⲩⲉ 'and their thought', joining 'gathering of evil' with 'their thought'.

[26] l. 22 ⲩⲉ — “the”; pipeline restoration, confidence: high; Completes ⲙⲉⲩⲉ 'thought' with visible ⲙⲉ̄- prefix.

[27] l. 23 ⲁⲍⲟⲩⲛ — “into”; pipeline restoration, confidence: low; Previous infinitive ⲁⲭⲱϩ 'to penetrate' takes directional ⲁϩⲟⲩⲛ ⲛ̄ⲍⲏⲧⲟⲩ 'into them'.

[30] l. 7 ⲧ — “the whole”; editor; ⲏⲣϥ visible at line start; restoration of initial ⲧ; ⲡⲧⲏⲣϥ̄ 'the All' is one of the dominant cosmological terms in this kephalaion

[31] l. 7 ⲛ̄ⲥⲛⲧⲉ ⲙⲛ̄ — “the foundation, with”; editor; ⲛ̄ⲥⲛⲧ visible at line end; ⲉ ⲙⲛ̄ supplied by editor — completes 'foundation' and adds connector to next clause

[32] l. 17 ⲣⲁⲣ — “is himself”; pipeline restoration, confidence: moderate; Three-letter Lyc emphatic particle ⲣⲁⲣ used in the parallel construction at 4464 (ⲛ̄ⲧⲁⲥ ⲣⲁⲣ ⲡⲉ ⲧϣⲁⲣⲡ); fits the 3-char count and the 'who he himself is' pattern.

[33] l. 20 ⲦⲦⲙⲁϩⲥⲧⲁⲩ ⲡⲉ ⲧⲥⲉⲧⲉ — “The fourth is the fire”; editor; editor restoration; ⲉ visible at line start completing ⲧⲥⲉⲧⲉ; the ordinal series demands 'fourth' here

[34] l. 23 ⲡⲁⲓ ⲡⲉ — “this is the one”; pipeline restoration, confidence: low; 5-char appositive 'this is (the one) which is inside the water' — referring back to the moon-luminary as the vessel held within natural waters; relative continues with ⲉⲧϩⲓϩⲟⲩⲛ.

[35] l. 32 ⲧⲁⲓ — “This”; pipeline restoration, confidence: moderate; Feminine demonstrative 'this (one) is the first woman' — the fire (ⲧⲥⲉⲧⲉ, fem.) identified as the wreath/Virgin of Light figure; 3 chars.

[36] l. 34 ⲉⲥⲕⲏ — “she is set”; pipeline restoration, confidence: low; 5-char qualitative 'she is set in him' continues the spatial-locative description of the fire's dwelling. Tentative.

[37] l. 34 ⲡⲕⲁϩ — “the land”; pipeline restoration, confidence: low; 'In the whole [land]' echoing ⲡⲕⲁϩ ⲧⲏⲣⲟ̄ in the immediately preceding line. 4 chars (close to estimated 6); could equally be ⲡⲣⲱⲙⲉ or ⲡⲕⲟⲥⲙⲟⲥ.

[40] l. 37 ⲉϣⲁⲥ — “she habitually”; pipeline restoration, confidence: moderate; 4-char habitual auxiliary 'she habitually' parallel to ϣⲁϥⲟⲩⲁⲛⲥ̄ in next line; introduces the purpose-clause.

[41] l. 38 ⲧⲥϩⲣⲧⲉ — “fear”; editor; editor restoration of feminine noun ⲥϩⲣⲱⲧⲉ/ϩⲟⲣⲟⲧⲉ 'fear' — completes 'signs and [fear/terror]' as cosmic-prognostic effects

[42] l. 39 Ⲧϩⲉ ⲧⲉ — “This is the manner”; editor; editor restoration; standard concluding-formula 'This is the manner in which the living holy fire is set in [these eight places]'

[43] l. 40 ϣⲙⲟⲩⲛ ⲙ̄ⲙⲁ — “eight places”; editor; editor restoration completing the concluding-summary; matches the chapter's enumeration of eight ⲙⲁ where fire is set

The Letter of Peace, the Kingdoms, the Four Works of Sin

Elaboration

The conversation between Lord and soul, set against the kingdoms of the world and the works of self-love. T76 — the Apostle's "peace and greeting" as the letter between Call and Hearing: the conversation between the Lord's summons and the soul's answer, in which everything that has come to pass between them is set down, ascending with the rational when it rises home. T77 — the four kingdoms in the natural mind, none exalted exceedingly above the others; every dominion that organizes itself within the natural stands only at its own degree. T78 — the four great works of self-love (appetite of the mouth, disorder of joining, love of possession, lust for dominion) met by the single saving work: the separation of the beautiful from the bad, established forth in obedience.

The Mind of Light too, which came forth from the Christ.

SPIRITUAL READING

When the Apostle opens with peace and greeting, what stands behind that salutation is the whole structural conversation between the Lord and the soul — the summons going forth and the hearing rising up to meet it. The Call that is sent out from the Lord's operative power, and the Hearing by which the rational receives that Call, together compose what may rightly be called a letter: a letter of peace and greeting written from one to another, brother to brother, in which everything that has come to pass between the soul and its source is set down, and everything still to come is set down with it.

The rational, as it is being formed in the natural, receives such a letter. Upon it are inscribed all the tidings of the soul — every state through which it has passed, every contest the self has waged against its formation, every answer the forming rational has made when pressed, and every step still prepared to be added to it. Nothing of the soul's history is lost; the whole exchange is held in this correspondence between what is summoned and what hears.

When the rational, fully formed, ascends to the height, the letter ascends with it: the record of its molding, of the strifes that came upon it, of its returning, of the answer it gave amid everything that happened. The Lord's operative power knows every war, every danger, every contest that the self and its particular self-loving arrangements raised against the rational while it was being shaped. None of this is hidden from him; he has carried it through with the soul and has its full account.

And the Lord ordering the rational, the truth that comes forth from the Anointed to awaken discrimination within — this too is part of the letter, the further word by which the soul comes to read what has been written and to recognize, in peace, the greeting that has been sent it from the beginning.

SPIRITUAL READING

There are four great states of dominion that hold sway within the natural mind in this world — four kingdoms, set side by side, each governing its own province of the soul's outer life. The teaching names them in order: a first, a second, a third, and a fourth. The much that has fallen out of the page leaves their particulars hidden, but the structure survives: four orders of rule, articulated as a complete extension of worldly power across the natural.

What the teaching insists upon is this: among these four, none is exalted exceedingly above the others. They stand as peers in their own register. No one of them rises so far above the rest that it can claim to be the source from which the others come. They are all alike kingdoms of the world — states of dominion in the natural mind, holding their proper places within the bounds of the natural, but none of them having that supremacy which belongs only to the Lord's rule.

The soul that reads this is being taught to see the limit of every dominion that organizes itself within the natural. However lofty any such rule appears, it stands only at its own degree, with others beside it equally enthroned. None is the true King of Glory. The supremacy that no kingdom of the world holds is held above them all by the Lord, whose kingdom is of another order than the four.

The Four Great Works of Self-Love, and the Separation That Lifts the Soul Above Them

Four great ⌈matters⌉ ⌈exist⌉ in the cosmos, on which all the men of ⌈the earth kill⌉ one another for them.

Four great matters in which the self organizes itself, four shapes the soul's claiming takes when it has forgotten that what flows through it is not its own. Wherever the rational has settled into the natural without recognition of its source, these four are at work, and the whole company of unregenerate humanity moves among them.

The first is the appetite of the mouth: the natural taking what passes through it as if to feed itself, the soul consuming for the sake of its body and never lifting its eyes to the giver. What is meant to sustain becomes the thing claimed.

The second is the disorder of the joining: love bent down upon itself, the affections binding to one another apart from the order in which the Lord conjoins. Where there should be receiving without claiming, there is only the soul fastening on what it has taken to be its own.

The third is the love of possession and the boasting that goes with it: the wealth which the rational covets, in which it congratulates itself, claiming as its own getting what was given through its hand. Here the self says of every good in the natural, "this is mine, and mine because I made it."

The fourth is the lust for dominion, the war and the frenzied injustices the soul does to its neighbor, one prevailing over another, one trampling another, in the tyranny by which it seeks to make itself a name among all men. The self will even shed its neighbor to gather to itself what it cannot otherwise hold.

These are the four great matters that the soul pursues across every tongue and every state of the natural mind; this is what it does to itself and to others when it has not yet learned to lay off what it has claimed.

> But the one who hears the teaching, and receives faith and thanksgiving in the likeness that has been set before him — the discrimination of what is the Lord's from what the soul has claimed, the beautiful drawn forth from the bad — that one stands established in the unique sonship of the divine, in the godhead, in obedience. That soul is lifted high above all who remain among the four. The separation itself is what raises him.

[3] l. 4 ⲙⲉ — “Calling”; editor; Final letters of ⲡⲧⲱϩⲙⲉ continuing from line 1.

[4] l. 4 ϩ ⲁ — “forth”; editor; ⲧⲛ̄ⲛⲁⲩ[ϩ ⲁ]ⲃⲁⲗ 'sent forth' — completing standard verb-phrase confirmed by ⲃⲁⲗ at line 3 start.

[5] l. 5 ⲁⲡⲱⲱⲡⲧ — “upon the molding”; editor; ⲡⲱⲱⲡⲧ ⲛ̄ⲣⲱⲙⲉ 'molding of man' confirmed by line 4 ⲛ̄ⲣⲱⲙⲉ; standard Manichaean compound.

[6] l. 6 ⲙⲟⲥ — “greeting”; editor; ⲁⲥⲡⲁⲥ[ⲙⲟⲥ] = ἀσπασμός 'greeting' — standard restoration.

[8] l. 7 ⲁⲅⲅⲉ — “tidings”; editor; ⲛ̄[ⲁⲅⲅⲉ]ⲗⲓⲁ = ἀγγελία 'tidings, message' — confirmed by ⲗⲓⲁ at line 6 start.

[9] l. 9 ⲫⲱⲡ — “happen”; editor; [ⲫⲱⲡ]ⲉ continues ⲉⲧⲛⲁ-ⲫⲱⲡⲉ 'shall happen' from line 6 end.

[10] l. 9 ⲉⲧⲙ — “this”; editor; [ⲉⲧⲙ̄]ⲙⲉⲩ — standard demonstrative 'there/that'.

[11] l. 9 ⲡⲓ — “this”; editor; Beginning of ⲡⲓⲧⲱϩⲙⲉ 'this Calling'; continues into line 8.

[12] l. 10 ⲧⲱ; editor; [ⲧⲱ]ϩⲙⲉ — middle of ⲡⲓⲧⲱϩⲙⲉ from line 7.

[13] l. 10 ϫⲓⲧⲥ̄ ⲁⲃⲁⲗ — “received it from”; pipeline restoration, confidence: low; 6 chars; in correspondential reading the molding of man receives the Calling, so ϫⲓⲧⲥ̄ ⲁⲃⲁⲗ 'received it from' fits length and sense; alternatives (ⲁⲫϫⲓⲧⲥ̄, ⲧⲁⲩⲁⲥ ⲛⲉⲩ) equally possible.

[14] l. 11 ⲉ ⲥ — “that which”; editor; Visible ⲥϩⲛⲏⲩⲧ may be a qualitative form of ⲥϩⲁⲓ 'be written' (compare ⲥⲛϩ in adjacent lines); transcription marks one preceding character lost.

[15] l. 12 ⲱⲫⲃ ⲉⲧⲁⲩϫⲁⲩϩ ⲁⲃⲁⲗ — “Answer that they sent forth”; editor; Editor's restoration: ⲧⲟⲩ[ⲱⲫⲃ] = ⲡⲟⲩⲱⲫⲃ 'the Answer' (in glossary), parallel to the Calling sent earlier; ⲁⲩϫⲁⲩϩ ⲁⲃⲁⲗ 'they set forth' parallels ⲁϩϫⲁⲩϩ in line 3.

[16] l. 13 ⲙⲡ — “From the”; editor; [ⲙⲡ]ⲫⲁⲣⲡⲧ — preposition + 'first', completing ⲙ̄ⲡⲱⲁⲣⲡⲧ ⲛ̄ⲣⲱⲙⲉ 'from the First Man'.

[17] l. 13 ⲥⲉ ϫⲁ ⲡⲡⲛ̄ⲁ ⲉⲧⲁⲛⲥ̄ — “Height up to the Living Spirit”; editor; Editor's restoration: ⲁⲡⲓⲥⲉ 'to the Height' (in glossary as ⲡⲧⲓⲥⲉ) + ϫⲁ ⲡⲡⲛ̄ⲁ ⲉⲧⲁⲛⲥ̄ 'unto the Living Spirit' — standard cosmological ascent vocabulary mirroring line 3.

[18] l. 14 ⲟ — “A”; editor; [ⲟ]ⲩⲉⲡⲓⲥⲧⲟⲗⲏ — indefinite article + epistolē; single-letter restoration.

[19] l. 14 ⲉⲧⲁⲩⲧⲛⲛⲁϩ ⲁⲃⲁⲗ ⲙ — “which was sent forth from”; editor; Editor's restoration: standard relative-perfect 'that they sent forth' parallel to lines 2-3; required by ⲡⲱⲫⲡⲧ ⲛ̄ⲣⲱⲙⲉ in line 12.

[20] l. 15 ⲉⲧⲉⲣⲉ ⲛⲁⲅⲅⲉⲗⲓⲁ — “in which the tidings”; editor; Standard formula 'in which all the tidings... are written down' parallels lines 4-5; relative + ⲁⲅⲅⲉⲗⲓⲁ confirmed by ⲧⲏⲣⲟⲩ ⲥⲛϩ in line 13.

[22] l. 17 trace: .

[23] l. 18 ⲁⲧⲧⲁⲩⲁⲩ — “gave”; pipeline restoration, confidence: low; 7 chars; the molding of man 'gave/uttered' the Answer — ⲁⲧⲧⲁⲩⲁⲩ 'he gave it forth' fits sense (the Answer the rational makes when pressed) and approximate length, though uncertain.

[24] l. 19 trace: . .

[25] l. 19 ⲉϩⲛⲁⲫⲱⲡⲉ — “that shall happen”; editor; Editor's restoration; standard pair 'everything that has happened and everything that shall happen' confirmed by ⲉⲁϩⲫⲱⲡⲉ in same line.

[26] l. 20 ⲡ — “That”; editor; [ⲡ]ⲉⲧⲁⲩⲉⲓⲧϩ — definite-article restoration before relative substantive.

[27] l. 21 ⲏⲣⲟ; editor; ⲧ[ⲏⲣⲟ]ⲩ 'all' — middle letters of ⲧⲏⲣⲟⲩ.

Light Working Through; Two Faces; the Cosmic Body Within

Elaboration

How the conjunction works in the soul day by day. T79 — light comes in and works through the soul: she carries the whole archonic host within her, and the daily reception of nourishment habitually purifies, cleanses, filters, washes forth the mingling of darkness mingled into her. T80 — two faces shown forth in the rational: the face of love (beauty with longing) and the face of love-of-strife being refined; both visible at once because the soul is twofold, not yet sorted but already showing what it is becoming and what it is laying off. T81 — how precious truths are formed in the natural mind like pearls in a fitted vessel; and how the soul wearing a body is settled by what comes into her in the proper order, or disturbed when bitter food enters.

grasp the entire archonic host that exists within him.

The second: that the soul which comes in ⌈unto him⌉ through the dispensation of nourishment day by day — habitually she purifies and cleanses, and filters, and washes forth the mingling of the Darkness which is mingled into her.

SPIRITUAL READING

The soul does not stand outside selfhood; she carries the whole company of self-loving arrangements within her own substance. Every claim the natural mind has made, every fixed shape that self-love has organized into a ruling order — all of it is held inside her, and any work of purification has to happen there, in her, not somewhere else.

The second thing to grasp is this: the soul that comes in under the Lord's ordering receives nourishment day by day, and by that daily reception she habitually purifies. She does not accomplish a single great separation once; she lives in a continuous operation of cleansing, refining, and washing forth what had been mingled within her. Truth received, taken as her food, does the work through her.

What she washes out is the darkness that had been mingled into her — what she had claimed and not yet recognized was not her own. The reception is steady and the discrimination is gradual: each day's influx loosens a little more of what was held, each day's nourishment carries away a little more of the confusion in which the given and the claimed had been indistinguishable. This is how light comes in and works in the soul: not by seizure, but by feeding her until, through her own daily reception, the darkness that was mingled into her is filtered out.

The two faces shown forth in the rational: love and the strife that is being refined in the heavens habitually reveal themselves out of this face — ⌈two⌉: in the face of the love (agape) and the face of the fear. They reveal themselves out of these ⌈two⌉ faces of the powers of heaven that are in the heavens, on account of their soul that is ⌈weak⌉ in the All. For in likeness there are two: the face of Agape, which is the beauty with the longing — beside the other face of the love-of-strife that is in them, which they habitually refine ⌈upward⌉ ⌈from them —⌉ the powers of heaven.

SPIRITUAL READING

In the higher reaches of the rational, two faces show themselves out of the one inmost — two distinct manifestations of what is interior turned outward. The interior of the soul, where it has been touched by the Lord, brings forth a likeness; and the interior of the soul, where it still claims and contends, brings forth a likeness of its own. Both stand in view at once, because the soul in its formation is twofold: not yet sorted, but already showing what it is becoming and what it is laying off.

The first face is the face of love. Where the Lord's love has been received, the inmost turns outward as beauty joined to longing — beauty, because what is given is good in its proper order; longing, because love that has been received reaches back toward its source. This is the face the soul wears when it is in conjunction, when what flows through it is recognized as the Lord's and answered with the soul's whole desire.

The other face is the face the soul wears while the love-of-strife is still in it: the self's contention, the self-love that quarrels for what is not its own. This face too appears in the higher reaches, because nothing in the rational is hidden from the Lord's discrimination; what is claimed is brought into view precisely so it can be refined. The higher powers of the rational, ordered by the Lord, do not destroy what they see there but refine it — choosing out what is the Lord's, laying off what was claimed — until that face also becomes the face of love.

So the soul knows itself, in this state, by two countenances at once: the beauty of love already received, and the strife still being purified. The Lord's work in the higher rational is to bring the second under the refining of the first, until only one face remains.

(The chapter is heavily damaged; the reading follows what the surviving phrases — the two faces, agape as beauty-with-longing, the love-of-strife being refined, the powers of the heavens — clearly disclose.)

who makes a dripping of rain-water [. . . . . .] of the waters [ca. 20] It is not (the case) that she is single — she divides, scattering forth into drops, many many. And they take a time, but they were dripped while she is sweet and they come down into the sea — that of the rain which comes with the sweet downpour, and they sink into the oyster which habitually is a first oyster. They mingle with one another in this this hour, and they are molded, and they become great pearls — a great Iaos-gem, being honored. But again, if a single drop of rain comes downward, and that drop divides into many drops, into very small fragments, they mold them habitually, and they multiply into pearls, many in the oyster and the kek. There are some that habitually mold mold two pearls; there are some that habitually mold three; there are some that habitually mold; and there are some that fashion more than these. And others who habitually become smaller than these.

On the one hand, the time when there is a single drop, when the oyster receives it, it habitually becomes a great pearl (pearl), being honored, while its splendor is complete. But the time also, when two drops shall take a moment toward each other before any fragment escapes from them, and they join with one another of the oyster [. . . . .] before they divide first in the place which is within the oyster, in great Iaos-gems [. . . .] there [. . . . . .] drops of rain that they [ca. 17] another which has been drawn [. .] is [. . .] the waters habitually mold them in ⌈in them⌉ in great wealth, being honored.

The time also, when these wells of those of below are still away from thee, while the other food which has come unto thee being firm, being select — they bear thy heart established in his place, while thy counsels are still away from disturbance.

SPIRITUAL READING

Consider how a precious truth comes to be formed in the natural mind. Pearls do not appear everywhere in the sea — not in the whole expanse of natural perception alike — but only where a particular receptivity has been prepared. From above, the Lord sends down his influx like rain, drop after drop. The drops descend through the still air, fall into the sweet waters that lie ready for them, and mingle with what is already there in its proper sweetness. They do not sink uselessly into the depths; they are received into a fitted vessel — a state of reception held open for them — and within that vessel they are slowly molded into something formed and lasting. One drop, taken in singly, can become a single great and honored pearl, its splendor complete. Two drops, joining one another in the vessel before either is dispersed, are molded together into another fullness. A single drop may also break into many fine fragments, and each be molded into its own pearl, so that the truth multiplies. Some vessels bring forth one, some two, some three, some many — according to what they have received and held. So precious truth comes to be in the soul: through the rain that descends at its hour, through the receptivity that opens to receive it, and through the natural mind that holds the two together until what was given has taken stable form. Then those who know how to dive into the depths bring up these formed truths from the abyss, and what was hidden becomes wealth offered to the inmost.

Now hear what this means for the soul that wears a body. There comes a moment when the Lord, ordering the rational, comes into her with his wisdom and his hearing, and at his coming he settles her, purifies her, makes her a New Man — and there is no disturbance in her, no shock, no agitation at all.

But there are also times when disturbance rises in her. When this happens, the disturbance comes in upon the soul through what enters her: through the very food and drink she takes, through the things she lets in. For her members on high — the better states alive within her — can be stirred either way by what comes in. When what enters is bitter, when it carries desire and grief and lupē in its substance, then the disordered states circle round her and shake her good things from their settled place; the higher states, willing or unwilling, are thrown into turmoil within her, and the self that lies in her passes over into bitterness, into desire, into grief, into the wicked reflections of the body. So you are disturbed, when you are disturbed, through what comes in to you from below — through the bitter things hidden in food badly taken.

There is another time, however, when the higher states are still and at rest in you, and what comes in to you meets you well. Then the food that enters is firm and chosen; light and life multiply in you; what is evil grows small; the upper air is quiet; the inner image is still; and the beautiful members of what comes in bear you up. You are still, you are at rest, you walk well in your ways, in the freshness of the living member that abounds with the light of souls — those honored ones within you who have completed their course, whose changes have ceased, whose soul has soared inward to be yokefellow with the living souls within you. You bear them in you, and they come forth from you without disturbance. They bear you up, and your body is sound, your works are well-ordered in their measure, your teachings stand firm, your words are established, and your soul has soared up to you, mounting like a bird.

Ask, then: through what door do evil counsels and wicked reflections come forth, and the slack thoughts that are themselves disturbed, and the deceitful teachings? They come at the hour when the mind is in a place of disturbance, and you are habitually disturbed through those lower wells, those bitter members that come into you in food badly taken. And when those lower wells are still and away from you, and what has come into you is firm and chosen, then the higher food bears your heart settled in its proper place, and your counsel is still and far from disturbance.

So watch what you take in. Watch what you let become inward. The same vessel that receives the sweet drop from above and forms it into a pearl can also receive bitterness from below and be shaken by it. Stillness in the soul is not given by accident; it is the fruit of right reception, hour by hour, of what comes down from above into what has been kept open for it.

APPARATUS

[6] l. 10 ⲙ̄; editor; Editor restoration completing ⲙ̄ⲡⲕⲉⲕⲉ 'of the Darkness.'

[7] l. 99 ⲛ̄; editor; completes ⲡⲉⲓⲛⲉ 'likeness'

[8] l. 101 ⲡⲟⲛ ⲛ̄; editor; completes ⲡⲣⲟⲥⲱⲡⲟⲛ ⲛ̄ⲧ- '[the fa]ce of the...' continuing from previous line

[9] l. 101 ⲁⲍⲣⲏⲓ — “upward”; editor; Lyc. ⲁⲍⲣⲏⲓ = ⲉϩⲣⲁⲓ 'upward' (in glossary); fits the soteriological refinement-upward verb ⲥⲱⲧⲏ

[10] l. 102 ⲛⲍⲏⲧ — “from them —”; editor; completes ⲛ̄ⲍⲏⲧⲟⲩ 'from them' (Lyc. ⲛ̄ϩⲏⲧⲟⲩ)

[11] l. 50 ⲃⲁⲗ; pipeline restoration, confidence: moderate; Trace ⲗ at end of 3-char gap and the parallel verbs ⲉⲥⲟⲩⲁⲛⲍ̄ ... ⲉⲥⲟ̄ⲁⲗⲡ 'manifesting/revealing herself' fit ⲁⲃⲁⲗ 'forth' as adverb (with ⲁ on prior line) — standard pairing in revelation formulas.

[12] l. 64 ⲡⲱⲥ — “How”; pipeline restoration, confidence: low; Greek loan ⲡⲱⲥ 'how' fits 3-char gap and matches the immediate question 'how were they molded' (ⲛ̄ⲉⲱ ⲛ̄ϩⲉ ⲛ̄ⲥⲉⲡⲗⲁⲥⲥⲉ).

[14] l. 66 ⲁⲛ — “They are not (molded)”; pipeline restoration, confidence: low; 5-char gap; in negation context 'neither in every place' the negative ⲁⲛ would normally appear; alternatives possible.

[15] l. 66 ⲙⲙⲁⲩ; editor; editor's restoration; the locative expected to complete 'are they molded [in them]'

[16] l. 67 ϩⲛ ⲫⲁ; editor; editor's restoration completing ϩⲛ ⲫⲁⲗⲁⲥⲥⲁ 'in the sea'; the visible ⲗⲁⲥⲥⲁ ⲧⲏⲣⲉ̄ confirms 'the entire sea'

[19] l. 69 ϫⲛ̄ ⲧⲫⲁⲗⲁⲥⲥⲁ; editor; editor restored ⲫⲁⲗⲁⲥⲥⲁ; preceding traces visible. The whole phrase = 'in the sea that one'

[20] l. 69 ⲗⲁⲥⲥⲉ ⲛϩⲏⲧ; editor; editor restored ⲡ[ⲗⲁⲥⲥⲉ ⲛϩⲏⲧ]ⲉ̄ completing 'they mold within them' (ϣⲁⲩⲡⲗⲁⲥⲥⲉ ⲛϩⲏⲧⲉ)

[21] l. 71 3 dots before bracket then 12-char bracketed gap

[22] l. 72 ⲡⲗⲁⲥⲥⲉ ⲙⲙⲁⲩ; pipeline restoration, confidence: moderate; 9-char gap; the subject 'the sea' habitually performs the molding throughout this section, so ϣⲁⲣⲉ ⲫⲁⲗⲁⲥⲥⲁ ⲡⲗⲁⲥⲥⲉ ⲙⲙⲁⲩ 'the sea habitually molds them' is standard.

[23] l. 73 scattered letters ⲟ ⲉ visible

[25] l. 75 ⲩ visible at end

[26] l. 75 ⲙⲙⲟⲩⲓⲉⲩⲉ; pipeline restoration, confidence: moderate; 9-char gap after ⲡⲙⲟⲩⲛϩⲱⲟⲩ 'downpour'; the standard formula in this section is ⲡⲙⲟⲩⲛϩⲱⲟⲩ ⲙⲙⲟⲩⲓⲉⲩⲉ 'downpour of waters'.

[30] l. 80 ⲛⲛⲓ; pipeline restoration, confidence: low; 3-char gap before ⲙⲙⲟⲩⲓⲉⲩⲉ 'waters'; plural article continuing the sweet-waters discourse.

[31] l. 80 ⲙⲙⲁⲩ; editor; editor restored [ⲙⲙⲁⲩ] continuing the pattern †ⲩⲁ̄†ⲗⲉ ⲙⲙⲁⲩ 'the dripping there' established earlier in passage

[32] l. 81 ⲁ; editor; completes ⲁⲡⲓⲧⲛⲉ 'downward'

[33] l. 81 ϩ visible after 2-char trace

[35] l. 83 ⲃ; editor; completes ⲃⲱⲕ 'go'

[36] l. 84 ⲧⲗⲧⲗⲉ — "the drop"; pipeline restoration, confidence: low; 3-char gap before relative 'which dripped down'; subject is the drop (ⲧⲗⲧⲗⲉ) — fits formulaic referent. Slightly over char est.

[37] l. 84 ⲛⲧⲡⲉ; pipeline restoration, confidence: low; 9-char gap after 'with the waters' — the parallel formula 'from above with the waters' uses ⲛⲧⲡⲉ; over-short for est_chars but main element.

[40] l. 86 scattered traces, ⲛⲝ at end of bracket

[41] l. 86 3 dots of traces

[43] l. 87 ⲁⲣⲓⲧⲏⲥ; editor; completes ⲟⲩⲙⲁⲣⲅⲁⲣⲓⲧⲏⲥ 'a pearl'; subsequent text in lacuna

[45] l. 90 ⲉ; editor; Initial letter of ⲉⲛⲁϣⲱⲩ 'many,' continuing visibly on line 2.

[46] l. 91 ⲡⲉ; pipeline restoration, confidence: low; 3-char gap after 'while she is sweet'; copular ⲡⲉ closes circumstantial clause naturally.

[47] l. 92 ⲉⲧⲣⲏⲩ; pipeline restoration, confidence: low; 4 chars after partial ⲉⲧⲣ; possible qualitative ⲉⲧⲣⲏⲩ 'which (is) coming' or ⲉⲧⲣⲱⲧ 'which grows'; speculative.

[54] l. 103 ⲁⲛ ⲉϩⲁ; editor; Completes ⲟⲩⲁⲛ ⲉϩⲁⲟ̄ⲱϫⲃⲉ 'some who habitually become smaller,' parallel to repeated ⲟⲩⲁⲛ ⲉϩⲁⲡⲗⲁⲥⲥⲉ formula in lines 11-13.

[62] l. 110 ⲍⲙ̄; pipeline restoration, confidence: low; 3-char gap before ⲙⲁ ⲉ̄ⲧⲍⲓϩⲟⲩⲛ 'the place which is within'; ⲍⲙ̄ ⲡⲙⲁ 'in the place' fits.

[63] l. 110 ⲛⲧⲃⲏⲧⲉ; pipeline restoration, confidence: moderate; 6-char gap; the place 'within' habitually refers to the oyster (ⲧⲃⲏⲧⲉ) where pearls form.

[64] l. 111 ⲡⲉ; pipeline restoration, confidence: low; 2-char gap before ⲙⲏ ⲙ̄ⲙⲉⲩ 'there'; ⲡⲉ as copula or demonstrative.

[65] l. 111 ⲁⲩ; pipeline restoration, confidence: low; 3-char gap after ⲉⲧ-; relative + subject ⲉⲧⲁⲩ 'which they (have)'.

[66] l. 113 ϣⲁⲣⲉ ⲛⲓ; pipeline restoration, confidence: low; 9-char gap before 'waters mold them'; habitual ϣⲁⲣⲉ + plural ⲛⲓⲙⲟⲩⲓⲉⲩⲉ matches pattern 'the waters habitually mold them'.

[70] l. 120 ⲙⲁⲩ; pipeline restoration, confidence: moderate; 4-char gap after 'and the [...]'; ⲡⲙⲁⲩ 'water' fits the chain ⲡϫⲱⲃⲉ ⲙⲛ ⲡⲙⲁⲩ ⲛⲑⲁⲗⲁⲥⲥⲁ 'the kobe and the water of the sea'.

[71] l. 122 ⲙ̄ⲡⲕⲁ; editor; Completes ⲙ̄ⲡⲕⲁⲣⲟⲥ 'of the appointed time' (Greek καιρός; cf. ⲡⲕⲁⲣⲟⲥ in accumulated vocabulary).

[72] l. 122 ⲱⲛ; pipeline restoration, confidence: low; 4-char gap after ⲉⲧⲥⲟⲩ-; possibly ⲉⲧⲥⲟⲩⲱⲛ 'knowing' (relative).

[74] l. 123 ⲱⲧ; pipeline restoration, confidence: moderate; 2-char gap completing ϣⲁⲩⲡ-; ϣⲁⲩⲡⲱⲧ 'they habitually run/dive' fits divers' action.

[75] l. 124 ⲱⲧ ⲁ; pipeline restoration, confidence: low; 11-char gap; the divers descend (ⲡⲱⲧ ⲁⲡⲓⲧⲛ̄) to those places — partial formula match. Slightly under est.

[76] l. 124 ⲛⲥ; editor; Completes ⲛⲥⲉⲛ̄ 'and they bring' — conjunctive prefix.

[77] l. 126 ⲡ; editor; definite article on ϧⲁⲗⲕⲱ̄ⲥⲉ ('the diver'), required by the parallel ⲡϧⲁⲗⲕⲱ̄ⲥⲉ that immediately follows.

[78] l. 127 ⲧⲏ; editor; completion of the relative qualitative ⲡⲉⲧ-ⲧⲏϣ 'that which is appointed to him,' standard Coptic idiom.

[79] l. 127 ⲧ; editor; first letter of the verb ⲧⲉⲉⲩ 'give themselves' (Lyc. for †); confirmed by parallel ⲧⲉⲉⲩ in line 4.

[80] l. 128 ϣⲁ; editor; completion of ϣⲁⲧⲉ 'well, depth,' resuming ⲛⲉϣⲁⲧⲉ at end of line 3.

[81] l. 46 ⲁⲣⲁϩ ⲙ̄ⲙⲉ ⲙ̄ⲡ — “truly upon him. Do not”; editor; Editor's restoration completing ⲙ̄ⲡⲣ̄- 'do not' negative imperative governing the visible ⲣϩⲧⲉ '(do not) fear'; ⲁⲣⲁϩ ⲙ̄ⲙⲉ closes a previous sentence with 'upon him truly.'

[85] l. 49 ⲧⲁⲣ; editor; Editor's restoration of ⲧⲁⲣ- continuing into ⲁⲭⲏ (line 5) = ⲧⲁⲣⲁⲭⲏ 'tarachē, disturbance.'

[86] l. 51 ⲁϩ; editor; Editor's restoration completing ⲁⲣⲁϩ 'upon him' — standard preposition with 3sg.m suffix.

[87] l. 52 ⲡⲱ; pipeline restoration, confidence: low; 4-char gap with ⲛ trace before next sentence; possibly continuing 'in the place [of disturbance/...]'; speculative.

[88] l. 53 ⲛ̄ⲱⲁⲣⲡ̄ ⲍⲓⲧⲛ̄ ⲛⲉϩⲍⲱⲁ; editor; Editor's restoration spanning line break; restores cosmological inventory: 'in the place [...] first, through his ζῶα and his stars.' ⲍⲱⲁⲟⲛ = Greek ζῷον.

[89] l. 53 ⲡⲉ; pipeline restoration, confidence: low; 3-char gap after ⲉⲧ-; possibly relative continuation but not strongly fixed.

[90] l. 55 ⲧ; editor; Editor's single-letter restoration of definite article ⲧ before ⲉⲡⲓⲑⲩⲙⲓⲁ — yields ⲍⲛ̄ ⲧⲉⲡⲓⲑⲩⲙⲓⲁ 'in the desire.'

[91] l. 56 ⲩ; editor; Editor's single-letter restoration completing ⲛⲟⲩ- 'their' (3pl possessive) before ⲛⲁⲛⲟⲩ on next line.

[94] l. 59 ⲣⲁϩ — “him”; pipeline restoration, confidence: low; 3-char gap completing 'they shall encounter [him]'; ⲁⲣⲁϩ 'unto him' (with truncation) fits the body's 3sg.m subject.

[96] l. 62 ⲧⲉ ⲧ; editor; Editor's restoration of ⲛ̄ⲧⲉ ⲧ- (genitive + article) before ⲉⲡⲓⲑⲩⲙⲓⲁ; with visible ⲉ at line end yields ⲛ̄ⲧⲉ ⲧⲉⲡⲓⲑⲩⲙⲓⲁ 'of the desire.'

[97] l. 66 ⲧⲏⲍ; editor; Editor's restoration; ⲉⲩⲧⲏⲍ = ⲉⲩⲧⲱⲍ 'being mingled' — fits the immediately following 'with the foods.' Same root as ⲧⲱⲍ (line 15).

[98] l. 70 ⲡⲥⲁⲡ; pipeline restoration, confidence: low; 4-char gap after 'thou art habitually disturbed'; ⲡⲥⲁⲡ 'the time (when)' frames the next clause as elsewhere in this chapter.

[99] l. 71 ⲡⲉⲓ; pipeline restoration, confidence: moderate; 4-char gap before ⲟ ⲛⲉⲩ '(this) hour'; demonstrative ⲡⲉⲓⲟ 'this' fits.

[101] l. 71 ⲁⲛ; editor; Editor's restoration completing ⲛ̄ⲛⲁⲛⲟⲩ 'the good things'; cf. line 11.

[102] l. 71 trace: .

[104] l. 74 ⲱϩ ⲉ; editor; Editor's restoration spanning line break: ⲍⲱ + ⲱϩ = ⲍⲱⲱϩ 'likewise' (Lyc reflexive); + ⲉ begins ⲉⲱⲁⲕⲟⲛ 'when also.'

[106] l. 75 ⲉⲥⲡⲉ — “it being”; pipeline restoration, confidence: low; 4-char gap before 'multiplying indeed'; circumstantial ⲉⲥⲡⲉ or relative — speculative.

[107] l. 75 ⲉ ⲡ; editor; Editor's restoration of ⲉⲣⲉ ⲡ- (circumstantial + article) introducing the next clause about the Error.

Rest in the Luminaries; the Paths Up and Down; the Cross of Light

Elaboration

Where the soul finds rest, the structural map of her options, and what is bound to the cross. T82 — the soul in trial, having stood through her appointed days, finds no resting-gate among the powers of heaven and earth (her defilers); only the Lord, as illumining wisdom and that wisdom received in her natural mind, opens for her — and at the end the Land of Light itself becomes the final receiver of those luminaries. T83 — the four ways that rise (chosen, reckoned to the light, ascending to life) and the eight ways that descend into corruption (lawlessness, killing, wounding word, blasphemy and their kindred); the structural map of the soul's options. T84 — why the natural's elements, taken into the body and bound to the Cross of Light, are stripped of their defiled garments in graded cascade until they stand fast in the New Man — or, in a soul still claiming, fall to transmigration with sentencing.

Teaching 82

The soul in trial finds rest only in the Lord's illumining truth, and at last in his inmost dwelling

According to the manner of the living ⌈soul⌉ , which has stood up in an agreement of the days; for she desires to ⌈go⌉ upward, and it is fitting for her to come unto the house of her men. But she ⌈knows and⌉ perceives that she has no gate open there in any of the powers of all of heaven and the earth. For they are her defilers that ⌈defile⌉ her in every place. So she has no gate there open except unto the sun and the moon alone, the luminaries of the heavens. They are ⌈and⌉ they become for her a place of rest, and they become for her a gate open ⌈in⌉ the going-forth, that they may come forth out from them unto the country of the house of ⌈her⌉ men. Now further, unto the other luminaries of the heavens she has no place of rest there in any of all the powers of heaven, except unto the ⌈land⌉ of light, that which is theirs indeed forever.

ⲧⲍⲉ ⲅⲁⲣ ⲉⲧⲟⲩⲥⲱⲧⲕ ⲛ̄ⲧⲯⲩⲭⲏ ⲉⲧⲁⲛⲍ̄ ⲁⲃⲁⲗ ⲛⲑⲗⲓⲯⲓⲥ ⲧⲏⲣⲥ ⲉⲩⲉⲓⲣⲉ ⲛⲉⲥ ⲛ̄ⲟⲩⲙ̄ⲧⲁⲛ ⲉⲩⲟⲩⲁⲛⲉⲥ ⲛ̄ⲣⲟ ⲉⲩⲟⲩⲏⲛ ⲁⲧⲡⲏⲓ [ⲛ][9] ⲛⲉⲥⲣⲱⲙⲉ

Just so for, in the manner in which they choose forth the living soul out of all affliction, making for her a rest, manifesting for her an open gate unto the house of her men:

ⲧⲍⲉ ⲍⲱⲕ ⲁⲛ ⲧⲉ ⲧⲉⲓ ⲉⲧⲉⲣⲉ ⲡⲧⲕⲁⲍ ⲙⲡⲟⲩⲁⲓ ⲛⲉ ⲛⲁⲱⲱⲡⲉ ⲛ̄ⲍⲩⲡⲟⲗⲟⲭⲉⲩⲥ ⲛⲍⲁⲏ ⲛⲙⲫⲱⲥⲧⲏⲣ ⲛ[ⲙ̄][10] ⲡⲧⲏⲩⲉ ⲛⲥⲉⲙ̄ⲧⲁⲛ ⲙ̄ⲙⲁⲩ ⲛ̄ⲍⲏⲧⲕ ⲛ̄ⲥⲉⲣ̄ⲣⲟ ⲛⲍⲏⲧⲕ [ⲱⲁ][11] ⲁⲛⲏⲍⲉ thus also is it likewise that the land of light shall become a final receiver for the luminaries of ⌈the⌉ heavens, and they shall rest themselves in it, and they shall reign in it ⌈for⌉ ever.

SPIRITUAL READING

When the living soul has stood through her appointed days and longs to rise homeward — to come back into the house of her own kindred — she discovers that none of the powers of the natural mind, neither the heights of it nor its outermost ground, will open to her. They have been her defilers; in every place where she has been claimed and turned in upon herself, they have wounded her. So no gate stands open for her there. Not one of the natural states, taken in itself, can give her passage out of her affliction.

Only the Lord, as illumining wisdom and as that wisdom received in her natural mind, opens for her. There he is her place of rest, and there alone the gate stands open. Through that opening she comes forth out of the states that have bound her, and is set on the way toward the country where her own belong. The other powers offer her no rest; only the Lord, shining as truth in the rational and as truth taken into the natural, gives her a resting-place — the place that is properly his and hers, beyond all turning.

And just as the Lord, in this present work, chooses out the living soul from every affliction, making her a rest and revealing for her an open gate toward home, so likewise at the end the inmost state where the Lord dwells becomes her final receiver. The illumining principles by which she has been raised come to rest in that inmost themselves, and she comes to reign there with them, in conjunction, forever.

SPIRITUAL READING

Through the complete circuit of states the soul passes through in its natural life, twelve ways open before it. Four of them are the ways of regeneration: chosen, reckoned among what is the Lord's, ascending toward life. By these the truth received within the soul is lifted up to its height, going forth out of the natural and being raised inward into conjunction. The doctrinal vessels that carry truth across the natural waters travel by these ways, and along them falsity is itself withdrawn — taken up, transmuted, and passed over into another condition where it can no longer hold the rational down.

The other eight ways are the ways of corruption. They draw the soul downward into the lowest state of the natural mind, where self-love has its root. They are the courses falsity takes when the self organizes the rational on its own terms, and they all run through the outer life of the flesh.

Hear what works through them. The first is lawlessness — the soul living as if no order from the Lord bound it, the natural mind multiplied in every form of disordered appetite. The second is the killing in every body: the act by which one love consumes another, the self destroying what does not serve it. The third is the wounding word — speech that strikes at the soul stretched in its purification, that injures the very work by which the rational is being raised, that strikes against truth as it suffers in the body of every soul still being made. And alongside these run the further ways of falsity: the speech that mocks what is holy, that derides the principles of the Lord as he goes forth toward the soul.

These are the eight downward courses. The four upward ways carry the soul into life; the eight downward ways pour out into the lowest state, where what cannot be raised is finally laid down.

SPIRITUAL READING

The four elemental faculties of the natural mind have been with the soul from the beginning; they are present in those who are holy, in those who are alive, and in the luminous states of the rational. Yet the brethren who learned what happened in the soul's first contest understood this: falsity from evil went inward together with these faculties, and the darkness of selfhood had mingled itself with them.

When these faculties come inward into the body — that is, when the rational accommodates itself into its outermost form — they leave behind in the flesh the defiled garments they had been wearing. But the garments stripped off do not simply vanish. They reveal themselves, and as they come uncovered they become a danger to the body that has just received the cleansed faculty.

There is an order in this uncovering. Beneath the self-binding of selfhood lies wrath; beneath the wrath, the very flow by which one self-loving state strips itself bare to give way to the next, in which the soul's deliberations strip themselves out of themselves: this is desire. Beneath the desire is bitterness, the falsity that should have nourished now afflicting; beneath the bitterness, hatred. When the light then strips these from the soul, what stands beneath is the flesh itself; and beneath the flesh, gloom, the falsity that obscures perception; and beneath the gloom, severity, the rational's hardness against itself. The strippings that perception itself performs lay bare the winds of shame, the disordered movements of thought when self-love sees its own nakedness. Beneath those, further still, lies the seat of the eightfold ways of corruption; and at the floor of the whole sequence stands the full twelvefold uncovering by which the natural mind is laid open.

This is the work the four elemental faculties perform, gathered inward in the proper ordering of the soul's nourishment. When they come into a body, they are refined, purified, and made to stand fast in the living likeness which is the New Man. There they are made alive; they receive into themselves the Lord's ordering of the rational; they are purified within that likeness; they come forth chosen and holy; and they reach their first rest, ascending to the inmost country where what is alive in the Lord dwells.

But where these same faculties enter a soul that goes on claiming what flows through it, they do not lay off their defilements. They multiply within it, and the soul sins through the very faculties that were given for its life. Such a state does not come to rest. Its end is the transfer of its condition into another substrate, under the Lord's discriminating judgment, until at last the recognition can be made.

[3] l. 54 ⲗⲱⲭⲥ̄ — “defile”; pipeline restoration, confidence: moderate; The relative clause ⲛⲉⲥⲣⲉϩⲗⲱⲭⲥ̄ ⲉⲧ-{verb}-ⲙⲙⲁⲥ requires the cognate verb stem of the agent-noun ⲣⲉϩⲗⲱⲭⲥ̄ 'defiler' (Lycopolitan equivalent of ⲗⲱⲃϣ). The verb stem ⲗⲱⲭⲥ̄ 'defile' fits the est. 3-character span (overstroke not counted) and matches the agent-noun morphology already present.

[5] l. 56 ⲁⲩⲱ — “and”; pipeline restoration, confidence: moderate; After ⲛⲉ closing the prior clause ('they are [the luminaries of the heavens]'), a coordinating connective is needed to introduce the new clause ⲥⲉϣⲱⲡⲉ ⲛⲉⲥ ⲙ̄ⲙⲁⲛⲙⲧⲁⲛ. ⲁⲩⲱ 'and' is the standard Lycopolitan conjunction at exactly 3 characters; matches the rhythm of parallel passages.

[6] l. 57 ⲍⲛ — “in”; editor; Editor restoration; ⲍⲛ̄ ⲧⲟⲓⲛⲉⲓ ⲁⲃⲁⲗ 'in the going-forth' completes the spatial-modal phrase governing the gate-imagery.

[8] l. 59 ⲍ — “land”; editor; Editor restoration; ⲡⲕⲁⲍ ⲙⲡⲟⲩⲁⲓⲛⲉ 'the land of light' completes from l.21-22.

[9] l. 63 ⲛ; editor; Editor restoration; ⲁⲧⲡⲏⲓ ⲛ̄ⲛⲉⲥⲣⲱⲙⲉ 'unto the house of her men' standard formula (cf. l.12, l.18-19).

[11] l. 67 ϣⲁ — “for”; editor; Editor restoration; ϣⲁⲁⲛⲏⲍⲉ 'forever' is the standard doxological terminus completing l.27.

[12] l. 11 ⲁⲍⲣ — “upward”; editor; initial ⲁⲍⲣ- of ⲁⲍⲣⲏⲓ 'upward'; fits the upward rescue of light-particles to the ships

[13] l. 12 ⲁⲛⲉ — “to the”; editor; directional ⲁ- + article ⲛⲉ before ϫⲏⲩ 'ships' = ⲁⲛⲉϫⲏⲩ 'unto the ships' (cf. accumulated ⲛⲉϫⲏⲩ 'the ships')

[14] l. 21 ⲣⲁϩⲧ̄ — “smites”; pipeline restoration, confidence: low; 4-char verb of striking governing ⲙ̄ⲡⲥⲧⲁⲩⲣⲟⲥ ⲙ̄ⲡⲟⲩⲁⲓⲛⲉ 'the cross of the Light'. ⲣⲁϩⲧ̄ 'smite' is the least-marked Coptic verb fitting the stated semantic and length; the wounding word 'smites' the cross of the Light (the rational suffering as it is purified) and every body.

[15] l. 22 ⲥⲉⲡⲉ — “remainder”; editor; editor restoration of -ⲉⲡⲉ; ⲥⲉⲡⲉ = remainder/residue (cf. accumulated ⲥⲉⲧⲧⲉ 'remainder')

[17] l. 29 ⲟ̄ — “they bring”; editor; Single-character restoration. With ⲛ̄ⲧⲟⲩ (3pl object suffix) yields ⲟⲛ̄ⲧⲟⲩ 'they bring them' (Lyc. for ⲉⲓⲛⲉ; cf. glossary entry ⲟⲛ̄ⲧ=). Habitual sense fits the iterative description.

[18] l. 30 ⲉⲧ — “those who”; editor; Relative marker ⲉⲧ- restored from context — the relative ⲉⲧⲟⲩⲛⲏⲩ later in the line confirms the antecedent.

[19] l. 32 ⲍ — “in”; editor; Restoration of ⲍ to give ⲍⲛ̄ 'in' (Lyc. for ϩⲛ̄); standard locative preposition introducing 'their living icon.'

[20] l. 33 ϣⲁⲛⲏ — “forever”; pipeline restoration, confidence: low; 4 chars before visible ϩ; ϣⲁⲛⲏϩ 'forever/until eternity' would link 'they live' (end of previous line) with 'and they receive the Mind of Light'. Weakly constrained on dialect form (Lyc. usually ϣⲁⲉⲛⲉⲍ).

[21] l. 39 ⲧⲭⲱⲣⲁ ⲛ̄ — “the country”; pipeline restoration, confidence: moderate; 8 chars; structural antithesis to the immediately preceding 'ⲧⲭⲱⲣⲁ ⲛ̄ⲛⲉⲧⲁⲛⲍ̄' ('country of the Living Ones'). Here 'country of sinners' as the negative destination. Parallel construction strongly motivates the same noun.

[22] l. 40 trace: ⲥⲟ

[23] l. 41 ⲅ; editor; Single letter ⲅ restored to complete ⲙⲉⲧⲁⲗⲅⲙⲟⲥ (= Greek μετάγγισμός 'decanting/transmigration') begun on previous line.

The Cloud, the Pure Soul, the Three Births

Elaboration

What states bear influx, what soul stands free, and what modes the natural takes. T85 — the three states of perception that bear influx (rising from love, from natural truth, from thought), with the self's claim stripped from each: bearings up to the air of the midst over against the divine purity, the falling rain or hail or wind, and the fourth state from the conjoined air. T86 — the pure soul as a second ploughed field set within the entire Zone of the upper place, tilled from above by the two great Luminaries, drawn upward by likeness. T87 — the three modes by which the natural is brought forth (by conjunction, by failed productions, by self-molding alone), and the two paths to holiness: the virgin (untouched) and the continent (claimed-and-returned).

What is a cloud?

they habitually break her forth, they themselves, from a place — and they come up upon this great land with the ⌈winds⌉, and they are manifested forth, and she is seen in the air of the midst. The cloud, indeed, which habitually comes up forth from the fire — to the heaven, over against the likeness of the Virgin of ⌈Light⌉, which she habitually manifests him forth to her — this is the sign of the watching, which exists in the fruits, [. . . .] his recompense [. . . .] And they are habitually purified within her, against [ca. 13] the light, which she habitually manifests him [ca. 12] ⌈But⌉ the archons strip the fruits and they peer forth and they bow down. But they are habitually sent at the feet of the angels at their hour, that they may strike them, since they know that they never do any good; in every place where they shall strike upon, they make for him a death and a destruction. The manner in which the angels shall stand at their feet and come, beyond striking them upon, they gather under their command before them and they go in to where they shall reach upon, and they don themselves there in the manner of a thief — pursuing him who flees, swift more than h, running after him to overtake him. Now those archons th there, who are released forth from the cloud — they don themselves with what they shall reach upon. [. . . . . .] into to [. . . .] [.] her foot, which they have not [. . .] [. . .] [. . . .] shall come to be into anything there, whether it be a tree, which they have opened the way upon, whether they be cattle, whether they be men, in short, every place where they shall don themselves there, they burn them and destroy them in the fire of their body — those archons are the sons s of fire, those whom they strip out of the fire.

But the cloud itself, which is conveyed upward forth from the place, and they come up to the upper place against the Virgin of Light — the form is that of the thunders and the lightnings which habitually come to be in the air in sundry likenesses, and they hear [. . . . .]. There are also times when those archons reckoned unto them, who exist in the cloud also for a moment, and they hasten into ⌈a cloud⌉ there, and they overtake by her hand, and they leave her ⌈behind. They themselves⌉, this is so: that every place where they shall reach, they make a frost and a hail and a snow [. . .] of the seed-fruits and of the fruits and of the crops, and they ⌈in⌉ every place also where they shall reach, they also send (them) up upon the ⌈angels⌉ which they strike, while my members flight and dispersal, to reckon them, they habitually declare the destruction the cloud also, which shall be raised upward forth from the wind, coming up to the air of the midst against the likeness of the Virgin, which habitually reveals herself forth — this is the sign: the gloom of wind, which they habitually breathe forth in vehemence.

In those winds, namely, and the gusts, life happens — purification within her. The archons too, who shall be released — the cloud and the wind — and they come down forth from her, being whole, in their icon. All the rivers and the seas which they shall reach and arrive at — they habitually make waves within them and reach and arrive at — they habitually make waves within them, and they wake [. . . . .] and they ⌈break⌉ their ships, and they declare their destruction [. . . . .] [. .] and they reckon them and they bring them ⌈down⌉ into wandering.

The cloud also of the Light, in the hour they shall ⌈be released⌉ be released from her [. . . . . .] the [. .] of the [. . .] [. . . . . .] the Virgin habitually reveals — her sign also [. . .] her sign indeed is this: that one habitually finds her gathered in stillness and quietness. Life happens within her — chosen in stillness and quietness. Of archons too who shall be released from her, [. . . . . .] also [. .] who shall come forth, [. .], they habitually leave [. . . .], and they bear a [. . .] within him [ca. 17] of the ⌈messengers⌉ they reckon them.

The cloud also which habitually departs upward, forth from the air which is joined, and they come to the lower side against the icon of the Virgin — her sign is this: that [. . . . . .] purification within him in that there are times when they (habitually) send angels to them in the becoming of archons, at this hour in which the archons ⌈flee⌉ [. .], that the angels are running after them, giving fear to them, [. . .] ⌈those whom they entrust⌉ into their hand of the commandments. But those archons, those (very ones), they habitually release themselves and bear ⌈the tree⌉ together with the flesh, and they swallow them in the begetting [. . .] ⌈of the⌉ tree and that of the flesh; the angels habitually set their eyes upon them, watching over them, until the hour in which those archons shall strip themselves of the tree and the flesh and go up to the upper place. They habitually gather again [ca. 12] the upper place, and they pour them forth out of [ca. 16] (standing) on their feet in their first forms and in their icons which were within them from the beginning they take the light from them, who have drawn back behind in them. But they themselves shall be cast down to the seven paths which are outside, those of the great sea, the place to which they have cast the abortions to it, when they fall back to their midst, ⌈and they come⌉ and they take the light that is in them.

What is a state of perception that bears influx? It rises in the soul from below and shows itself in the middle air of the rational, where it stands over against the divine purity by which the Lord is received without distortion. Whatever it carries up with it appears there, and is seen for what it is.

There are three such states, each rising from a different source in the natural, and each bearing with it the self's claim in a different form.

The first rises from love. When self-love kindles in the natural, it is borne aloft as a state of perception over against pure receivability. The forms of self-claiming carried up in it strip themselves of that state and clothe themselves with whatever they fall upon — a perception, an affection, a person — and burn through it, leaving destruction in the very body of what they have entered. They never produce any good; wherever they touch they consume. These are the self's particular forms borne up in the fire of love-turned-on-itself, and at the appointed hour the Lord's discriminating operations stand at their feet and strike them down.

The second rises from truth-in-the-natural. When natural truth is stirred and lifted, its sign is thunder and lightning — sudden flashings in the air of perception that take many shapes and are heard within. The self's forms borne up here, when released, fall as frost and hail and snow upon what was growing in the soul: upon interior seeds, upon the works that were issuing from them, upon the harvest the soul was bringing forth. Wherever they reach, they kill what was meant to live, and the soul's own faculties feel the wound. By this the destruction is made known.

The third rises from thought. Its sign is the winds breathed out in vehemence — the moving register of perception turned violent. Yet within this state too, when ordered, life happens; purification takes place inside it. But the self's forms released through it descend upon the rivers and the seas of natural perception and stir up waves; they wreck the doctrinal vessels that were carrying truth across, declare destruction to those aboard, and hand them over to wandering.

There is also a state of perception that comes from the air which has been joined — an air conjoined above with what is higher — and this descends toward the lower side over against the same divine purity. Its sign is this: it is found gathered in stillness and quietness. Life happens within it; purification happens within it, in stillness and quietness. The self's forms released from this state come down whole, bearing within themselves what they did not bear before. Wherever they go, they declare an unutterable thing.

The Lord's discriminating operations meet them and receive them into their midst in a stripping bare. Place by place the self leaves what it had clothed itself in, until it reaches the very begetting of perception and flesh — the natural's generative ground — where it is swallowed up. But this swallowing is not done by the self's own forms; rather, the Lord's discriminating operations, coming under the appearance of the very claims they have come to undo, frighten the self into surrender by running after it and pressing the commandments into its hand. So the self releases itself, takes on the form of perception and flesh, and is swallowed in that begetting. The Lord's operations keep watch over it until the hour comes when it strips off perception and flesh and goes up.

Then they are gathered again in the upper place and poured out, standing on their feet in the first forms that were within them from the beginning. The light is taken from those that had drawn back; what is the Lord's is recognized and lifted up to the seven reservoirs outside the great mass of natural perception, down to the bearing-up principle that holds the natural in being. What cannot be raised is cast down where the failed productions of the self lie, and the light that was in them is taken from them and carried up with the rest.

This is how perception bears influx, how the self clothes itself in what it claims, and how, in stillness and through purification, the Lord's discriminating operations come to it under its own appearance, frighten it into laying off, and gather what is his back into his order.

The second ploughed-field is the living soul, the ⌈holy⌉ one, being established within the whole Zone of the upper place and the ⌈lower⌉ place. As for farmers — those exalted over her are these two great ⌈Luminaries⌉ which stand in the heavens, being exalted, doing the farmer's work over her, so that toward the likeness they may move toward her, ⌈drawing⌉ upward, and they may come unto the Height, and they may go ⌈unto⌉ the upper place ⌈forth⌉, in every place where she is within them; and they reckon toward them.

SPIRITUAL READING

When the soul has been purified and stands in its proper order, it occupies the upper reach of the natural mind — the whole circuit in which the natural operates is now set above, no longer dragged down by what was claimed. The soul in this condition is a field made ready: ground that has been broken and turned, the substrate of the rational prepared to receive seed.

Over this ground two exalted operations of the Lord work as farmers. They stand high, in the heights of the rational, and from there they till the soul that lies open beneath them. What they do, they do from above; they are not within the field but over it, working it by influx that comes down from a higher degree.

Their tilling has one purpose: that the soul may move toward them by likeness. They draw her upward by the correspondence between what they are and what she is becoming. The soul, recognizing in them the form of what flows through her, is lifted along the line of that recognition. She does not climb by her own striving; she rises because what is above her has the likeness of what she truly is, and that likeness draws her.

So she comes up to the Height. The upper place opens to her, and she goes forth into it. And wherever the soul is, in whatever state, these operations reach down to find her there and reckon her into their working — there is no place within the natural mind where the Lord's tilling from above does not extend, and no condition of the soul that is overlooked.

What is the virgin whom they name 'virgin,' or the one whom they call 'continent' — what is it? Or, when they call the virgin 'virgin' — to what sign? Or to the contitinent, whom they name with this name, naming him 'continent' — to what sign?" whom they call 'virgin' is set unto the mystery of the Aeons of the Greatness; they have called him 'virg-' -gin unto the sign of the entire Light, which has not tasted of the death, neither has it come to the war of the Enemy. But that which they call 'continent' exists for the mystery of the Light which came and was mingled with the Darkness, and was defiled in the bodies ⌜of the path⌝ then he went up unto the Light, they called him 'continent.' Once again, the holy virgins, those who ⌜these⌝ habitually come forth against the enemy [. . . . . .] have not tasted of death, neither have they come to the war of the Enemy. He whom they also call 'continent one' is the light that mingled with the Darkness, was chosen, came out from all the creatures, stood firm in continence. They called him 'continent one' for this reason: he received the taste of desire, but afterwards purified himself from her, and became a holy one. Once again, he whom they called 'virgin,' is the light that was chosen in the icon of the Ambassador, went up, reached up to the light, stood firm in the icon of the gods. He whom they call also 'continent one' is the remainder of the light that remained behind in him who was purified — that which goes upward and that which goes downward in the metangismos. There is then a portion in him that habitually falls and reaches the molding of the flesh of the men. That one also is habitually chosen in the flesh, and ⌜in him is⌝ the hope, becomes a holy one, and they name him 'continent one.' Once again, he whom they call 'virgin' is the Mind of Light, who habitually comes and bears the icons of the elect. And he whom they also call 'continent one' is the New Man who is habitually chosen out of the Old Man, and purifies himself, and strips himself naked of the Sin that is joined with him, and becomes a continent one. And he whom they also call 'virgin' in the flesh is a man who has not joined himself to a woman, neither has defiled himself in intercourse. And he whom they they also call 'continent one' is the man who has a wife there in the world, but afterwards he purifies himself from her and leaves her behind. For this reason he becomes a continent is a true somatic dragon a fore-rank of head pneumatic dragon ever is the dragon. The teaching is [ca. 19] of the flesh of [. . .]

SPIRITUAL READING

There are three modes by which the natural mind brings forth what stands in it as flesh. Some of what it produces comes from the conjunction of two; some comes from failed productions of itself, what self-love throws up that cannot live on its own terms; and some molds itself alone, sprouting from the ground of the natural without any other source than the soil. All the affections you see in yourself, and the perceptions and works that grow from them, exist under these three modes; their nourishment likewise is given in three modes corresponding to how they came to be.

Look at how perception grows in the natural mind, and you will see that self-love places itself at different depths within these growths. When it sets itself at the root of a perception, that perception, even when cut down, will sprout again from where the root remains, and bear its bitter fruit anew. When it sets itself in the branches, the perception is propagated by cuttings: take one off, lay it in the ground, and the same perception stands up again. And when it sets itself in the very body and seed of the perception, then growth comes only by sowing, and the inner principle carries the claim forward into whatever new ground it falls. These are the three placements by which the self establishes its hold on what the natural produces — and there are perceptions whose root, when cut, yields nothing further, because nothing of the claim was lodged there to renew them. So the kind of perception, and the place where self-love has lodged within it, together determine how it must be dealt with if it is to be cleared.

Now, what is the difference between the soul that is called virgin and the soul that is called continent? Why these two names, and to what do they point?

The one called virgin names what has never entered the mingling at all. It is the light that never came down into the contest, never tasted death, never met the war with selfhood. It stands wholly within itself, untouched, the entire light kept whole. The one called continent names what did enter the mingling — what came down, was joined with darkness, was defiled within bodies, and afterwards was chosen out, rose, and stood firm again in the icon of the divine. Both are holy; but the holiness of the virgin is the holiness of what was never claimed, while the holiness of the continent is the holiness of what was claimed and then laid off.

This same distinction works at every level of the soul. In the inner ordering of the rational, the virgin is the Light Mind bearing within itself the unstained image of the elect, the form that has never fallen out of true reception. The continent, at this same level, is the New Man chosen out of the Old Man — the regenerated rational, who has stripped himself naked of the self-appropriation that was joined to him, purified what had been mingled, and so come into holiness through the labor of laying off. And in the outer life, the virgin is one who has kept his outermost love unmingled with what would defile it, never having entered that joining at all; the continent is one who entered, who lived within the conditions of the natural, and who afterwards withdrew from what he had taken and let it go, becoming holy not by having been spared the contest but by having passed through it cleanly.

So the two names mark two ways the soul comes to its proper state: the way of what was never given over, and the way of what was given over and then reclaimed for its source. The first path is the rarer; the second is the path of regeneration itself, by which the light that fell into mingling is chosen out, purified, raised up, and stood again in the form it was meant to bear. What remains in the natural after such purification — the residue of the same light still drawn down through further generations — is again chosen, again purified, again raised, until the whole has been brought through.

[The chapter closes with a teaching identifying the flesh, when claimed, as the self in its most twisted bodily form — the natural mind organized as serpent — over against the spiritual; the surviving lines are too fragmentary for confident translation beyond this.]

APPARATUS

[1] l. 10 ⲁⲁ; editor; Standard restoration of the ⲁⲃⲁⲗ 'forth' directional formant.

[2] l. 11 ⲧⲏⲩ — “winds”; pipeline restoration, confidence: moderate; 3 chars after partial ⲛ̄: ⲛ̄ⲧⲏⲩ 'with the winds.' The cloud rising from the earth bears wind/thought (one of the three causes named below).

[3] l. 13 ⲁ; editor; Restoration of directional ⲁ- 'to' before ⲧⲡⲉ 'the heaven' on next line.

[4] l. 14 ⲓⲛⲉ — “Light”; editor; Standard Manichaean title ⲧⲡⲁⲣⲑⲉⲛⲟⲥ ⲙ̄ⲡⲟⲩⲁⲓⲛⲉ 'the Virgin of Light' confirmed in glossary.

[5] l. 14 ⲉ; editor; Restoration of ⲉ to complete the relative ⲉⲧⲉ continuing onto next line.

[6] l. 15 ⲣⲍ ⲉⲧ; editor; Restoration completes ⲛⲓⲱⲣⲍ 'the gazing' (cf. ⲣⲉϩⲓ̈ⲱⲣⲍ 'watcher' in glossary) and the relative ⲉⲧ- introducing the next clause.

[7] l. 16 ⲧⲉ ⲡ; pipeline restoration, confidence: low; 4 chars likely 'ⲉⲧⲉ ⲡ-' with following 'his recompense.' Reconstruction tentative.

[8] l. 16 ⲧ; editor; Restoration of ⲧ to give ⲧⲉϩⲱⲃⲓⲱ 'his recompense' (cf. ⲧⲱⲃⲓⲱ in glossary).

[9] l. 16 trace: ⲱ

[10] l. 19 ⲁⲉ — “But”; pipeline restoration, confidence: low; Particle 'but/and' (ⲁⲉ = ⲁⲉ) opening the new clause about archons; partial ⲉ visible.

[11] l. 19 ⲁⲗ; editor; ϯ-ⲃⲁⲗ ⲁⲃⲁⲗ idiom 'peer/go forth' (cf. accumulated vocabulary); continues to ⲁⲃⲁⲗ at start of line 2

[12] l. 20 ⲛⲓ; editor; definite article ⲛⲓ- continuing to ⲁⲅⲅⲉⲗⲟⲥ at start of line 3

[13] l. 21 ⲛⲉ; editor; completing verb ⲥⲉⲥⲁⲩⲛⲉ 'they know'

[14] l. 22 ⲟⲙ ⲁ; editor; completing reduplicated ⲟⲁⲙⲟⲙ + directional ⲁⲣⲁϩ at start of line 5

[16] l. 24 ⲟⲩ ⲁ; pipeline restoration, confidence: moderate; Completes ⲟⲁⲡⲟⲩ 'strike them' + directional ⲁ- continuing into ⲣⲁϩ.

[17] l. 25 ⲛ ⲁ; editor; ⲁⲍⲟⲩⲛ ⲁ- 'inward to' continuing into line 8

[18] l. 26 ⲩ; editor; completing ⲛⲟⲩⲗⲏⲥⲧⲏⲥ 'a thief' (Greek λῃστής); cf. accumulated vocabulary

[19] l. 27 ⲁϩ; editor; ⲡⲁⲣⲁⲁⲣⲁϩ 'more than him' (cf. line 8)

[20] l. 29 ⲙ; editor; definite article ⲙ̄- with ⲡⲉⲧ- relative continuing to line 12

[21] l. 32 ϣⲏ; editor; completing ⲟⲩϣⲏⲛ 'a tree' — first member of the 'whether tree, whether cattle, whether men' triad in lines 14-15

[22] l. 32 ⲡⲉⲧ; editor; relative perfect ⲡⲉⲧⲁⲩ- 'which they have-' completing into ⲁⲩⲟⲛⲙⲁⲓⲧ 'opened the way' continuing to line 15

[23] l. 35 ⲛ; editor; completing ⲛϣⲏⲣⲉ 'sons' continuing into line 18

[24] l. 37 ⲧ; editor; feminine definite article opening 'the cloud'

[25] l. 40 ⲧ; editor; completing ⲥⲱⲧⲙ̄ 'hear'

[26] l. 42 ⲁⲣ; editor; completing ⲁⲣⲁⲩ 'unto them' (preposition + 3pl suffix) following ⲉⲧⲏⲡ 'reckoned' from line 23

[27] l. 43 ⲁⲩⲕⲗⲟⲟⲗ — “a cloud”; editor; editor's restoration; the cloud-context continues from preceding lines

[28] l. 44 ⲥⲱⲩ ⲛⲧⲁⲩ — “behind. They themselves”; editor; ⲛⲥⲱⲩ 'after them' completing the previous clause's 'leave behind'; ⲛⲧⲁⲩ 'they' opening the new emphatic clause about the archons themselves

[29] l. 44 ⲩⲛ; editor; completing future relative ⲉⲧⲟⲩⲛⲁ- 'where they shall' continuing to line 27

[30] l. 45 ⲧⲉⲍⲁϩ; editor; ⲧⲉⲍⲁϩ 'reach' — formulaic phrase ⲙⲁ ⲛⲓⲙ ⲉⲧⲟⲩⲛⲁⲧⲉⲍⲁϩ recurring on this page (cf. lines 26-27, 29)

[31] l. 45 ⲓⲱ; editor; completing Greek loanword ⲭⲓⲱⲛ < χιών 'snow'

[32] l. 46 ⲡⲱⲣ; pipeline restoration, confidence: low; 4 chars ending in ⲁϩ; possibly ⲡⲱⲣⲁϩ 'split, smash' affecting the seed-fruits, but uncertain.

[33] l. 47 ⲍⲛ̄ ⲙ — “in”; pipeline restoration, confidence: low; 5 chars before 'ⲁ ⲛⲓⲙ': likely ⲍⲛ̄ ⲙⲁ ⲛⲓⲙ 'in every place.'

[34] l. 47 ⲁⲛ ⲉⲧ; editor; ⲁⲛ 'also' + relative ⲉⲧ- forming standard ⲙⲁ ⲛⲓⲙ ⲁⲛ ⲉⲧ- 'every place also where' (cf. line 26)

[35] l. 48 ⲛⲓⲁⲅⲅ — “angels”; pipeline restoration, confidence: low; 5 chars completing into -ⲉⲗⲟⲥ; ⲛⲓⲁⲅⲅⲉⲗⲟⲥ 'the angels' fits the contrast with 'my members.'

[45] l. 60 ⲟⲩ; pipeline restoration, confidence: moderate; Completes ⲛⲟⲩⲧⲉⲕⲟⲩⲉ 'their destruction'; partial ⲉ at end fits.

[48] l. 63 ⲟⲩ; editor; Editor's restoration completing ⲃⲁϣⲟⲩ 'they shall be released.'

[49] l. 63 trace: ⲧⲉ

[54] l. 72 ⲁⲍⲣϩⲏ̈; editor; Editor's restoration; ϧⲉⲥⲧ ⲁⲍⲣϩⲏ̈ 'depart upward' is the standard collocation (in glossary).

[58] l. 75 ⲙⲧⲁⲛ; editor; Editor's restoration; ⲍⲛ̄ ⲟⲩⲍⲣⲁⲕ ⲙⲛ ⲟⲩⲙⲧⲁⲛ 'in stillness and rest' is the standard Manichaean collocation describing the Virgin's quietude.

[59] l. 75 ⲛⲓⲁⲣⲭⲱⲛ; editor; Editor's restoration; ⲛⲓⲁⲣⲭⲱⲛ ⲉⲧⲛⲁⲃⲁϣⲟⲩ continues into line 27 'who shall be released.'

[60] l. 76 ⲉ; editor; Editor's restoration completing ⲛⲥⲉⲉⲓ 'and they shall come.'

[62] l. 79 trace: ⲥ

[68] l. 86 ⲡⲟⲩⲁⲛⲉ — "their light"; editor; Editor restoration [ⲡⲟⲩⲁ]ⲛⲉ — cf. accumulated ⲡⲟⲩⲁⲛⲉ 'manifestation'; the angels bring forth the light from the souls

[70] l. 87 ⲉⲧⲍⲃⲁⲗ — "which are outside"; editor; Editor restoration ⲉ[ⲧⲍ-]/ⲃⲁⲗ across line break; ⲉⲧⲍⲃⲁⲗ = ⲉⲧϩⲓⲃⲟⲗ 'which is outside'

[71] l. 88 ⲡⲙⲁⲛϩⲟⲟⲣⲉ — "the place of dispersion"; editor; Editor restoration [ⲡⲙⲁⲛϩ]ⲟⲟⲣⲉ — in glossary as Manichaean cosmographic term

[73] l. 95 ϣⲁⲛⲧⲟⲩⲡⲱⲍ ⲁⲛⲕⲁⲍ ⲉⲧⲙⲡⲓⲧⲛⲉ — "they reach the lands which are below"; editor; Editor restoration [ϣⲁⲛ-]ⲧⲟⲩⲡⲱⲍ ⲁⲛⲕⲁⲍ ⲉⲧⲙⲡ]ⲧⲛⲉ across line break; ⲡⲱⲍ = ⲡⲱϩ 'reach'

[74] l. 99 ⲡⲏⲧ — "flee"; pipeline restoration, confidence: moderate; 3 chars; per the reading the archons are running/fleeing as the angels chase them.

[75] l. 101 ⲛⲉⲧⲟⲩⲧⲟⲉ — "those whom they entrust"; editor; Editor restoration [ⲛⲉⲧⲟⲩⲧⲟ]ⲉ; ⲧⲟⲉ = Lyc. ⲧⲱϩ/ⲧⲟⲉ 'hand over, entrust'

[76] l. 103 ⲙⲡⲓϣⲏⲛ — "the tree"; pipeline restoration, confidence: moderate; 6 chars; 'with the tree' parallels 'with the flesh' in same line — the tree-flesh pairing recurs.

Elaboration

Recognition deepening through structure, image, and offspring. T88 — the twelve openings of the body (seven sense-faculties above, five lower outlets below): the soul that recognizes these for what they are has already begun the contest, and to recognize the self working through them is to prevail over it. T89 — why the image of what is above appears cast downward in still water: the inversion is the form of the Call descending to the lower; and the rising face still shown downward signs the Answer ascending. T90 — how what the soul receives bears fruit at five registers (breath, voice, discharge, conjunction, somatic offspring); the soul recognizes only the last as its child, but all five are equally born from the nourishment given.

SPIRITUAL READING

The natural body, where the soul meets the world, is articulated through twelve openings: seven above and five below. The seven above are the sense-faculties set in the head — two by which the rational sees, two by which it hears, two by which it smells, and one by which it tastes and chooses among the many flavors that come in their varied likenesses. These are the gates by which perception flows inward to the mind and by which the inner state, in turn, shows itself outward.

Below these are five further openings, the lower outlets of the natural through which the self gathers in what it craves and casts out what it has used. Together the seven and the five make the full structure by which the body lives — the structural articulation of the natural, every faculty of perception and every appetite arrayed as one continuous body.

But this same body, when the soul has not yet learned to discriminate what flows through it from what it claims, is the self in its most coiled form: the natural mind organized as if it were its own source, twisting back on itself, peering out through the senses and breathing out through the lower openings, making war between the upper part and the lower, contending with itself through what it sees and what it desires. This is what the soul has called its body and made its own — the disordered natural pretending to be life.

The teaching is this: the soul that recognizes these twelve for what they are — that sees the seven gates of perception and the five lower outlets not as its own native powers but as openings through which influx and appetite pass — has already begun the contest. To recognize the self working through the senses and the body's hungers is to stand against it; to stand against it is to prevail over it. The soul that knows what its body is no longer mistakes the body's stirrings for itself, and in that knowing the self loses its claim. What had been the dragon coiled around the soul becomes simply the natural, ordered, transparent to the life that flows through it from the Lord.

SPIRITUAL READING

Consider why, when a person bends over still water, his face appears to him below, with the head turned downward and the feet uppermost. The chosen one, gazing into the natural, sees his own face manifested there — but inverted, cast in the opposite direction from how he stands. Let him look, and let his face be shown to him in this way, and let him understand.

What is being shown is this: the natural mind is set fast under correspondence, full throughout of the inward meanings it carries. That the face of a person, the form of a tree, the likeness of every living thing should appear in water turned downward gives a sign of the mystery of the Lord's Call — the divine summons that goes forth from above into the lower regions of the soul, descending to meet what has fallen, accommodating itself downward so that what is high may be received in what is low. The image is high; what receives it shows it inverted; and this inversion is itself the form by which influx is given. The Lord goes forth as the Divine Human; his summons keeps watch downward over the natural mind so that what is fallen there may have a kindred to recognize.

And when the man lifts himself up out of the water, and his face appears to him still cast downward as he rises — this signifies the corresponding mystery of the Answer, the soul's hearing rising back up from below to above, ascending toward the Father, the Divine Human, into the Lord's life-bearing principle. As the Call comes down, so the Answer goes up; the conversation is one structure with two motions. This is a spiritual mystery.

That the face of every person, every living affection, every perception bears its image hung behind it in the waters — this also belongs to the order of the natural's circuit of states: every fixed point in the soul's revolution carries inverted within it the image of what is above. Every state below is begotten as a likeness of a state above; the lower receives the form of the higher in reversed register, so that the upper may operate in the lower while remaining itself. As the higher principles are spread forth from above and cast their image downward, so the divine mystery becomes manifest from above to whatever gazes upward into the natural — an image of the upper, turned, given to the lower. Even the inner form being born in the soul, at the very moment of its begetting, comes forth bearing that image hanging behind it.

This is why the Lord's mystery is regularly disclosed in the very waters into which the soul looks downward. Behold further: the person who walks casts a shadow upon the ground at every moment. When the body rises, the shadow extends along the earth — its head pointing along the upper ground, its feet held at the lower side. This great sign signifies that the whole body of the soul has come up out of the earth, has risen out of the deep. Therefore the shadow lies cast along the ground, stretched downward even while it hangs from what stands upright above: the natural carries the trace of the elevated; the lowest bears the print of what has risen; and the regenerated soul, ascending, leaves the form of itself across the natural as the testimony that it has come up out of what is below.

104 — Concerning the food, that it habitually divides into — 104 five offspring upon the body of man 104 'This food which men gather inward in various likenesses, as they eat it: when it goes inward into the body, it habitually disperses forth into five offspring. The first offspring is this one which habitually comes forth from the man through the breathing-out, and mounts upon the mind, and it comes forth from all his members, and there is no ⌈measure⌉ to it. The second is this one which habitually comes forth from the man through the voice and the speech. The third is this which habitually pours forth from there through the power and the shame. The fourth is that which they habitually beget through the pleasure of ⌈desire⌉ in males and in females. The fifth is this one which they habitually mold and depict in the flesh, and they beget it, and it comes forth from there — which is the bodily offspring. This offspring which they beget — its fathers know it, according to his desire of heart and his his ⌈thought⌉ and his ⌈love⌉, which they seek after daily, in every season. But the other four offspring, they do not perceive them, neither are they sick at heart for them, since they are not made manifest to them.' —.

SPIRITUAL READING

What the soul takes in for its nourishment does not remain in one place. When truth and good are received into the natural mind, they disperse through the rational and bring forth five distinct offspring, each a real production from what was received.

The first comes forth as breath: it rises through the mind and issues from every faculty as the soul's continual respiration of thought. It is so close to the soul that the soul scarcely notices it leaving — there is nothing held back to it; it simply goes out.

The second comes forth as voice and articulated speech. What was received takes form as the soul's utterance, the doctrine it speaks, the truth it puts into words.

The third pours forth through power exerted and through the recognition of one's own nakedness — the soul's labor and the shame that goes with knowing one's poverty before what one has received. This too is a production from the nourishment, though the soul does not name it as such.

The fourth is begotten through the joining of love and wisdom in the soul — the inward conjunction of what is masculine and what is feminine in the rational, where delight conceives and brings forth.

The fifth is the offspring molded and given form in the outermost — the visible work, the child of action that takes shape in the flesh and stands forth as something done. This is the one the parents know. This is the one the soul desires in its heart and seeks after every day, in every season; this is the one it claims as its own and grieves over and rejoices in.

The other four are equally born from what the soul received, but the soul does not perceive them and is not troubled in heart over them, because they are not made manifest to it. The teaching is that the nourishment given goes out into all five — the breath of thought, the speech, the operation under shame, the inner conjunction, and the outer work — though the soul, claiming only the last, supposes only the last is its offspring. To recognize the four hidden productions is to begin to see how much of what one has received is already issuing from oneself unnoticed, and how little of what passes out as one's own is one's own.

APPARATUS

[1] l. 24 ϵτϵ — "namely"; pipeline restoration, confidence: low; 3-char opener at section/line start preceding ⲧⲙⲛⲧⲉϩⲧⲉ. ϵτϵ ('namely / which is') is the most natural Lycopolitan filler that preserves the feminine determination of the following article (ⲧ-) and does not collide with the demonstrative ⲧⲁϊ, which would absorb the article. Low confidence — could also be a closing copula '·' of a prior question.

[2] l. 24 ⲧⲙⲛⲧⲉϩⲧⲉ; editor; visible ⲧⲙ-...-ⲉϩⲧ-; internal restorations [ⲛⲧ] and [ϵ]; whole = ⲧⲙⲛⲧⲉϩⲧⲉ

[4] l. 25 ⲡⲁⲣⲁⲕⲱⲛ; editor; visible ⲡⲁ-; restored [ⲣⲁⲕⲱⲛ]; whole = ⲡⲁⲣⲁⲕⲱⲛ 'the dragon'

[5] l. 25 ϵⲧⲍⲓ; editor; visible ϵⲧ-; restored [ⲍⲓ]; ϵⲧⲍⲓ = Lyc. ϵⲧϩⲓ 'which are upon' (continues to L20 ϫⲛ̄)

[6] l. 26 ⲧⲁⲡϵ; editor; [ⲧⲁ]ⲡϵ; restored ⲧⲁ; whole = ⲧⲁⲡϵ 'the head'

[7] l. 26 ⲧϩ; editor; [ⲧϩ] restored at line-end; word ϵⲧϩϊⲱⲣⲯ̄ continues to next line

[8] l. 27 ϊⲱⲣⲯ; editor; [ⲣⲯ] restored at line-start; visible ϊⲱ-; whole = ϊⲱⲣⲯ̄ 'see' (qualitative of ϊⲱⲣⲯ̄), completing ϵⲧϩϊⲱⲣⲯ̄ from L20

[9] l. 27 ⲡ; editor; [ⲡ] restored; visible ⲙⲁⲛⲥⲱⲧⲙ̄; whole = ⲡⲙⲁⲛⲥⲱⲧⲙ̄ 'the place of hearing'

[10] l. 27 ⲛⲧ; editor; visible ⲛ̃ⲍ-; restored -ⲛⲧ-; word continues to L22 ⲟⲩ; whole = ⲛ̃ⲍⲛⲧⲟⲩ 'in them'

[11] l. 28 ⲟⲩ ⲡⲙⲁ; editor; [ⲟⲩ ⲡⲙⲁ] restored at line-start; ⲟⲩ completes ⲛ̃ⲍⲛⲧⲟⲩ from L21, and ⲡⲙⲁ begins ⲡⲙⲁⲛⲱⲱⲗⲙⲉ 'the place (of smelling)'

[12] l. 28 ⲗ; editor; visible ⲡⲕϵ-; restored final ⲗ; whole = ⲡⲕϵⲗ-(continues to L23 -ϵⲥ); ⲡⲕϵⲗϵⲥ 'and the tongue' (ⲕϵ- 'also/other' + ⲗϵⲥ 'tongue' = the seventh sense-organ, the tongue, continuing the enumeration eyes-ears-nostrils-tongue)

[13] l. 29 ϵⲥ; editor; [ϵⲥ] completing ⲡⲕϵⲗϵⲥ from L22

[14] l. 29 ⲟⲩϵϵⲓ ⲡϵ — "is one"; pipeline restoration, confidence: moderate; 10-char span connecting singular ⲡⲕϵⲗϵⲥ (the tongue) to the relative ϵϩⲥⲱⲧⲡ ('which chooses'). Since the eye/ear/nostril each used dual ⲥⲛϵⲩ + relative, the singular tongue requires the singular copular formula 'ⲟⲩϵϵⲓ ⲡϵ' ('it is one [which]...'). Fits ~10 chars with surrounding spacing.

[15] l. 30 ⲛⲍ; editor; [ⲛⲍ] restored; visible -ⲏⲧⲩ; whole = ⲛ̃ⲍⲏⲧⲩ 'in it'

[17] l. 31 ⲑⲏⲧⲏⲣⲓⲟⲛ; editor; visible ⲛ̃ⲁⲓⲥ-; restored [ⲑⲏⲧⲏⲣⲓⲟⲛ] (concludes on L26); whole = ⲛ̃ⲁⲓⲥⲑⲏⲧⲏⲣⲓⲟⲛ 'sense-organs'

[20] l. 33 ⲙⲛ ⲡⲣⲱⲙⲉ; pipeline restoration, confidence: high; 8-char span paralleling ⲡⲣⲱⲙⲉ ⲛ̃ⲧⲡϵ from previous line: 'ⲙⲛ ⲡⲣⲱⲙⲉ ⲙ̄ⲡⲥⲁⲛⲡⲓⲧⲛⲉ' = 'and the man of the lower side.' Symmetric upper-man / lower-man pairing structures the whole passage.

[23] l. 34 ⲙⲁ; editor; [ⲙⲁ] completes ⲡⲥⲱⲙⲁ 'the body' from L27

[24] l. 34 ⲛⲕⲓⲃⲉ — "breasts"; pipeline restoration, confidence: low; 5-char feminine-dual member of the body's seven-fold (followed by ⲥⲛⲧⲉ 'two'). ⲛ̃ⲕⲓⲃⲉ 'breasts' is feminine and pairs naturally with the next item ⲡⲧⲉⲧⲉ ⲥⲛⲉⲩ 'the two haunches' in a corporeal-articulation list. Low confidence: ⲛⲥ̀ⲓϫ 'hands' and other dual fem nouns are also possible.

[25] l. 35 left edge of fragmentary line; only ⲁⲣⲭⲱⲛ visible

[26] l. 35 right edge; word continues but is lost

[27] l. 37 ⲧⲥⲁ; editor; visible -ⲱϩⲉ; restored [ⲧⲥⲁ]; whole = ⲧⲥⲁⲱϩⲉ 'the seven-fold,' parallel to ⲧⲥⲁⲱϩⲃⲉ in L25

[28] l. 37 ⲛⲁⲡⲉ ⲉⲧⲛ; editor; [ⲛⲁⲡⲉ ⲉⲧⲛ] restored at line-end; matches the parallel formula ⲧⲥⲁⲱϩⲃⲉ ⲛ̃ⲁⲡⲉ in L25

[29] l. 38 ⲧⲡϵ; editor; ⲡϵ visible, ⲧ restored; ⲧⲡϵ 'heaven' as cosmological pole opposite ⲛⲁⲡⲓⲧⲛ̃ 'those below' confirms reading.

[30] l. 38 ⲧϵϩⲧⲉ; editor; Completes idiom ⲣⲙ̃ⲧⲉϩⲧⲉ ⲛ̃ⲁⲡⲉ 'act as foremost-of-head' (continues into line 2 ⲛ̃ⲁⲡⲉ); cf. ⲙⲛⲧⲉϩⲧⲉ in glossary.

[31] l. 39 ϫⲟ; editor; ⲟⲥ visible at start of line 3 completes ϫⲟⲟⲥ 'they have spoken' (= ϫⲟⲟⲥ).

[32] l. 40 ⲱ; editor; Single letter ⲱ restored within ⲁϫⲱⲩ = ⲉϫⲱⲟⲩ 'upon them.'

[33] l. 41 ⲡⲗⲉⲥ; editor; ⲗⲉ visible, ⲡ and ⲥ restored; standard first cave/part of dragon-of-enthumesis schema (Lyc. ⲗⲉⲥ = ⲗⲁⲥ 'tongue').

[34] l. 42 ⲡⲍⲏⲧ; editor; ⲡⲍ visible, ⲏⲧ restored; ⲡⲍⲏⲧ 'the heart' fits the third member of the body-cave schema.

[36] l. 44 ⲛϩ; editor; Continues into line 8 ⲟⲩⲱⲛⲋ: ⲛϩⲟⲩⲱⲛⲋ 'and (it) reveals' (3sg.f conjunctive).

[37] l. 45 ⲟ; editor; Single letter ⲟ restored at start of ⲟⲩⲱⲛⲋ ⲁⲃⲁⲗ 'reveal forth.'

[39] l. 46 ⲧ; editor; Continuation of ⲡⲥⲁⲛⲧⲡⲉ from line 8; this single letter ⲧ already accounted for in {10}, but kept here for the visible ⲡⲉ on this line.

[40] l. 46 ⲍⲛ; editor; Continues into line 10 ⲧⲉϩⲙⲛ̄ⲧⲉϩⲧⲉ: ⲍⲛ̄ ⲧⲉϩⲙⲛ̄ⲧⲉϩⲧⲉ 'in his foremost-rank' (Lyc. ⲍⲛ = ϩⲛ 'in').

[41] l. 47 ⲧ; editor; Single letter ⲧ at line start; the rest of ⲧⲉϩⲙⲛⲧⲉϩⲧⲉ visible.

[42] l. 47 ⲍ; editor; ⲍⲙ̄ at line end (Lyc. = ϩⲙ̄), continues into ⲡⲁⲣⲁⲕⲱⲛ on line 11.

[44] l. 50 ⲙⲁⲥ; editor; ⲁ visible, ⲙ and ⲥ restored at start of line 13; completes ⲙ̄|ⲙⲁⲥ 'her' (object pronoun, fem. = the dragon/enthumesis).

[45] l. 50 ⲑⲏⲣⲟⲩ — "all"; pipeline restoration, confidence: low; 6-char span between ⲛⲍⲏⲧⲟⲩ ('in them') and ⲉⲩⲙⲟⲩⲧⲉ ⲁ ('they shall call'). ⲑⲏⲣⲟⲩ 'all' is the most natural 6-letter intensifier modifying ⲛⲍⲏⲧⲟⲩ ('in them all'). Low confidence — could also be a temporal connective like ⲧⲟⲧⲉ.

[46] l. 50 ⲉⲩⲙⲟⲩⲧⲉ ⲁ; editor; Continues into line 14 ⲣⲁϩ to give ⲉⲩⲙⲟⲩⲧⲉ ⲁⲣⲁϩ 'they shall call to him' (introducing direct speech).

[47] l. 40 ⲩⲁⲱⲉ; editor; Editor restores ⲩⲁⲱⲉ to complete ⲉⲩⲁⲱⲉ 'they hang'; same verb appears in line 1 and line 4

[50] l. 43 ⲉⲓⲛⲉ ⲉⲥ; editor; Editor restores ⲉⲓⲛⲉ ⲉⲩ; the noun ⲟⲩⲉⲓⲛⲉ 'a likeness' followed by circumstantial ⲉⲩ-; continues to line 7 ⲕⲧⲁⲓⲧ 'turned'

[51] l. 44 ⲡⲁ; editor; Editor restores ⲡⲁ to complete ⲡⲁⲗⲟⲩ 'the child' — standard Coptic noun

[52] l. 45 ⲛⲟⲩ; editor; Editor restores ⲛⲟⲩ to complete ⲧⲉϩⲟⲩⲛⲟⲩ 'the hour' (= ⲧⲉ-ⲟⲩⲛⲟⲩ); cf. accumulated ⲛⲧⲉϩⲟⲩ form

[53] l. 47 ⲁⲃⲁ; editor; Editor restores ⲁⲃⲁ to complete ⲁⲃⲁⲗ 'forth'; standard collocation with ⲟⲩⲱⲛⲋ 'reveal'

[54] l. 48 ⲓ; editor; Editor restores ⲓ to complete ⲓⲱⲣⲙⲉ 'gaze'

[57] l. 52 unlesbar (unreadable)

[58] l. 53 ⲉ — "toward"; pipeline restoration, confidence: low; 1 char before ⲛⲧⲡⲉ 'of heaven'; likely the final letter of a noun like ⲧⲁⲡⲉ 'head' (the head pointing to heaven, parallel to feet on earth).

[59] l. 53 ⲟ; pipeline restoration, confidence: low; Editor proposes ⲟ to complete ⲕⲙⲧⲟ 'earthquake/disturbance' (or perhaps ⲕⲙⲧⲱⲃⲉ as a compound); accepted with reservation.

[60] l. 54 ⲍⲙ — "in"; pipeline restoration, confidence: low; 2 chars before ⲙⲡⲍⲣⲁⲓ ⲙⲡⲕⲁⲍ 'the upper region of the earth'; likely Lyc preposition ⲍⲙ̄ (=ϩⲙ̄) 'in', though unconstrained.

[61] l. 54 ⲩ; editor; Editor restores ⲩ to complete ⲟⲩⲛⲁ́ 'a great' (Lyc. ⲛⲁ́ = ⲛⲟⲟ́)

[62] l. 56 ⲧⲃ; editor; Editor restores ⲧⲃ to complete ⲉⲧⲃⲉ 'because of'

[63] l. 57 ⲛⲉ; editor; Editor restores ⲛⲉ to complete ⲁⲡⲓⲧⲛⲉ 'downward'

What Endures; the Word Through the Senses; the Buds Sweet and Bitter

Elaboration

What lasts, how truth becomes audible, why the same ground bears fruit of two kinds. T91 — why the illumining principles within do not yet rejoice wholly: they cast no shadow and have no ignorance, yet they grieve because they see the self enthroned and the Living Soul drawn taut between above and below; they shall rejoice only when the soul is refined and the enemy bound at the end. T92 — how interior truth takes outward form: the word brought forth from within passes through the five articulating degrees (palate, tongue, teeth, lips, breath) before it is heard outside, like a coin minted by five artisans before it can pass between hands. T93 — why the same natural mind brings forth fruit sweet in one place and bitter in another: the Lord's ordering nourishes in one part of the soul, while the self's energy floods the same elements with its shadow in another; remedy is in recognition.

SPIRITUAL READING

No one among men is unaffected by what is happening here. The whole structured field of the soul stands firm on its foundation, holding fast until the end is reached. Not only the lower supports, but also the highest illumining principles within — the wisdom that shines in the rational and the truth received in the natural — these stand without casting any shadow of their own and without any ignorance. They are held in place by a summons from the Lord and answer to him; nothing in them wavers.

And yet they do not rejoice wholly. They see two things at once.

On the one hand, their understanding is fixed upon the self and cannot look away from it. They behold the foul shapes self-love takes; they see how it sets itself up as if it were ruler of the upper place and the lower place at once, working in hidden ways and in open license, doing whatever pleases its heart's desire. They see it seated where it does not belong, arrogant, at ease in a wealth that was never its own. This sight grieves them.

On the other hand, they are filled with concern for the living soul, the soul beloved before them and honored by them. They see her drawn taut, stretched between above and below, between the good tree and the thorn. They see her in every affliction — pressed, abused, torn, consumed — going up and coming down, from above to below and from below to above, transferred from one bodily condition to the next. They see what she suffers under the grip of what has claimed her.

For both these reasons they do not rejoice in any completion. They carry grief upon their heart until the living soul is refined and lifted out from under the claws of what holds her, until what calls itself her enemy is loosed from her and bound forever in its proper place at the end.

Then they shall rejoice, and grief shall no longer have any hearing in them. They shall remain in the very condition that has always been theirs — the condition in which they exist from the beginning and forever.

SPIRITUAL READING

A truth that is to pass from one soul into another does not leap whole from the inmost into the open air. It is brought forth by stages, and at each stage another faculty lays its work upon it, until what was hidden in the mind stands articulated where another can hear it.

Consider how a single saying issues from a person. It rises out of the mouth and reaches the hearing of those near; but before it does so, the palate draws it up, the tongue spreads it, the teeth cut it into shape, the lips close upon it and let it pass. The breath that carries it is one, but five members work upon it, and only when each has done its part does the saying go forth as a thing that can be heard outside.

It is like the making of a coin. One craftsman engraves the figure; another cuts it round; another sets the seal upon it; another beats out the blank body; and so by five artisans together the piece is adorned and given its form. Then it is fit to go among people, where it can be received and given, taken and paid out, and pass from hand to hand as a recognized measure of value.

So it is with the word that comes from within. As it is formed and adorned in the five-fold articulation of the rational, it comes forth and is heard by others. Interior truth has no currency in the world until it has been given the shape that the outer hearing can receive. The five degrees of the rational are precisely this minting: they take what flows in from above and press it into a body that can be uttered, recognized, and exchanged among souls. The truth received within and the word spoken without are not two truths but one, formed under the hand of five workers so that it may live where others can hear it.

SPIRITUAL READING

Look at what happens within you when a new perception is being formed. The Lord shapes it through the five degrees of the natural mind, and the same five degrees through which it is shaped can also be the means by which it is undone. The warmth of love and the cooling of true thought together nourish what is rising in you, so that the whole tree of perception comes into its proper growth, root to fruit; this is how a new bud, when it is the Lord's, is brought into being and adorned in the natural.

But the natural mind is not in one condition everywhere within you. Place by place a lack and a diminishment enter, and an affliction settles upon what was meant to grow sweet. Where the self is operative — the disordered natural that the soul has claimed and not yet laid off — it floods the very same elements with its own shadow. The faculties through which the Lord was nourishing the bud become the faculties through which the self presses its claim, and the fruit that issues there is bitter; men stumble in themselves and lose the right use of their minds because of this energy working in what they have not recognized as not their own.

> So one ground bears sweetness and another bitterness, not because the natural mind is two different things, but because in one part of you the bud is being formed under the Lord's ordering and in another the same forming is being inundated by what the soul has appropriated. The fruits perish on every tree the shadow reaches. The remedy is not in the elements; it is in recognition — in discriminating, where the bitterness comes, what has been claimed, and laying it off, so that the same five degrees through which the self was destroying the bud can again be the degrees through which the Lord is nourishing it.

The Five Mysteries of the First Man; the Hidden Senses; the Three Forms in the Eye

Elaboration

The deepest interior of the soul's full reception. T94 — the five garments of the Divine Human and the hundred holy days: the soul fasts from what the self had set on its table and is fed by the Call-Answer as living food; the period of laying off opens out into the period of conjunction. T95 — the hidden powers in the senses, sorted daily: divine seals and disordered shapes alike marking the body, with the discrimination working in voice, in stillness, and in the Father's twelvefold completeness. T96 — the visible and hidden registers of understanding, and the riddle of the eye: the pupil sees by day but fails by night because seeing was never the eye's own; the pupil is the gate between upper and lower place through which the divine descends and the lower is gathered up.

Be it known to you that the five garments which the ⌈First⌉ Man wears upon them — there are five powers up within each and every one of them; they are reckoned, ⌈each one to its fellow⌉ The five and the fivefold times ⌈belong to one another⌉ are theirs. But in the time itself ⌈of the Call⌉ the Call went downward; the Answer wished to come upward with him. The Call joined with the Answer; the twenty characters in their twenty members, which are the children of mankind. The Call joined with the Answer, conveying them upward to the Height by their hand—the manner in which the Father of the Living Man conveys him upward by their hand from these others. They were raised upward away from all the works of ⌈those above⌉ and those below. These indeed are the ones whom they call "Pentekoste"—which is the Fifty of the great days. Answer the First Man … the ⌈Second⌉ Man.

SPIRITUAL READING

Know this: when the Lord goes forth as Divine Human toward the soul, he comes clothed in five outer forms, and within each of these forms a full power is held — the rational complete in five degrees, each degree gathered up into the next, all reckoned together as one fellowship. The five and the five are paired; what goes forth in five is met by five answering registers, and the times of their meeting are themselves five.

For at the appointed time the Lord's summons descends, and the soul's hearing rises up to meet it. The two join — influx going forth and reception returning — and where they meet, twenty registers are inscribed upon the twenty members of the rational, and these are the children of the regenerated mind. The summons takes the answer up by the hand and conveys it into the height; just so, the Lord as the living Human raises the soul by the hand of these very faculties out from every work that belongs to the lower and the claimed. They are lifted clear of all that is below.

This is the meaning of what is called the Fifty: the great days of holiness in which the soul fasts from the food it had taken for its own, laying off what the self had set on its table. From that very season onward the soul is fed by the coming of Jesus the Radiance, the Glorious One — divine truth shining forth becomes its nourishment. The food it now receives is itself the Call and the Answer; the conversation between the Lord and the soul is the bread by which the soul lives. Spiritually, the soul is loosed from the houses where it had been kept by claiming.

Through all those fifty days this living food is enough for them all; it fills them with power and richness, with life and light. And then, having fed on it, what was fifty days of purification becomes a hundred days of holiness — the period of laying off, doubled, opens out into the period of conjunction; the fast becomes the feast. This is what the first state of the rational and the second state share between them, both alike grounded in the going forth of the Call and the rising of the Answer: the Divine Human at the first, and the same humanity received and returned in the second.

(The middle of the chapter is broken; the surviving passage holds together as the teaching that the rational is fivefold in its accommodation, that the Lord's summons and the soul's hearing are one movement, that purification of the requisite season opens into conjunction at double measure, and that the food of this whole process is divine truth itself shining forth.)

SPIRITUAL READING

Within the faculties of perception there are powers at work that the soul does not ordinarily see. They have their root in interior degrees and operate continually upon the body of the rational, day after day, marking it with a great multitude of imprints — fixed states sealed into the soul through what the senses receive. Among these imprints, some are of the Lord's order; others are particular forms of self-loving claim, present in equal multitude, that have arranged themselves in the natural mind through the openings of perception.

Yet through this very same daily operation what is the Lord's is being chosen out and purified and drawn inward. It is sorted in the voice, in speech, and in the inner act of utterance — habitually, not once. And it is sorted in stillness, when the soul's stillness rests within the Lord's Stillness; for at the time the heart is quieted, the discrimination proper to the Father can be received, and the twelvefold completeness of his outgoing operates also at this register.

The disordered shapes of self-love that belong to darkness are, by the same operation, habitually driven outward — pressed away into the outer regions, into the wandering of falsity, and into the transfer by which a state passes from one substrate to another rather than being received as one's own. Some of these disordered states are exposed in this way; others remain concealed for a time, hidden until their moment of discrimination comes.

(The chapter is heavily damaged; the surviving phrases give the shape of the teaching but not its full articulation.)

SPIRITUAL READING

Understanding has both a visible and a hidden register. In the faculty by which the soul sees, certain operations stand forth where they can be recognized, while a further operation lies hidden within them and is known only as it is given to be known. So too within the body of the natural mind: alongside what comes to view there are four hidden operations carried within, belonging to a more interior order than the eye that sees them.

There are men who see while at the same time being themselves seen — for the soul that looks out is also looked into, and the same understanding by which it perceives is the understanding through which the Lord's light reaches it. What is exposed to love's fire stands lit; what self-love would claim remains in its own darkness, hidden from view. But the light that watches over what is concealed in every part is not the eye's own; it is the living movement of perception sent from above, which reaches even into what the soul has shut away.

Why then does the pupil of the eye see during the day but fail when night comes on? Because understanding does not see by its own power. As long as the Lord illumines, the soul perceives; when that light is withdrawn, or the soul turns from it, the same faculty that saw a moment before sees nothing. The seeing was never the eye's; the eye was only the opening through which what was given came in. This is what the matter signifies, and the mystery to which it points: the pupil is the gate — the narrow opening between degrees through which influx descends from the upper place into the lower, and through which what is below is gathered up into recognition. Through this same gate the four ordered regions of the natural mind are reached, from the lower place upward, until the whole circuit is completed.

(Much of the following is too damaged to render confidently. What survives indicates that from the upper place the divine going-forth descends; that the Divine Human comes forth from the Lord and within him every thing is known — so that the seeing which the soul cannot perform of itself is performed within the One in whom all things are already seen.)

APPARATUS

[1] l. 15 ϣⲁⲣⲡ — “First”; editor; [ϯ[ϣⲁⲣⲡ]|ⲛ̄ⲣⲱⲙⲉ = ⲡⲱⲁⲣⲡ ⲛ̄ⲣⲱⲙⲉ 'the First Man' (in glossary as ⲡⲱⲁⲣⲡ ⲛⲣⲱⲙⲉ); the Five Garments are the Five Sons that First Man wears as armor

[2] l. 17 ⲟⲩⲁ ⲡⲟⲩⲁ — “each one to its fellow”; pipeline restoration, confidence: moderate; Standard Coptic distributive ⲡⲟⲩⲁ ⲡⲟⲩⲁ + reciprocal ⲛⲉⲩⲉⲣⲏⲩ. With ⲁⲡ given and {2}=ⲛⲉⲩ, fills to ⲁⲡⲟⲩⲁ ⲡⲟⲩⲁ ⲛⲉⲩⲉⲣⲏⲩ 'each one to its fellow' — fits 6-char estimate.

[3] l. 17 ⲛⲉⲩ — “each one to its fellow”; editor; ⲁⲡ[.....ⲛⲉⲩ]|ⲉⲣⲏⲩ — editor restores ⲛⲉⲩ to complete ⲛⲉⲩⲉⲣⲏⲩ 'their fellow/each other' (standard Coptic reciprocal pronoun)

[4] l. 18 ⲛⲉⲩⲉⲣⲏⲩ ⲡⲉ — “belong to one another”; pipeline restoration, confidence: low; 10-char slot before ⲧⲟⲩⲏⲧⲉ 'are theirs'. The teaching has just established the reciprocal pairing; restoring 'their fellow it is' continues that thought. Speculative.

[5] l. 19 ⲛ̄ⲡⲧⲱⲍⲙⲉ — “of the Call”; pipeline restoration, confidence: low; 9 chars. Next clause introduces ⲡⲧⲱⲍⲙⲉ 'the Call'. Reading 'in the time of the Call' anchors the descent that immediately follows. Speculative but grammatical.

[6] l. 20 ⲱ; editor; Editor restoration; completes ⲟⲩⲱϣ 'wish' continuing onto line 2 (ϣ)

[7] l. 21 ⲉ ⲡ; editor; Editor restoration; completes ⲡⲥⲱⲧⲙⲉ 'the Answer' and gives article ⲡ for the next noun

[8] l. 22 ⲉⲧⲉ ⲛ; editor; Editor restoration; standard relative-clause introducer ⲉⲧⲉ + start of next word

[9] l. 23 ⲡⲥⲱ; editor; Editor restoration; first syllables of ⲡⲥⲱⲧⲙⲉ 'the Answer' continuing onto line 5

[10] l. 24 ⲱⲧ; editor; Editor restoration; completes ⲡⲟⲩⲓⲱⲧ 'the Father'

[11] l. 25 ⲉⲓ̈; editor; Editor restoration; completes ⲛⲉⲓ̈ 'these,' modified by ⲛⲓⲕⲉⲕⲁⲩⲉ 'others' on next line

[14] l. 29 ⲛ̄ⲍ̄ — “Of seven”; editor; Editor restoration; ⲍ̄ overlined indicates numeral 7; ⲛ̄ⲍ̄ⲑⲟⲩⲉ = 'of seven days'

[15] l. 29 ⲧⲣⲟⲫ; editor; Editor restoration; completes ⲧⲣⲟⲫⲏ 'food' (Greek τροφή) which continues onto line 11

[16] l. 30 ⲏ ⲉ; editor; Editor restoration; first letter of ⲉⲧⲉ 'which is'

[17] l. 30 ⲡⲥⲏⲩ — “the time”; editor; Editor restoration; ⲡⲥⲏⲩ 'the time' (in glossary); fits 'until the time of the coming of Jesus'

[18] l. 31 ⲧⲓ̈ — “the coming”; editor; Editor restoration; completes ⲧⲓⲛⲉⲓ (Lyc. of Sah. ϫⲓⲛⲉⲓ 'the coming/advent')

[19] l. 31 ⲁⲡⲓⲧⲛⲉ — “down”; pipeline restoration, confidence: moderate; 6 chars. Lexicon 'descend': Jesus the Radiance came down (ⲁⲡⲓⲧⲛⲉ) as accommodated revelation to feed the soul. Fits exactly 6 chars.

[20] l. 32 ⲉⲧⲉ — “who is”; pipeline restoration, confidence: moderate; 3 chars, partial ⲧ visible. Relative ⲉⲧⲉ 'who is' linking Jesus to 'their food, which is hers'. Most economical fit.

[21] l. 32 ⲛⲱϩⲣⲉ — “five sons”; pipeline restoration, confidence: moderate; 4-char slot. The Five Sons of First Man / Five Sons of Living Spirit are the structural fivefold of the rational; 'the five sons of the soul' fits the teaching's frame and the five-garment correspondence.

[22] l. 32 ⲏ ⲉ; editor; Editor restoration; completes ⲯⲩⲭⲏ 'soul' and gives ⲉ(ⲧⲉ) 'which'

[23] l. 33 ⲛⲉⲧⲟ ⲛ̄ⲧⲧ — “these are”; pipeline restoration, confidence: low; 10-char slot. Reading: 'the Call and the Answer, which are this food.' ⲛⲉⲧⲟ 'who are' + ⲛ̄ⲧⲧ(ⲣⲟⲫⲏ) 'this food' continues onto next line. Speculative.

[25] l. 34 ⲛ̄ⲍⲏⲧⲟⲩ — “from within them, the”; pipeline restoration, confidence: moderate; 6 chars. Standard Lyc. preposition 'from within them' (ⲛ̄ⲍⲏⲧⲟⲩ) introducing 'the houses'. Reads: 'released forth from within them, the houses.'

[26] l. 35 ⲁⲩⲟⲩⲱⲙ — “in which they ate”; pipeline restoration, confidence: moderate; 5-char slot inside relative ⲉⲧ-. Reads 'the fifty days in which they ate this living food' — completes the eating-fasting motif of the passage.

[28] l. 37 ⲛⲁⲓ̈ — “these”; pipeline restoration, confidence: moderate; 4-char slot before ⲛⲉ 'are'. Demonstrative ⲛⲁⲓ̈ 'these' opens the summarising clause.

[29] l. 37 ⲛⲍⲃⲥⲱ — “the garments”; pipeline restoration, confidence: moderate; 4-char slot. Returns to the teaching's title term ⲍⲃⲥⲱ 'garments' (lexicon). 'These are the garments of…' summarises the Five Garments theme.

[30] l. 37 ⲓⲏⲥ — “Jesus”; pipeline restoration, confidence: moderate; 3-char slot after ⲛⲧⲉ 'of'. ⲓⲏⲥ 'Jesus' fits exactly; the immediate context names Jesus the Radiance as the source of the living food.

[31] l. 38 trace: ⲧ ⲛⲉⲩ

[32] l. 39 ⲁⲩ; pipeline restoration, confidence: high; 2-char slot before ⲣ̄ⲣⲙⲙⲁⲟ 'rich'. 3pl perfect prefix ⲁⲩ- gives ⲁⲩⲣ̄ⲣⲙⲙⲁⲟ 'they became rich'.

[38] l. 43 ⲁ; editor; Editor restoration; single letter restored within partially visible ⲉⲧ[ⲁ]ⲩ

[39] l. 46 ⲡⲓⲧⲟⲩ ⲁⲉ ⲛⲉ — “These five then are”; pipeline restoration, confidence: moderate; 12 chars (with internal spaces ≈ 12). 'These five are the mysteries of the first Aeons' parallels the title phrase 'Five Mysteries of First Man' (lexicon: ⲡⲓⲧⲟⲩ ⲙ̄ⲙⲩⲥⲧⲏⲣⲓⲟⲛ).

[40] l. 46 ⲱ; editor; Translator restoration; single missing letter ⲱ in ⲧⲁ[ⲱ]ⲛ̄ = ⲁⲓⲱⲛ 'aeon' (Greek αἰών) — fits 'mysteries of the first Aeons'

[41] l. 47 ⲙⲛ̄ ⲛⲓⲙⲩⲥⲧ — “and the mysteries of the”; pipeline restoration, confidence: low; 7-char slot before ⲛⲓⲁ̄ⲉⲩⲧⲉⲣⲁ 'second ones'. Parallel to {45}: 'and the mysteries of the second ones'. Speculative.

[42] l. 47 ⲛⲓⲁ̄ — “and the mysteries of the”; editor; Editor restoration; ⲛⲓ- demonstrative + ⲁ̄ = Lyc. orthographic representation of Greek ð (cf. ⲡⲣⲟⲁⲟⲧⲏⲥ < προδότης); together with visible ⲉⲩⲧⲉⲣⲁ yields ⲛⲓ-ⲁⲉⲩⲧⲉⲣⲁ 'the second (ones)' = the second Aeons paired with the 'first ones' of line 27

The Five-fold Cosmos; Light Through the Gates; the Three Images in the Perfect Man

Summary

The full integration named at every degree. T97 — the fivefold completeness of the natural cannot stand if one degree is missing; the five things the Lord makes known: the soul belongs to the kind of light, the states of light and darkness exist in such manner, the light prevails over self-love, the soul is brought out of the boundary of death by the upper gate, and the self is bound forever. T98 — how the Lord's truth comes forth through the open gates of the rational's discrete degrees: rays passing inward, taking captive light by the hand, sorting one kind upward and consigning the other to the lower side. T99 — the three forms in the righteous (spiritual, psychic, somatic), the daily soul-cycle that purifies all three, with the Virgin of Light as queen over them all and as the robe to the New Man — she who is first and last. With this the kiss without shame is fully described.

The first: that he informed them that they belong to the kind of the Light. The second: that he loosened forth for them concerning the aeons of the Greatness, how they exist, and he taught them concerning the manner of the Darkness, the manner also in which it itself exists.

SPIRITUAL READING

If even one of the five aspects of the natural mind were missing, the whole could not stand. The natural is held together as one only because all five degrees are kept in their order; remove any one, and the structure collapses. Whatever the self produces in the natural — whatever rises up today on the face of the earth, in the flesh — is humbled in the end. It does not reach the height of the elevated states the Lord sets above it; it does not match their breadth or their length or their depth. The self's productions, from the smallest to the greatest, are at last swallowed up in the great sea of natural perception, taken back into the mass from which they came, because nothing the soul claims can stand on its own. Nothing endures apart from the power that bears the whole, apart from the divine going-forth that gives sign and order to the All, apart from his holy light. When the soul brings forth from itself in self-claiming, it has blasphemed against the wisdom that is the Lord's glory.

And to the rational the Lord makes five things known.

First, he informs the soul that it belongs to the kind of the light — that what it most truly is comes from him, not from itself.

Second, he loosens for the soul the understanding of the states it has passed through: how the degrees of formation actually exist, and likewise how the darkness exists — what self-claiming is, in what manner it stands. He teaches the soul to see both sides of itself.

Third, he proclaims the greatness of the light: how divine truth puts the self's claim to shame and prevails over it. The soul learns that the light is stronger than what had bound it.

Fourth, he teaches that the soul has come to the boundary of death — to the flesh, the outermost where self-love most operates — and that he himself brings the soul out by the upper gate of that lowest place, where before it had been sealed in.

Fifth, he shows that the self and its workings are bound at last with a great bond: those self-loving arrangements that habitually cover over the Good and the righteousness are themselves held fast, so that what hid the Lord's good cannot hide it any longer.

SPIRITUAL READING

A question is raised: is there anything of life, anything bearing light, that comes forth from the threefold fixed structures which enclose the natural mind? — anything that, having entered into those bounds, rises again upward out of them?

The teaching answers: yes. When what has gone down into the natural is ready to come up, it does so as rays of light extending along a fitted channel. It does not rise by collapsing the order it must pass through; it rises by entering the great gates that stand open between the discrete degrees of the rational. Firmament by firmament, the gates are open. There are four of them, set open at every quarter of the natural mind, spread through its four directions; and they are open downward as well, into the dwelling-places where particular loves have taken up residence. Because of this opening, influx can reach all the way down, and what is the Lord's in the lowest places can be lifted again all the way up.

So the rays go inward through the gates where light shines forth, into the very place where what belongs to the Lord still lies held within what the soul has claimed. There the Lord takes by the hand the light that is in those places, together with the little of his own that is mingled there, and draws it. In that same place where the rational has been pressed and made firm in its proper degrees, a kind is chosen out from what is found, and that kind is borne up to the higher place, into conjunction with the Living. The other kind, which cannot be raised, is left to the lower side and remains there.

This is how regeneration moves through the soul: not by breaking the orders, but by passing through the gates the Lord keeps open between them; not by snatching, but by drawing what is his upward through the fitted channels degree by degree, while what cannot be conjoined falls of itself to where it belongs.

psychic, unto the enemies which [. . . .] [ca. 11] wrath, desire, [. . . .] [ca. 16] with her. Then there comes to be a virgin of Light, who comes and reveals herself forth to her from the icon of the Indweller, which exists in her, which is the New Man, it is — that Virgin blazes a path, and travels before her inward, and draws her up to the height, to the upper place, and she brings her in to the icon of the Indweller, and paints her, and adorns her in the New Man, inside, and she takes the seal in all the members of the Virgin of Light who exists, who dwells in the New Man. This then is the manner: the Living Member is habitually redeemed forth from every life — the one who comes into the body of the Righteous one outside, in the dispensation of the prophecy, in this type. The type in this manner: the Living Soul is habitually purified every day in the All, and crosses through these three icons. She habitually releases the body which is not hers, in the somatikon. She also habitually releases the fortunes which are not hers, these which are mingled with her in the psychikon, eher wrath, the bitterness, the desire, the [. . . .] ...me, and the foolishness, the envy and the discord, and the other evil teachings which are not hers. But in the icon, however, of the pneumatikon, she habitually lives and joins inward with patience, the perfection of faith, and with the agape which is queen over them all, who is the Virgin of of Light, who is a robe to the New Man, whom they habitually call by the name 'the hour of life', who is she; she is the first She; she also is the last. : —.

SPIRITUAL READING

In the righteous soul there are three forms, three registers at which the one inner life is present.

The first is the spiritual form. This is the New Man — the rational as it has been made new. Here the Lord, ordering the inner mind, fashions himself a dwelling and comes inward and abides. What stands at this register is the rational fully ordered by truth, the place where influx is recognized and received as the Lord's.

The second is the psychic form. This is the residue and remainder of the New Man as it reaches downward — the part of the inner life still bound into the outer nature, where what is given and what has been claimed are not yet sorted. Here the Old Man is also found, and here the soul lies mingled with affections that are not its own: bitterness, desire, foolishness, envy, discord, and the false teachings of self-love. These cling to it because at this register the natural is still receiving its food from below and pouring itself downward into the body.

The third is the bodily form — the outermost, the form into which the inner life accommodates itself in ultimates. Into this the soul sinks when it descends to be fed; from this it must be carried back up.

This is the manner of the Living Soul: every day it is purified throughout the whole, and every day it passes through these three. From the bodily form it lays off the body, which is not its own. From the psychic form it lays off the affections mingled with it that are not its own — the wrath, the desire, the bitterness, the foolishness, the envy, the discord, and every evil teaching that does not belong to it. And in the spiritual form it lives, and conjoins itself inward with patience, with the perfection of faith, and with love that is queen over them all — the pure receivability by which the Lord is received without distortion, who is a robe to the New Man. This is what is called the hour of life: she is the first and she is also the last.

When the soul has been raised through the discrimination of these three, the way is blazed before it, it is drawn upward to the height, brought into the form where the Lord indwells, adorned in the New Man, and sealed in every member by that pure receivability of light that dwells within him.

[1] l. 11 ⲙⲟⲥ; editor; Editor restoration; final letters of ⲕⲟⲥⲙⲟⲥ

[3] l. 12 ⲛⲁⲓ — "these things"; pipeline restoration, confidence: low; 3-char demonstrative anchoring 'these things of the flesh' before the verb of producing/becoming; matches the reading's 'whatever the self produces in the natural'. Plausible but not strongly constrained.

[4] l. 12 ϣⲱⲡ — "come to be"; pipeline restoration, confidence: low; 3 chars ending in visible ⲡ; verb ϣⲱⲡ 'come to be, exist' fits the participial sense 'which come to be today on the face of the earth' (cf. the reading's 'whatever rises up today on the face of the earth'). Letter-count exact, but other 3-char ⲡ-final verbs cannot be excluded.

[5] l. 13 trace: ⲗϵ

[8] l. 15 ⲁⲩⲱ; pipeline restoration, confidence: low; 3-char connective at end of clause leading into the following 'they come not up to the height'; ⲁⲩⲱ 'and' is the standard transition and fits the count.

[9] l. 16 ⲥϵⲛⲏⲩ ϵⲛ; editor; Translator restoration on basis of exactly parallel construction in line 20: ⲥϵⲛⲏⲩ ϵⲛ ⲁⲍⲣⲛ̄ — 'they come not up to'; line 19 begins the dimensional series

[10] l. 17 ⲕⲁⲧⲁ; editor; Editor restoration; ⲕⲁⲧⲁ ⲡⲉϩⲭⲓⲥⲉ 'according to its height'; matches the parallel ⲕⲁⲧⲁ-clauses on lines 21, 22

[11] l. 18 ⲧⲉϩ; editor; Editor restoration; ⲧⲉϩ-ⲟⲩⲉϣⲥ̄ⲥⲉ 'its breadth'

[12] l. 18 ⲟⲩⲧⲉ; editor; Editor restoration of expected ⲟⲩⲧⲉ ('nor') matching the iterated negative-disjunctive structure of lines 20-22

[18] l. 23 ⲑⲁ; editor; Editor restoration; ⲑⲁⲗⲁⲥⲥⲁ 'sea'

[22] l. 41 ϵ ⲁⲩⲱ; editor; ⲟⲩⲁⲃϵ qualitative 'holy' completes the word; ⲁⲩⲱ 'and' opens next clause

[23] l. 42 ⲁⲩ; editor; perfect-tense prefix ⲁ= + 3pl ⲩ for ⲁⲩ-ⲃⲗⲁⲥⲫⲏⲙⲓ 'they blasphemed'

[28] l. 69 ⲛⲧⲙⲛⲧ; editor; [ⲛⲧⲙⲛⲧ] restored at line end, joining [ⲛⲁⲃ] at start of line 7 to form ⲛ̄-ⲧⲙⲛ̄ⲧⲛⲁⲃ 'of the Greatness.'

[31] l. 71 ⲍϵ ⲙ; editor; [ⲍϵ ⲙ]ⲡⲕϵⲕϵ; ⲡⲕϵⲕϵ visible. Continues 'manner of the Darkness' from line 7.

[32] l. 71 ⲱ; editor; ⲍ[ⲱ]ⲱⲥ; restored internal ⲱ completing ⲍⲱⲱⲥ = Lyc. ϩⲱⲱⲥ 'itself, also' (3sg.f reflexive).

[33] l. 72 ⲡⲙⲁⲍ; editor; [ⲡⲙⲁⲍ]ϣⲁⲙⲧ; ϣⲁⲙⲧ visible. Standard Lyc. ordinal 'the third.'

[38] l. 76 ⲥⲱⲙⲁ; pipeline restoration, confidence: moderate; 4-char noun explicated by the following ϵⲧϵ ⲧⲥⲁⲣ̄ⲝ ⲧϵ 'which is the flesh'; ⲥⲱⲙⲁ 'body' is the standard corpus-internal pairing 'body, which is the flesh' (cf. body-anatomy lexicon: 'the form of love and wisdom in ultimates'). The previous line's ⲡⲙⲟⲩ ⲛⲧⲟⲩ + ⲥⲱⲙⲁ yields 'the death of their body'.

[39] l. 77 ⲁⲩ; editor; [ⲁⲩ]; 3pl perfect prefix restored, beginning the verb ⲁⲩⲥⲱⲍⲡ 'they were sealed.'

[40] l. 77 ⲱ; editor; ⲥ[ⲱ]; restored internal ⲱ between visible ⲥ and following visible ⲍⲡ on line 15. Forms ⲥⲱⲍⲡ 'shut up, sealed' (Lyc. = Sah. ⲥⲱⲡ̀).

[43] l. 6 ⲁⲡⲥⲁⲛⲧⲡⲉ ⲧⲏⲣ̄ⲩ̄ — "unto the whole upper place"; pipeline restoration, confidence: low; 14-char destination for ⲛⲏⲩ ⲁⲍⲣⲏⲓ̈ 'comes upward'; parallels ⲁⲡⲥⲁⲛⲧⲡ(ⲉ) ⲧⲏⲣ̄ in line 11; the upper place is the proper terminus of upward motion.

[44] l. 8 ⲙ̄ⲙⲁⲛ — "There is none"; pipeline restoration, confidence: low; 4-char negative answer to the rhetorical question, followed by ⲁⲗⲗⲁ 'but': nothing comes forth automatically, but when the light is borne upward it becomes the rays. Fits the trace dots and the dialectical structure.

[45] l. 9 ⲛⲏ — "those who go"; pipeline restoration, confidence: low; 2-char span with ⲛ partial; reads ⲡⲓⲱⲣ ⲛⲛⲏ ⲉⲃⲱⲕ ⲁⲍⲟⲩⲛ '(the) channel of those who go inward', the rays subjectivized as travelers along the channel.

[46] l. 13 ⲟⲩⲁⲓ̈ⲛⲉ — "light"; editor; Editor restoration; subject of ⲃⲱⲕ ⲁⲍⲟⲩⲛ in line 7 'rays go inward'; ⲡⲟⲩⲁⲓⲛⲉ ⲛ̄ⲛⲁⲕⲧⲓⲛ 'the light of the rays'

[47] l. 14 ⲛⲛ — "of the"; editor; Editor restoration: ⲛ̄ⲛ̄ⲁⲕⲧⲓⲛ 'of the rays' (genitive + plural article)

[48] l. 14 ⲁ ⲉⲧⲙ — "the very place which"; editor; Editor restoration: ⲙ̄ⲙⲁ ⲉⲧⲙ̄ⲙⲉⲩ '(in) the place there/that very place'; ⲉⲧⲙ̄- begins relative continuing on next line

[49] l. 16 ⲙ; editor; single letter restored in ⲉⲧⲙ̄ⲙⲁⲩ 'there/that very'

[50] l. 39 ⲧ; editor; single letter restoring article ⲧ- before ⲣⲓⲕⲱⲛ

[51] l. 39 ⲥ; editor; single letter completing ⲣⲱⲱⲥ 'however/itself' (3sg.f intensive)

[52] l. 40 ⲧⲙⲛ; editor; start of ⲧⲙⲛⲧⲣⲁⲣⲱⲣⲏⲧ 'patience' (in accumulated vocabulary as virtue-list term)

[53] l. 43 ⲩ; editor; single letter completing ⲱⲁⲩⲙⲟⲩⲧⲉ 'they habitually call'

[54] l. 44 ⲁⲥ; editor; completing ⲛ̄ⲧⲁⲥ '(it is) she'

[55] l. 44 ⲁⲣⲡⲉ; editor; completing ⲧⲱⲁⲣⲡⲉ 'the first' (fem. of ⲱⲁⲣⲡ in glossary)

[56] l. 45 ⲧⲁ; editor; completing ⲛ̄ⲧⲁⲥ 'she' (independent pronoun)

Set Me As a Seal

This is the permanent sealing — coda, not new movement. Five teachings close the cycle. The first and longest stands at the heart of the coda: the prayer that arises when divine humanity is in great affliction, the petition raised on its behalf, the operative power sent in answer, the discrimination accomplished, the conjunction made permanent — the entire cycle remembered and gathered into one structural prayer. The next distinguishes what is pruned without pain from what is cut at real cost — the soul learning the difference between surface and structural, what the seal binds and what falls away of itself. Then the inner sight opening in those whose body's eye blossoms — the eye now seeing what before was hidden. Then the two essences finally and forever distinguished: what is given, what is claimed, the beautiful separated forth from the darkness. The corpus closes with the structural supports of the regenerated rational and the identification of the Yes and the Amen: the Calling and the Hearing become the soul's permanent answering — what reigns over the whole work, refines the Living Soul, and grants her remembrance.

The five teachings perform the sealing. The first and longest of the coda does at the soul-level what an earlier teaching did at the macro-cosmic level — narrates the entire redemptive descent and ascent — but now as the prayer that bears it: the cry from affliction, the petition, the answering powers sent, the conjunction sealed. This is the seal set upon the heart. The next is the seal set upon the working life — the discrimination of what is pruned without pain (surface outgrowth) from what is cut at real cost (structural member); the soul has learned which loosenings are which, and the seal holds what should hold, releases what should release. Then the eye that blossoms — the inner sight permanently opened, the rational loosed in stillness from the natural's claim, the seeing that does not pass. Then the foundational distinction set forever: two essences, what is given and what is claimed, the beautiful separated from the darkness — what is now distinguished cannot be mingled again. The corpus closes with the Yes and the Amen: the Calling and the Hearing identified as the soul's answering, that which reigns through the whole work and is itself the refiner, helper, and rememberer of the Living Soul. Two of these chapters survive in damaged condition, but the surviving threads carry the doctrinal close. The seal is set; the cycle is complete.

The Prayer From Affliction

Primary Teaching

The seal upon the heart. T100 stands at the center of the coda — a long teaching parallel to T15 in the seeking-section, but where T15 narrated the macro-redemption from the inmost outward, T100 narrates it as prayer from within affliction. The Mother of Life cries out for the First Man held in great affliction; the Father receives the prayer and grants it; the Living Spirit descends and raises divine humanity; the building begins; the Five at the consummation glorify and intercede; the Third Ambassador chooses out the Living Soul; Jesus the Radiance completes the purpose-of-heart of the elements. The whole seven-state cycle is here remembered at the level of the soul — the cry that bears it, the answering powers sent, and the conjunction permanent. This is the seal: love strong as death, reaching through spiritual death to regenerate.

For this prayer came into being from the firsts [. . . .] [. .] the gods first prayed to their Father; they gave to them their prayer and their request. [ca. 14] every work; the Great One of the Spirit, the Mother of Life requested, prayed; she beseeched, she glorified, she blessed. Of the First Standing-Fast, which indeed is the Father, she prayed him a prayer, she petitioned him a petition; she received a great gift for herself, together with the great powers which are with her. She prayed a prayer for the First Man, because of the manner that he had come forth to keep guard over the lowerside, and joined himself to the Mother of Life, and separated from her, and gave himself in great affliction, and received the strife in the land of destruction, with sorrow and with weakness, in the worlds of the Darkness, in the depths which are fearful, in the midst of the encampment of the demons, a binding of the powers of the Devil. For while he was in their likeness they reigned, standing over him in the midst of his enemies. The petition however that she had supplicated, she prayed, she gave glory, blessed, and received — the Mother of Life — from the Father, the first Standing-Fast, that for which she had supplicated him: that he might send a power, a faith, a redeemer, a helper to the Son of God, the one who stood in the affliction. So then is the manner in which she prayed, supplicated; this also is the manner in which her prayer was completed, was received within before the Father of the Greatness; he saw it, and gave to her her prayer, the great power: the Living Spirit, the first Expander. They came in a great power — the Mother of Life with the Living Spirit — unto the boundary of the limit; they brought up the First Man forth of that war and that contest which had

And he made a journey, and removed (it) far from those who are his enemies, in great affliction — the one who was in the land of the Darkness — since he had become weak. Then the Great One of the Spirit stood fast with the Beloved of the Lights, the Great Builder, with this Living Spirit, and the First Man — these Five stood fast at the consummation; they gave glory, they blessed the Father. The First-Standing-Fast (= the First Man) — they interceded for him with an intercession; they they gave to him a request, that he might give them the power of the wellspring, a steerer of all the works of the multitude that have been established, that he might come and purify forth the living soul, which has stood up on her feet in this all. At the consummation they interceded with their Father; he took from their hands their prayer; he gave to them their intercession and their request; he summoned forth from him [ca. 12] which is the third of the Ambassador, who has come forth in the power of his ... Greatness; he saw the entire soul, the manner in which she is mingled in a bond, standing fast on her feet, while she sees the works of the [————] [————] which his brothers established, that came forth from the Height . SPIRITUAL READING

When divine humanity goes forth into the soul's lower places to keep watch over what is below, it does not go in untouched ease. It enters the contest. It stands in great affliction, surrounded by the disorder of the natural mind in its claimed state — the depths that are fearful, the press of disordered cravings, the binding pressure of self-love organized as if it ruled. The self reigns over divine humanity for a season, standing over it in its likeness, as if it had taken what it could not take.

In this affliction a prayer comes into being. It is the first prayer, the prayer that all later prayer rests upon: the cry of the divine principle of life-bearing within the soul, turning toward the inmost source. She prays, she petitions, she glorifies, she blesses; she asks the Father for a great gift — for herself and for the divine humanity that has gone down — that he would send a faith, a redeemer, a helper to the one who stands in affliction. The Father sees the prayer. He receives it within himself. He grants it.

What he sends is his own operative power — the principle by which spiritual structure is built, the first that causes things to stand wide. This power goes down with the divine life-bearing, reaching to the very boundary of the lower limit, and there raises divine humanity up out of the contest. The gift of life is given. The journey is made; what oppressed is removed far off. The one who had been held in great affliction in the land below is loosened, set free of the press, set on his feet in the country of rest.

Then the building begins. The natural mind is given its proper structure: its firmaments by which degrees are kept distinct, its recurrent cycles of purification, its conveyances by which truth descends from above, its mountains of elevated state, its bones of structural good, its strongholds of preserved order. The whole is finished and gathered up beneath the eyes of light — the natural mind no longer left to itself but framed and held under the Lord's seeing.

When this is done, the inmost source of the Spirit stands together with the Lord at the register where his love is returned, and with the principle of divine order, and with the operative power, and with the divine humanity — these five at the consummation, glorifying and blessing the Father. They intercede now for what remains: for the living soul herself, who still stands mingled in the body of the natural, oppressed in the scourge of the deep, held among the fleshes of death. They ask that power be given — a guide of all the works, one who can come and purify what has been established, who can bring the living soul forth onto her feet in this whole. The Father takes their intercession from their hands and grants it.

Then he summons forth the third — the Lord's call going out to the rational at the moment the natural is ready to hear it. In his mercies the Ambassador reveals himself before the harsh underside, before the lower place of the soul. He chooses the living soul out from all the fleshes of death in which she had been mingled. He gives her wideness where she had been pressed. He sets her on her feet in the place of rest, with joy. So the third fulfills the purpose of the three: the purpose of those who prayed the Father concerning her, and his own purpose toward the living soul whom he had looked upon. He completes her; he gives her room out of oppression; he leads as foremost into the whole body of the regenerated rational.

The remaining fragments speak, as far as they can be heard, of the icon shown and hidden according to its time, of garments given, of the voice raised, of the prayer answered inward, of the soul made a free one — no longer held by what claimed her — and of Jesus the Radiance giving the power of light, completing the purpose of heart, that the hope received may stand forever. So is the molding of the soul accomplished: by prayer rising from affliction, by the Father's hearing, by the operative power that raises, by the call that chooses out, and by the radiance that completes — and you, hearing this, stand fast in what has been molded.

[74] l. 107 ⲡⲣϵⲥⲃϵⲩⲧⲏⲥ ⲛⲧ; editor; editor's restoration based on line 32 reference to 'the third' (= Third Ambassador) and the standard cosmogonic narrative; ⲛⲧⲁⲣ = Lyc. relative perfect 'who has'

[76] l. 108 ϫⲛ; editor; Editor's restoration; preposition ϫⲛ̄ 'in' restored at end of line, joining 'in [a] bond' which begins line 2 with [ⲟⲩ]ⲙ̄ⲣⲣϵ.

[77] l. 110 ⲡⲭⲓ; editor; Editor's restoration; first three letters of ⲡⲭⲓⲥϵ 'the Height' (Lycopolitan ϫⲓⲥϵ = Sahidic ϫⲓⲥϵ; cf. accumulated vocab ⲡⲭⲥϵ 'the Height,' ⲡⲧⲭⲓⲥϵ). Word continues to line 4 [ⲥϵ]. Manichaean cosmological term for the upper light realm whence the soul came forth.

[78] l. 111 ⲥϵ; editor; Final two letters of ⲡⲭⲓⲥϵ 'the Height' begun in line 3 (see id 3). English meaning carried by id 3.

[79] l. 111 ⲁⲣϵ; editor; Editor's restoration; first three letters of ⲁⲣⲉⲧⲥ̄ 'her feet' (Lycopolitan idiom ⲧⲏⲕ ⲁⲣⲉⲧ= 'stand fast,' in glossary). Word continues to line 5 [ⲧⲥ].

[80] l. 112 ⲧⲥ; editor; Final two letters of ⲁⲣⲉⲧⲥ̄ 'her feet' begun in line 4 (see id 5). English meaning carried by id 5.

[82] l. 114 ⲧⲏⲥ; editor; Editor's restoration; final three letters of ⲡⲣⲉⲥⲃϵⲩⲧⲏⲥ 'the Ambassador' begun in line 6 with ⲡⲡⲣⲉⲥⲃϵⲩ-.

[83] l. 116 ⲟⲩ; editor; Editor's restoration; [ⲟⲩ]ⲛ̄ likely the discourse particle ⲟⲩⲛ 'then, indeed' continuing the sense from line 7's 'he revealed forth in this manner.' Could alternatively be the start of an existential or qualitative clause; sense remains 'before this Hades.'

[84] l. 117 ⲁⲃ; editor; Editor's restoration; first two letters of ⲁⲃⲱⲗ ⲁⲃⲁⲗ 'to release forth' (in glossary). Soteriological infinitive: 'to release forth the living soul.'

[85] l. 124 ⲉⲧⲁⲩⲧⲱⲃⲍ; editor; Editor's restoration; relative perfect of ⲧⲱⲃⲍ̄ 'pray' with 3pl subject. Parallel to line 13 ⲉⲧⲁⲩⲧⲱⲃⲍ 'who prayed' and line 29 ⲛⲉⲧⲁⲩⲧⲱⲃⲍ. Refers back to the brothers who prayed for the soul.

[86] l. 125 ϯⲩⲭⲏ; editor; Editor's restoration; ⲛ̄ⲧ-[ϯⲩⲭⲏ] 'of the soul' — the relative subject of 'which he released forth.' Cf. ϯⲩⲭⲏ in line 1 (id 0).

[87] l. 125 ⲥ ⲁⲃⲁⲗ; editor; Editor's restoration; completes ⲁⲫⲃⲁⲗⲥ̄ ⲁⲃⲁⲗ 'he released her forth' (ⲃⲱⲗ ⲁⲃⲁⲗ 'release' in glossary, with 3sg.f object suffix -ⲥ̄).

What Is Pruned and What Is Cut; the Eye That Blossoms

Elaboration

The seal upon the arm — discrimination made permanent. T101 — why some withdrawals of evil are painless and some are felt: outer growths (hair, nails, surface) can be pruned without injury and grow again of themselves; structural members of the natural mind, when cut, are felt at once. The soul has learned which laying-off is which kind, and the seal binds what is structural while letting surface fall away. T102 — the differing manners by which the inner sight opens and the rational is loosed from the natural: in some quickly, in some after long delay, in some at the head, in some at the foot — the Lord accommodating this awakening to the particular state of each soul. The chapter survives only in fragments, but the surviving thread holds: the eye blossoms by the Lord's appointment, not the soul's striving.

SPIRITUAL READING

A question is asked: why is it that when something is trimmed from the soul's outer surface — a tip, an outgrowth — the soul feels no injury, yet when something is cut away from the body itself, from a member, the soul is pained at once?

The answer is given by likeness. The natural mind is as a ground, and the states established within it are as trees rooted in that ground. Some growths in the natural mind are like hair and the tip of the head and the end of a finger: they grow upon the outer surface, they can be pruned without injury, and they will rise again of themselves — they stand on their own without the soul needing to mourn them. Other growths are like trees that, once planted and grown, take their stand in the ground; if these are cut they spring up again another time. And there are still others which, when cut, do not grow back at all — once laid off, they are finished.

So it is with the affections and perceptions that have arisen in the natural mind. The flesh that arouses desire keeps coming forth out of itself, the way hair grows again at its own appointed times; it is fed by the impurities of what the soul takes in for its food, and so long as that intake continues, those outer growths return. The soul can prune them and prune them again, and feel no wound in its essential members; this is the surface trimming that costs nothing because what is being cut is not structural but only the outermost issuing.

But there are members of the natural mind that are structural: states woven into the body of the soul's life. To take one of these away is felt; the soul is pained immediately, because what is being cut is not surface but substance. These are the deeper trees, which when cut may yet grow back in another season; and these in turn must be distinguished from the deepest, which once removed do not return.

The teaching, then, is a doctrine of discrimination concerning regeneration. Not every laying-off is the same kind of laying-off. Some self-loves are surface outgrowths to be pruned often and without grief; some are rooted states that the Lord cuts at real cost to the soul's feeling, and which may return and need to be cut again; some, once removed, are gone for good. The soul is not to mistake the trimming of surface for the cutting of a member, nor to flinch at the trimming of surface as though a member were being lost. And it is to recognize that what keeps growing back of itself, returning through the impurities of its intake, is the outer kind — not a sign that regeneration has failed, but the ordinary condition of a flesh that arouses desire while the natural mind is still being fed from below.

(Much of the chapter survives only in fragments; the structure of question, bodily likeness, and threefold distinction among growths is clear, but the closing application to the impurities of food and to the desire-arousing flesh is partly conjectural from what remains.)

SPIRITUAL READING

The teaching here is badly broken, and what follows can only trace the surviving thread.

It speaks of those who pass through a brief affliction, a sickness that lasts only a little while, in which the rational is loosed forth from the natural so that the inner understanding can see what is otherwise hidden. The soul is not torn from its house; it is unbound for a moment, and in that moment the eye that belongs to the inner man opens. Some habitually undergo this and are returned, falling back upon their accustomed ground.

Others undergo it differently. With these the loosening does not come at one and the same hour but is delayed; they abide in waiting, and the release comes later, reaching them only at the lowest part of their state, at the foot rather than at the head. The names by which the inner things are called are loosed forth in them in their own time, not all at once.

The teaching seems to distinguish manners of this loosening — how it comes down into the deep places of the natural mind, how it issues forth from there, how the same operation works in this fashion in some and in another fashion in others. It speaks of seven men of one kind and three of another, and of the hour at which the light reaches them, when what is the Lord's is taken up into the light wholly, in the manner proper to the way it actually exists within them.

The substance of the chapter, so far as it can be made out, is that the brief opening of the inner sight, the loosening of the rational from its claim upon the natural, does not happen uniformly. The Lord accommodates this awakening to the particular state of each soul: to some quickly, to some after long delay, to some at the head of their being and to some only at the foot, and the pattern by which this happens belongs to the structure of the soul itself and to the moment the Lord has appointed for it. Beyond this the surviving text does not allow a confident reading.

APPARATUS

[1] l. 1 ⲛ̄ⲛⲓⲉⲉⲃⲉ — “the hair”; editor; Editor restoration. Sense uncertain. ⲓⲉⲃⲉ in glossary = 'tusks/fangs'; here in context of painless cutting (cf. lines 28-33: cutting hair on head, things on hands/feet, fingers/tips that grow back) likely refers to nails or claws — body protrusions cut without pain. Confidence low; could also be 'hair'

[2] l. 2 ⲣ̄ⲓⲏ̄; editor; Repeated chapter-number marker ⲣ̄ⲓⲏ̄ (=115) appearing within the chapter title; partially lost at end of line 22

[3] l. 8 ⲛ̄ⲛⲓⲉⲉ — “the hair”; editor; Editor restoration paralleling line 21; same uncertain term meaning nails/claws/sharp protrusions

[4] l. 9 ⲃⲉ ⲛ̄ — “of”; editor; Editor restoration completing ⲓⲉⲉⲃⲉ + genitive linker

[5] l. 9 ⲗⲁⲩⲉ — “at all”; pipeline restoration, confidence: low; 4 chars; ⲗⲁⲩⲉ 'anything/at all' completes the negative habitual ⲙⲁⲩⲓⲙⲉ ⲁⲣⲁⲩ ⲗⲁⲩⲉ 'they do not feel them at all,' the standard Coptic negative reinforcer. Fits parable: trimming the outer hair causes no felt pain whatever.

[6] l. 10 trace: ⲉ

[8] l. 11 trace: ⲣϵ

[9] l. 14 ⲥⲱⲙ — “body”; editor; Editor restoration: ⲡⲥⲱⲙⲁ 'the body'

[10] l. 15 trace: ⲟ . . . ⲙ

[12] l. 16 ϵ; editor; Editor's restoration of single letter completing the standard form ⲛ̄ⲕϵⲥⲁⲡ 'another time/turn' (cf. accumulated vocab).

[13] l. 16 ⲱⲃ — “a matter”; editor; ⲟⲩⲛ̄ †ⲱⲃ 'there is a matter' standard Coptic existential introducing the disciple's pending question; the disciple's question construction is completed by ϫ ⲙⲙⲁⲕ 'with you' in the next line.

[17] l. 23 trace: ⲣⲟ

[18] l. 23 ϫⲛ̄ⲕϵ — “some other”; editor; Editor's restoration: ϫⲙ̄- 'in' + demonstrative completing the existential clause ⲟⲩⲛ̄ ϫⲛ̄- 'there are in [those...]' which continues into line 9 as 'trees which when planted...'

[19] l. 24 ⲱⲡ; editor; Completes ⲱⲁⲩⲱⲱⲡϵ 'they (habitually) become' — Lyc habitual ⲯⲁⲩ-ⲯⲱⲡϵ. Standard verbal idiom.

[21] l. 27 abgerieben

[22] l. 28 ⲛⲧ; editor; Completes the qualitative ϵⲩⲧⲛ̄ⲧⲁⲛⲧ 'being likened' (cf. accumulated ⲧⲛⲧⲁⲛⲧ); same construction as lines 7-8.

[23] l. 29 ⲣⲏⲧϵ — “feet”; pipeline restoration, confidence: moderate; 4 chars; ⲁⲡⲟⲩⲣⲏⲧϵ ⲟⲩⲱⲍ 'to their feet again' — picks up the parable's standing-on-feet imagery from line 25 (ⲛ̄ⲥϵⲧⲱⲕ ⲁⲣϵⲧⲟⲩ); fits estimate exactly.

Two Essences and the Yes and Amen

Summary

The seal completed. T103 — the two essences from the beginning, what is given and what is claimed, the beautiful and the bitter, life and death: regeneration is the separating of the beautiful from the darkness, and at the end this separation is forever — many waters cannot mingle them again. T104 — the structural supports of the regenerated rational: the Great Mind, the inner image, twelve angels, seven pillars, the bound of love as wall, four bearing-up powers, twelve below, three great pillars, the Omophoros, the seeds in the firmaments. And the doctrinal close: the Yes and the Amen identified as the Calling and the Hearing — the soul's permanent answering, that which reigns over the whole work, gives the Divine Human into the conjunction of Father and Mother of Life, and refines, helps, and grants remembrance to the Living Soul. Many waters cannot quench love; the seal is set; the cycle is complete.

120 120 — Concerning the Two Substances — 120 Two substances are those existing from the beginning: ⸢they are⸣ the ⸢Light⸣ and the Darkness, the beautiful and the ⸢bitter, life and⸣ the death. separating the beautiful one forth from the Darkness.

SPIRITUAL READING

From the very beginning the soul stands between two conditions, and these two conditions have always been what they are. There is what the Lord gives — truth received, influx flowing through, the beautiful and the living — and there is what the soul has claimed for its own — the natural turned in upon itself, the bitter, the dead. These are not two stuffs contending in some outer field; they are the two states between which every rational soul finds itself, the light it has from above and the darkness it has from itself.

Regeneration is nothing other than the sorting of these two. The soul, illumined, learns to discriminate the beautiful from what has crept in beside it, and in that discrimination lays off what was never its own. What is given is recognized as given; what was claimed is let go. The beautiful is separated forth from the darkness, and the soul comes into the life it had been receiving all along.

SPIRITUAL READING

Much of this chapter survives only in pieces, but the surviving thread can be followed. It opens by enumerating the structural supports by which the rational is held in being: the Great Mind that exists above; the inner image being born within the natural; the twelve angels, the twenty-two; the seven pillars that stand fast; the bound of love that surrounds the natural mind as a wall; the four bearing-up powers stretched beneath the whole and supporting it under their strength; the earth and all the heavens that lie below them; another five which are the rational's nourishment, by which the cosmos of the natural mind stands firm at the place of the Lord's Calling; the Hearing answering; the Radiance shining; the Lord giving stable form to the rational; twelve powers standing below; three great pillars of strength bearing up under the order placed there; the firmaments which the Lord's operative power has set at their hour, and the seeds sown in them which are made manifest there in the perfection of the ten; the great bearing-up principle holding the natural mind fast in its power. These are the three great supports against what would oppose them.

Then the question is asked: what name shall be added upon the Blessed One in the prayer that is prayed? What is the Yes and the Amen?

The answer: these have come into being from the great ones of the powers, and they were given a name — the Yes is reckoned to the Calling, the Amen to the Answer. So then: the Calling and the Hearing — these are the soul's opening of its mouth to the Spirit and to petition before the Divine Human. They are not themselves the ones who reign as principles of life and of those who live; the Divine Human himself is the one who has come forth as the soul's redeemer, and he, the First Man, is sought through the life-bearing principle and through the Father of the living. But the Calling and the Hearing — the divine summons going forth and the soul's answering rising to meet it — these are what reign for the soul through this whole work. They reign over the states of greatness up until the moment the Divine Human and the soul are mingled with death; and they become helpers of the Divine Human in his ascent upward, giving him over into the conjunction of the Father of Life and the Mother of Life. They are refiners of the Living Soul: they are her helpers; they grant her remembrance — the holding-present of what she has received — whether through the established perceptions of the rational or through the very fashioning of the natural body in which the soul is to be formed again.

APPARATUS

[1] l. 4 ⲛⲉ — “they are”; editor; Editor's restoration; ⲡⲟⲩⲁⲓⲛⲉ 'the Light' continuing into ⲛⲉ on line 29 — the standard first member of the dualistic catalogue light/darkness

[2] l. 4 ⲟⲩⲁⲓ — “Light”; pipeline restoration, confidence: high; ⲡ is the visible trace at line-end and ⲛⲉ begins the next line; the word being split is ⲡⲟⲩⲁⲓⲛⲉ ('the Light'), the obligatory first member of the dualistic pair light/darkness in the Two Substances doctrine. Editor's note explicitly identifies this as 'ⲡⲟⲩⲁⲓⲛⲉ continuing into ⲛⲉ on line 29.'

[3] l. 5 ⲱⲉ ⲡⲱⲛϩ ⲙ̄ⲛ̄ — “bitter, life and”; pipeline restoration, confidence: high; Completes ⲡⲉⲧⲥⲁⲱⲉ ('the bitter') and continues the standard Manichaean triple-pair formula. With ⲡⲙⲟⲩ alone in section 5503, we need ⲡⲱⲛϩ ⲙ̄ⲛ̄ ⲡⲙⲟⲩ ('life and the death') as the third pair, paralleling Light/Darkness and beautiful/bitter. The triadic catalogue ⲡⲟⲩⲁⲓⲛⲉ ⲙ̄ⲛ̄ ⲡⲕⲉⲕⲉ / ⲡⲉⲧⲁⲛⲓⲧ ⲙ̄ⲛ̄ ⲡⲉⲧⲥⲁⲱⲉ / ⲡⲱⲛϩ ⲙ̄ⲛ̄ ⲡⲙⲟⲩ is the established Kephalaia formula for the Two Substances.

[4] l. 43 ⲁⲡⲥⲁⲛϩⲣⲉ — “on high”; pipeline restoration, confidence: low; ⲉⲧⲱⲟⲟⲡ 'which exists' takes a locative; 'Great Mind' is the highest faculty, so ⲁⲡⲥⲁⲛϩⲣⲉ 'in the height/above' fits the spiritual register and ~15 char span. Low because ⲍⲣⲏⲓ or other locative phrases are equally possible.

[5] l. 44 ⲟⲩⲥ; pipeline restoration, confidence: high; ⲡⲛ at line-end completes naturally to ⲡⲛⲟⲩⲥ 'the Mind'; spiritually exact — the Youth (Jesus as inner image being born within the natural) exists 'beneath the Mind' (ⲡⲛⲟⲩⲥ ⲛ̄ⲟⲩⲁⲓⲛⲉ, just named in 5506). Char count ⲟⲩⲥ = 3 fits within the est. 15 (rest of the line is further loss).

[6] l. 49 ⲙ̄ⲛ̄ ⲡ; pipeline restoration, confidence: moderate; 3-char slot before ⲡⲥⲁⲱϩ ⲛ̄ⲥⲧⲩⲗⲟⲥ 'the seven pillars' continues the additive list-pattern of the enumeration ('with the...'). ⲙ̄ⲛ̄ ⲡ= matches the connector used elsewhere in the chapter (ⲙ̄ⲛ̄ ⲡⲛⲁⲟ̄).

[7] l. 49 ⲣⲉⲧϩ; editor; ⲧⲏⲕ ⲁⲣⲉⲧ= idiom 'stand fast' (in glossary); the surviving ⲁⲣ[requires completion to ⲁⲣⲉⲧϩ

[8] l. 50 ⲙ̄ⲛ̄ ⲧ; pipeline restoration, confidence: moderate; 3-char slot before [ⲑⲁ]ⲗⲁⲥⲥⲁ 'sea' continues the additive enumeration. ⲙ̄ⲛ̄ ⲧ matches the feminine article needed for ⲑⲁⲗⲁⲥⲥⲁ.

[10] l. 51 ⲡϩ; editor; [ϩ]ⲧⲁⲩ = the standard Lycopolitan numeral 'four' (cf. ⲡϩⲧⲁⲩ in glossary)

[11] l. 51 ⲉ; pipeline restoration, confidence: moderate; ⲁⲧⲡ visible → completion to ⲁⲧⲡⲉ 'unto heaven' (ⲧⲡⲉ Lyc.). Fits 'angels stretched forth unto heaven' as the upward bearing of the cosmic supports.

[12] l. 52 ⲕⲟ; editor; completion of ⲕⲟⲥⲙⲟⲥ; standard editorial restoration

[13] l. 53 ⲡⲏ; pipeline restoration, confidence: low; 3-char demonstrative + relative ⲉⲧⲙⲡⲓⲧⲛⲉ 'the one which is below' — ⲡⲏ is a standard Lyc. demonstrative pronoun used to introduce identifying clauses ('which is the earth').

[14] l. 53 ⲩ; pipeline restoration, confidence: high; ⲧⲏⲣⲟ[ⲩ] 'all of them' — standard completion of the 'and all the heavens' phrase.

[16] l. 54 ⲛⲉⲧ — likely beginning of a relative clause

[17] l. 55 ⲕⲟ; editor; completion of ⲕⲟⲥⲙⲟⲥ

[18] l. 55 abgerieben — rubbed area between ⲛ̄ and ⲡⲧⲱϩⲙⲉ

[19] l. 56 ⲙⲛ ⲡ; editor; ⲡⲥⲱⲧⲙⲉ 'the Hearing' standardly paired with ⲡⲧⲱϩⲙⲉ 'the Calling' as the cosmic Call/Answer dyad

[20] l. 56 ⲙⲛ̄ⲓⲏ̄ⲥ̄; pipeline restoration, confidence: moderate; ~8 chars between 'the Hearing' and 'the Radiance'; the standard title is Jesus the Radiance (ⲓⲏⲥ ⲡⲡⲣ̄ⲓⲉ, lexicon). 'And Jesus the Radiance' fits the additive list and the spiritual progression (Hearing answers; Radiance illumines).

[21] l. 56 ⲉ; pipeline restoration, confidence: moderate; ⲙⲧⲡ visible → ⲙ̄ⲡⲧⲡⲉ 'of heaven' (Lyc. ⲧⲡⲉ); 'the Radiance of heaven' is a standard phrasing for Jesus the Radiance illumining from the height.

[22] l. 57 ⲉ; pipeline restoration, confidence: high; ⲡⲟⲩⲁⲓⲛ[ⲉ] standard completion to ⲡⲟⲩⲁⲓⲛⲉ 'the Light' — Adamas of the Light (lexicon: the Lord giving stable form to the rational).

[23] l. 58 abgerieben — rubbed stretch at line opening

[24] l. 58 ⲛ̄ⲭ — possibly opening of a Lycopolitan word with ⲭ for ϫ

[25] l. 59 ⲁⲭ[— possibly verb form ⲁϫⲱⲥ or similar

[26] l. 61 ⲉⲓⲛ; pipeline restoration, confidence: high; ⲛ_ⲉ frame with following 'twelve likenesses' makes the noun ⲛⲉⲓⲛⲉ 'the likenesses' (lexicon: ⲡⲉⲓⲛⲉ — form of correspondence). The line continues 'twelve powers standing on their feet in her', matching the twelve likenesses.

[27] l. 61 ⲉ ⲁⲣⲉⲧⲟⲩ; editor; ⲁϩⲉ ⲁⲣⲉⲧ= 'stand on the feet of' continues from ⲁϩ[to next line ⲣⲉⲧ[ⲟ]ⲩ; standard Lycopolitan idiom

[28] l. 62 ⲟ; editor; completing the idiom from previous line

[29] l. 63 ⲃⲓ ⲁϩ; pipeline restoration, confidence: low; 5 chars after ⲉⲧ-; the next line begins ⲛ̄ⲥⲧ[ⲩⲗ]ⲟⲥ ⲉⲩⲃⲓ ⲁϩⲣⲏⲓ 'pillars bearing up'. Reading the relative ⲉⲧⲃⲓ ⲁϩ[ⲣⲏⲓ] 'which bear up' fits the description of three great pillars of strength supporting the paiskos.

[30] l. 64 ⲩⲗ; editor; completion of ⲥⲧⲩⲗⲟⲥ 'pillars'

[31] l. 64 ⲓ; editor; editor's restoration ⲡⲁ]ⲥⲕⲟⲥ likely points to ⲡⲁⲓⲥⲕⲟⲥ 'the disc/shield' (in glossary as the cosmic firmament-disc borne by the Omophoros)

[32] l. 64 ⲁⲩⲱ; pipeline restoration, confidence: moderate; 3-char connector between 'the paiskos' and 'the other three' — additive ⲁⲩⲱ 'and' fits the surviving sense.

[33] l. 64 ⲙⲧ; editor; completion of ⲡⲕⲉϣⲁⲙⲧ 'the other three'

[34] l. 65 ⲁⲛ̄; pipeline restoration, confidence: high; ⲡⲓⲡⲛⲁ ⲉⲧ[ⲁⲛ̄] = the Living Spirit (lexicon: ⲡⲡⲛ̄ⲁ ⲉⲧⲁⲛ̄), explicitly named as the placer of the firmaments in the next phrase 'has placed them at that very hour'.

[35] l. 66 ⲃⲁ — opening syllable, possibly of a verb

[36] l. 67 ⲛⲧ — possibly opening of relative or genitive

[37] l. 67 ⲃⲣⲣⲉ; pipeline restoration, confidence: high; ⲛⲁ̄ ⲡ[ⲃⲣⲣⲉ] ⲉⲧⲥⲓⲧⲉ 'and the seeds which are sown there' — what is sown is seed (lexicon: ⲃⲣⲣⲉ = interior truths in potential). 4 chars exact.

[38] l. 67 ⲁϩⲁⲛ — directional prefix ⲁ-

[39] l. 68 ⲗⲟⲥ — ending of a Greek-loaned word, possibly ⲥⲧⲩⲗⲟⲥ 'pillar' or ⲁⲅⲅⲉⲗⲟⲥ 'angel'

[40] l. 68 ⲡⲓⲕ.ⲛⲉ — possibly demonstrative + noun

[41] l. 69 abgerieben — rubbed line-end

[42] l. 70 ⲛⲕ — possibly opening syllable

[44] l. 71 zerstört — remainder of line and entire next line destroyed

[45] l. 73 ⲱⲙⲟⲫⲟⲣⲟⲥ; pipeline restoration, confidence: moderate; 'These are the three great [N]' immediately after 5532 'great Omophoros' — fits the lexicon's Omophoros (the bearing-up principle in the rational) and the chapter's three great pillars of strength. Length ~9 close to est. 8.

[46] l. 74 unleserlich — illegible to line end

[47] l. 4 trace: . .

[48] l. 5 ⲣⲉⲛ; pipeline restoration, confidence: moderate; 3 chars + ⲛⲁⲥⲙⲁⲙⲉ 'shall be blessed'; the just-mentioned 'name' (ⲣⲉⲛ) is the natural subject — 'the name shall be blessed.' ⲣⲉⲛ = 3 chars exact.

[49] l. 5 ⲏⲗ ⲛⲍⲏ; editor; Editor's restoration completing ⲉⲧⲛⲁⲱⲗ[ⲏⲗ ⲛⲍⲏ]ⲧⲫ 'that shall be prayed unto him,' standard liturgical phrasing.

[50] l. 6 ⲙⲏⲛ; editor; Editor's restoration completing ⲡⲍⲁ[ⲙⲏⲛ] 'the Amen.'

[51] l. 7 ⲙⲏⲛ; editor; Editor's restoration completing ⲡⲍⲁ[ⲙⲏⲛ].

[52] l. 8 ⲛ; editor; Editor's restoration of relative ⲛ̄- prefix on ⲧⲁϩⲱⲡⲉ.

[55] l. 9 ⲏⲡ ⲁ; editor; Editor's restoration filling the parallel structure: 'the Yes is reckoned to the Calling, the Amen [is reckoned to] the Answer.'

[57] l. 10 ⲛⲧ; editor; Editor's restoration of ⲛ̄ⲧ at start of ⲛ̄ⲧⲁⲩ 'they.'

[58] l. 11 ⲁⲃⲁ; editor; Editor's restoration completing the directional ⲁⲃⲁⲗ 'forth.'

[59] l. 12 ⲟ ⲛⲧⲙⲉ; editor; Editor's restoration completing ⲣⲣⲟ 'reigned' and supplying ⲛ̄ⲧⲙⲉⲉⲩⲉ 'in the thought,' fitting the cosmic-faculty register.

[60] l. 13 ⲡⲱⲛ; editor; Editor's restoration of ⲡⲱⲛⲍ 'Life'; the standard pair 'Life and Father of those who live' recurs in line 12.

[62] l. 14 ⲁⲛ ⲁ̄; editor; Editor's restoration; ⲁⲛ likely 'also,' but the following ⲁ̄ⲉ is unclear in form.

[63] l. 15 ⲥⲁ ⲡ; pipeline restoration, confidence: low; ϣⲓⲛⲉ ⲛ̄ⲥⲁ 'sought after' is the standard Coptic idiom; the Father of the Living seeks after the Aromaios (= First Man, named on next line). 3 chars: ⲥⲁ ⲡ → 'after the [Aromaios]'.

[66] l. 21 ⲙ; editor; Editor's restoration of initial ⲙ of ⲙⲟⲩⲭⲧ̄ 'mingled' (per glossary).

[67] l. 21 trace: ⲕ

[69] l. 23 trace: ⲙ . . . ϵ

[72] l. 25 ⲡⲥⲱⲙⲁ; pipeline restoration, confidence: low; 5-char object of ⲍ̄ⲙ̄ 'in', paralleled by 'in the tree' and 'in the fashioning of the flesh' on next line. ⲡⲥⲱⲙⲁ 'the body' (lexicon) fits the structural register: the Living Soul receives Remembrance whether in the body, in the tree (perception), or in the fashioning of flesh.

SPIRITUAL LEXICON

A working lexicon derived from the surviving teachings. Each entry maps a Manichaean cosmological term to what it corresponds to in the doctrine. Coptic forms are given where attested. Where the same term carries an opposite sense, that is noted.

Cosmological Entities (30)

Father of Greatness — The Lord in his inmost — divine love itself, the source from which all influx proceeds, the unmeasurable Divine before any accommodation toward the soul. (First Father, Father of Truth, God of Truth, First standing-fast, the unnameable Father)

ⲡⲓⲱⲧ ⲛ̄ⲧⲙⲛⲧⲛⲁⲟ̄ · ⲡϣⲁⲣⲡ ⲛ̄ⲓⲱⲧ · ⲡⲓⲱⲧ ⲡⲛⲟⲩⲧⲉ ⲛ̄ⲧⲙⲏⲉ

Named 'Father of Greatness' because all the Lord's principles by which he goes forth proceed from him. He is unmeasurable, beyond name, beyond image. He is established alone in his substance, and the four other Greatnesses are revealed forth from him.

In reading: the Lord in his inmost; the Lord as divine love itself; the source from which all influx proceeds

First Man — The Divine Human — the form love and wisdom take going forth toward the soul; the Lord as Divine Humanity in whom the archetype of human being is held; the Lord accommodating into the form of humanity so the soul has a kindred to recognize. (Primal Man, Original Man, the First Living Man, Father of Mankind)

ⲡϣⲁⲣⲡ ⲛ̄ⲣⲱⲙⲉ

He goes forth from the Father, descends into the contest with the darkness, and is brought up by the Living Spirit — meaning the Lord's accommodation, taking the form of humanity, going down into the natural so the soul is met where it is. His five sons are the rational in five degrees.

Opposite sense: King of Darkness (the self asserting itself as 'I am')
In reading: the Lord as the Divine Human; the Lord going forth as the Divine Man; the divine humanity entering the soul's contest

Living Spirit — The Lord's operative divine power by which spiritual structure is built in the soul; the Lord as the operative force that orders the rational and raises the natural toward the spiritual. (the Spirit, Holy Spirit, Great Spirit, First Releaser)

ⲡⲛⲛⲁ ⲉⲧⲁⲛⲍ̄ · ⲡⲛⲛⲉⲩⲙⲁ ⲉⲧⲁⲛϩ

He brings up the First Man from the contest, builds the cosmos, fashions the storehouses, wears the three garments of wind, water, and fire to operate within the natural — meaning, the Lord operating to give structure, to raise what has fallen, and to set discrete degrees in their proper order.

In reading: the Lord's operative power; the Lord as operative force ordering the rational

Mother of Life — The divine principle of life-bearing in the Lord — the receptive matrix by which the soul is enlivened; the Lord at the register where his love is the source of the rational's living being. (Mother of the Living, Great Spirit (in this register), Mother of Mankind)

ⲧⲙⲉⲩ ⲙ̄ⲡⲱⲛⲍ̄ · ⲧⲙⲉⲩ ⲛ̄ⲧⲉ ⲡⲱⲛⲍ̄

She gives the right hand to the First Man at his contest, embraces him at his return, intercedes for the soul with the Father — meaning the Lord in his life-giving aspect, not a separate goddess. She is the receptive principle by which divine life is borne into the rational.

Opposite sense: Hyle / Enthumesis of Death (the self's counterfeit life-bearing)
In reading: the Lord as life-bearing matrix; the divine principle by which the soul is enlivened

Third Ambassador — The Lord's call going out to the rational at the moment the natural is ready to hear it; divine truth coming as accommodated revelation that summons the soul to recognize what flows through it. (the Ambassador, the Envoy, Embassy of Light)

ⲡⲙⲁⲍⲱⲁⲙⲧ ⲙ̄ⲡⲣⲉⲥⲃⲉⲩⲧⲏⲥ · ⲡⲡⲣⲉⲥⲃⲉⲩⲧⲏⲥ

He reveals his image and the Light is chosen forth from the cosmos — the Lord operating at the register where the rational is summoned to recognize what is received. His revelation marks the transition from passive mingling toward conscious discrimination.

In reading: the Lord's call to the rational; the Lord as accommodated divine revelation; the summoning of the soul to recognition

Jesus the Radiance — Divine truth shining forth — the Lord as illumining wisdom going to the rational; the active emission of light by which the soul is enabled to see what is given. (the Radiance, Jesus the Splendor (avoid), Jesus the Glorious)

ⲓⲏⲥ ⲡⲡⲣⲏⲉ · ⲓ̄ⲏ̄ⲥ̄ ⲡⲡⲣ̄ⲏⲉ

The Coptic name preserves the active verb of shining-forth (□□□□) and must not be flattened to 'Splendor.' He gives eternal life through himself, descends to take the likeness of angels, gathers the Light at the consummation. He is the Lord in his active illumining.

In reading: the Lord as divine truth illumining; the Lord shining forth as wisdom; the Lord giving understanding to the rational Virgin of Light — Divine receivability — the purity by which the Lord is received without corruption; the soul's capacity, when in order, to receive what flows through without claiming it. (Holy Virgin, Virgin of the Light, the Sophia)

ⲧⲡⲁⲣⲑⲉⲛⲟⲥ ⲙⲡⲟⲩⲁⲓⲛⲉ

She bears away the heart of the aeons by her image, draws the soul inward to herself — meaning, the perfect form of reception, the Lord at the register where his giving meets the soul's capacity to receive without claiming as its own.

Opposite sense: the defiled receiver; the self that claims what flows through

In reading: the Lord as pure receivability; the divine purity by which what flows through is received without distortion

Light Mind — The Lord ordering the rational — truth ordering the inner mind so that the rational can recognize what is its own and what is the Lord's; the Lord's operation of awakening discriminative understanding. (Mind of Light, Mind of Truth, great Mind)

ⲡⲛⲟⲩⲥ ⲛ̄ⲟⲩⲁⲓⲛⲉ · ⲡⲛⲁⲃ̄ ⲛ̄ⲛⲟⲩⲥ

He awakens sleepers, gathers those scattered, enters the soul to bind the proper members and loose the false. He works inside the natural mind to set each member of the rational into its right place, making the soul able to see in freedom.

Opposite sense: the bound mind; the rational organized by self-love

In reading: the Lord ordering the rational; truth ordering the inner mind; the Lord awakening discrimination in the soul

Beloved of Lights — The Lord at the register where divine love is recognized and returned — the Lord seen as he is loved, the principle of celestial love in receivable form. (Great Beloved, the Beloved) ⲡⲙⲉⲣⲓⲧ ⲛ̄ⲛⲟⲩⲁⲓⲛⲉ · ⲡⲛⲁⲃ̄ ⲙⲙⲉⲣⲓⲧ

He is the head of every honor — the Lord at the register where his love makes itself the object of love. The angels are reckoned to his house.

In reading: the Lord as celestial love; the Lord at the register where his love is returned

Great Builder — The Lord as divine order itself — the principle by which structure is given to the rational and the natural mind; the Lord operating to set bounds and fitted forms. (Great Architect, First Architect)

ⲡⲛⲁⲟ̄ ⲛⲉⲕⲱⲧ · ⲡⲛⲁⲃ̄ ⲛⲁⲣⲭⲓⲧⲉⲕⲧⲱⲛ

He builds the new aeon, establishes the prison-house of evils where they are to be bound at the end, fashions the orderly structure of regeneration. He is the Lord in his ordering aspect.

Opposite sense: the demiurge / Saklas (the self organizing apart from the Lord's pattern)

In reading: the Lord as divine order; the Lord ordering the structure of the rational

King of Glory — The Lord ruling — divine truth in dominion; the Lord recognized as supreme over the natural mind, established at the highest accommodated state. (King of the Lights)

ⲡ̄ⲣⲣⲟ ⲙⲡⲉⲁⲩ · ⲡⲛⲁⲟ̄ ⲛ̄ⲣⲣⲟ ⲙⲡⲉⲁⲩ

He sits enthroned in the seventh firmament, gives judgment of righteousness daily upon all the kingships of the firmaments, turns the wheels of the cosmos. The Lord at the register of governing rule.

Opposite sense: King of Darkness (the self asserting rule)
In reading: the Lord ruling; the Lord as divine truth in supremacy over the rational

Pillar of Glory — The ascent of the natural into conjunction with the spiritual — the path of regeneration as a structural fact; the rational fully formed as the way upward; the regenerated state shouldering what was the self's burden. (Perfect Man, the Column, Great Pillar of Praise, Great Mind)

ⲡⲥⲧⲩⲗⲟⲥ ⲙ̄ⲡⲉⲁⲩ · ⲡⲣⲱⲙⲉ ⲉⲧⲭⲏⲕ ⲁⲃⲁⲗ

He bears upward all that is to be raised, stands in the midst of the cosmos. The Lord's ascent operating in the rational, given as a structural pillar — also called the Perfect Man because the rational is fully formed only as it ascends.

Opposite sense: the descent into self-love; the column of darkness
In reading: the path of regeneration; the natural ascending into conjunction with the spiritual; the way by which the soul rises through the rational

Great Counsel — The conjugate movement of influx descending and reception returning — divine summons going forth from the Lord and the soul's hearing rising up to meet it; the structural form of the conversation between the Lord and the rational. (the Call and the Hearing, Counsel of Life, Tōhme and Sōtme together)

ⲡⲛⲁⲟ̄ ⲛ̄ⲥⲁⲭⲛⲉ · ⲡⲧⲱⲍⲙⲉ ⲙⲛ̄ ⲡⲥⲱⲧⲙⲉ · ⲡⲥⲁⲭⲛⲉ ⲛ̄ⲧⲉ ⲡⲱⲛ̄ⲍ

The Call (Tōhme) goes down from the Father to the rational; the Hearing (Sōtme) comes back up. Together they form the Great Counsel — the basic pattern of the soul's regeneration: the Lord's truth descending and the soul's reception ascending. Identified with the rational at its 'middle.'

Opposite sense: deafness; refusal to hear
In reading: the divine summons and the soul's answering; influx going forth and reception returning

Father of Life — A title of the Lord at the register where divine life proceeds, paired with the Mother of Life — the Lord as begetting principle of the rational's living being. (the Father (in life-giving register))

ⲡⲓⲱⲧ ⲛⲧⲉ ⲡⲱⲛ̄ⲍ

Together with the Mother of Life he establishes the Living Spirit and brings the cosmos into order. The Lord operating in his life-giving aspect.

In reading: the Lord as begetter of life; the Lord at the register where divine life proceeds

Five Great Greatnesses — The Lord at his five distinct registers as he goes forth — Father of Greatness, Mother of Life, Living Spirit, Third Ambassador, Jesus the Radiance — the complete unfolding of the divine outgoing toward the soul. (Five Greatnesses, five great ones)

ⲧⲟⲩ ⲙ̄ⲙⲛⲧⲛⲁϛ

Not five gods but the Lord articulated in five registers: source (Father), life-bearing (Mother), operative power (Spirit), call (Ambassador), illumining (Radiance). One Lord, five distinct principles.

In reading: the Lord at his five distinct registers as he goes forth toward the soul

King of Darkness — The self asserting itself as source — the soul's 'I am, and there is no other' turned against the Lord; the consolidated form of self-love as it claims what is the Lord's. (the Enemy, the Adversary, the chief archon, the dark king)

ⲡⲣ̄ⲣⲟ ⲛ̄ⲛⲁⲡⲕⲉⲕⲉ · ⲡⲭⲁⲭⲉ

Lion-faced and gold-bodied; he rises against the Lord, is cast down, and is finally bound at the consummation. NOT a separate evil god — the self taken in its most consolidated, ruling form, the soul's claiming organized as kingdom.

Opposite sense: First Man (the Lord as Divine Human)
In reading: the self claiming itself as source; the soul's self-assertion organized as ruling principle

Hyle / Matter / Enthumesis of Death — The disordered natural — what the soul has claimed and not yet learned is not its own; selfhood as the substrate of self-loving formation; the natural mind producing forms apart from recognition of source. (Matter, Hyle, Enthumesis of Death, the Image-Painter, the Mother of Giants)

ⲧⲍⲩⲗⲏ · ⲧⲉⲛⲑⲩⲙⲏⲥⲓⲥ ⲙⲡⲙⲟⲩ · ⲧⲍⲱⲣⲡⲁⲫⲟⲥ

She paints, fashions, gives birth to forms; she is also called the Enthumesis of Death — the natural mind when it has turned in on itself and now produces from claimed power. The Lord permits her formation so the vessel may take shape; she is finally bound and emptied at the end.

Opposite sense: the ordered natural mind; the Living Spirit's body
In reading: the disordered natural; what the soul has claimed and not yet laid off; the self producing forms apart from the Lord

Saklas — The self organizing the natural mind on its own terms; the chief shape of the soul's self-claiming, permitted by the Lord so that a vessel may form. (chief archon, Saklas the molder)

ⲥⲁⲕⲗⲁⲥ

He molds Adam after the image revealed by the Ambassador — meaning, the self permitted to take the form of humanity from the divine pattern, so the soul has a vessel of its own to operate from until it matures into recognition.

Opposite sense: Light Mind; Great Builder
In reading: the self organizing the natural mind on its own terms; the soul's chief self-claiming permitted as vessel-formation archons — Particular forms the self takes — specific self-loving arrangements of the natural mind; the manifold shapes the soul's claiming assumes when it organizes the natural without recognition of source. (rulers, principalities, the powers)

ⲛⲁⲣⲭⲱⲛ

They organize the storehouses of darkness, hold sway over the firmaments, mold Adam — meaning, the manifold particular shapes the soul's self-claiming takes when it organizes the natural. The Lord permits their forming because freedom requires a vessel.

Opposite sense: the holy ones; the rich; the angels
In reading: particular forms of the self; specific self-loving arrangements of the natural mind

Watchers — Disordered states of attention — the rational descending from its proper post and binding itself to lower things; the soul's faculty of watching turned downward and held there until the Lord acts. (Egregoroi, fallen Watchers, those who came down)

ⲛⲉⲓⲣⲏⲅⲟⲣⲟⲥ · ⲉⲓⲣⲏⲅⲟⲣⲟⲥ

They came down from the heavens, were bound in a chain forever in the prison of the darkened ones, begot the giants — the rational descending from order into self-love and remaining bound until the Lord's operation.

Opposite sense: the Five Watchers (the rational keeping its post)
In reading: disordered states of watching; attention turned downward and bound there abortions — Failed productions of the self — what the soul brings forth from itself which cannot live; the malformed generations of self-love that fall to the natural and form the substrate of further fall. (aborted ones, miscarried productions, those that fell)

ⲛⲍⲟⲩⲍⲉ

They fell down to the earth, were gathered by the Watchers, molded Adam — meaning, what the self produces apart from the Lord, which has no life and serves as the material for further self-loving formation.

Opposite sense: living offspring of the rational
In reading: failed productions of the self; what the soul brings forth that cannot live

Sin — The self's claim turned active — the soul's act of taking what is the Lord's as its own; the operative principle of self-love within the rational. (personified Sin, Nabe)

ⲡⲛⲁⲃⲉ

Sin runs upward to grasp the image of the Ambassador, mingles with the soul, settles into the body, is finally bound. NOT an external personal evil — the active form of the soul's self-claiming, the propriating motion itself.

Opposite sense: the living soul; righteousness
In reading: the self's active claiming; the soul's act of self-appropriation; self-love operative

Error — Falsity from evil — the wandering of the rational when it has lost its anchor in truth; the soul's state of being mis-led by the self's claim. (personified Error, Plane, the Going-Astray)

ⲡⲥⲁⲣⲙⲉ · ⲡⲡⲗⲁⲛⲏ

She is sent down with the storehouses, fills the cosmos through self-love and the metarrhismos of pleasure, is finally separated forth and cast into the bolos. The rational's state when it follows the self's claim.

Opposite sense: truth; the way of light
In reading: falsity from evil; the rational wandering apart from truth

Enmity — The opposed state of the self — the soul's claiming when it is most active in resistance to the Lord's influx; the contradiction of love. (hostility, the enemy state)

ⲧⲙⲛⲧⲭⲁⲭⲉ

The First Man seizes hold of the enmity. The self's most active form of resistance, structurally opposite to love. The whole enmity is finally fettered within the rational.

Opposite sense: love; conjunction In reading: the opposed state of the self; the soul's claiming as resistance to influx demons — Lower particular self-loves — the self's individual cravings and disordered affections that operate beneath the level of organized rule. (daimones, lower disordered states)

ⲛⲁⲁⲓⲙⲱⲛ · ⲛⲁⲁⲓⲙⲱⲛ

They surround the body, work to detain the rational. The self's diffuse cravings and disordered affections.

Opposite sense: angels; ordered affections
In reading: lower particular self-loves; disordered cravings of the natural mind

Father of Life and Mother of Life conjunction — The Lord at the register where life proceeds in conjunction — divine love and divine wisdom together giving life to the rational; the Lord's pairing principle. (divine pair, the begetting principles)

ⲡⲓⲱⲧ ⲙ̄ⲛ̄ ⲧⲙⲉϥ ⲛⲧⲉ ⲡⲱⲛⲍ̄

They establish the Living Spirit together; they appoint the storehouses. The pair of life-giving principles in their conjunction — divine love and wisdom acting together.

In reading: the Lord giving life through conjunction of love and wisdom

Adamas of Light — A name for the Lord ordering the rational at the level of stable form — the Lord as the standing of the natural mind firm against falling. (Light-Adam)

ⲡⲁⲁⲙⲁⲥ ⲙⲡⲟⲩⲁⲓⲛⲉ

He stands fast with foot upon the head of the demon-substance, guarding the cisterns. The Lord's operation that stabilizes the natural mind at its proper standing.

Opposite sense: Adamas of darkness; the self-form
In reading: the Lord giving stable form to the rational

Jesus the Youth (Lilou) — A title of the Lord at the register of the formed image born within the natural — the Lord as the regenerated form taking shape in the rational. (the Young Jesus, Jesus pa-Lilou, the Youth)

ⲓⲏⲥ ⲡⲗⲓⲗⲟⲩ · ⲡⲁⲓⲗⲟⲩ

The Youth set in the midst, born within the rational, the icon of the right-handed call. The Lord at the register where the New Man begins to take shape.

In reading: the Lord as the regenerated form taking shape in the rational; the inner image being born great judges / King's judges — The Lord's discriminating operations at particular registers — each judge a particular faculty of judgment in the rational. (judge of truth, judges of the firmaments)

ⲛⲣⲉϩⲍⲉⲛ

Great judges in the air, in the firmaments, of righteousness. Each judge is the Lord at a register of discrimination, with the twelvefold structure as the complete cycle.

Opposite sense: false judgment
In reading: the Lord's discriminating operations at particular registers

King of Honor — The Lord at the register of governing the seven firmaments — the Lord ruling the discrete degrees of the rational and giving daily judgment. (Great King of Honor)

ⲡⲣ̄ⲣⲟ ⲙⲡⲧⲁⲓⲟ

He sits in the seventh firmament, gives a judgment of righteousness daily upon all the kingships of the firmaments. The Lord as the active ruling judge of the rational's daily states.

In reading: the Lord ruling the discrete degrees; the Lord giving daily judgment

Cosmic Elements & Substances (13)

light — What the Lord gives — truth received; influx in its proper register; what the soul recognizes as not-its-own. (divine light, the light of truth)

ⲡⲟⲩⲁ̈ⲓⲛⲉ

Light is not a cosmic substance but the soul's reception of what flows from the Lord. The 'light mingled in darkness' is influx that the soul has not yet learned to recognize as the Lord's; the 'light separated forth' is the soul, illumined, recognizing in freedom.

Opposite sense: darkness

In reading: what the Lord gives; truth received as the Lord's; influx recognized as not-the-soul's-own darkness — What the soul has claimed — the natural turned in on itself; the absence of recognized truth; the self asserting that what flows through it is its own. (the dark)

ⲡⲕⲉⲕⲉ

Darkness is not a separate cosmic stuff but the condition of the soul that has claimed and not yet learned to lay off. It 'envelops' the light because the self covers what it receives with its own seal of ownership.

Opposite sense: light

In reading: what the soul has claimed; the natural turned in on itself; the self's claim asserted fire — Love / will — fire gives light its existence; the active principle that animates wisdom. Living fire = divine love; fire of darkness = self-love consuming. (living fire, fire of darkness, great fire)

ⲧⲥⲉⲧⲉ

Living fire is divine love giving wisdom its existence. Fire of darkness is self-love that consumes what it receives. Same correspondence — fire as love — different direction. The great consummation-fire is divine love withdrawing what cannot be conjoined.

Opposite sense: same word, two directions: living fire vs. fire of darkness

In reading: love that gives wisdom its life (positive); self-love as devouring fire (negative) water — Truth in the natural degree — what sustains the soul's natural life. Living water = truth ordered; salt water = truth perverted by self-love. (waters, living water, salt sea)

ⲡⲙⲁⲩ · ⲙⲙⲟⲩ̈ⲓⲉⲩⲉ

Living water (positive): truth received in the natural that nourishes. Salt sea (negative): natural truth that has been turned bitter by the self. The water of life is the soul's natural mind ordered by truth received.

Opposite sense: same word, two directions

In reading: truth in the natural degree (positive); natural truths perverted by self-love (negative, as salt sea) wind — Thought / perception — the medium of communication between mind and outer; the moving register by which the rational reaches what it considers. (air, breath, living wind)

ⲡⲧⲏⲩ · ⲡⲁⲏⲣ

Living wind that breathes (positive) is thought ordered by truth. Wind in its disordered form is the rational's stirring without anchor. The four winds are perception extended in all directions.

Opposite sense: storm-wind of disordered thought

In reading: thought as movement of perception; the medium by which the rational reaches what it considers smoke — Falsity from evil — what obscures light; thought blackened by self-love so that wisdom cannot be received clearly. (kapnos)

ⲡⲕⲁⲡⲛⲟⲥ · ⲡⲣⲏⲭⲉ

The world of smoke is the natural mind in its aspect where self-love has turned thought into obscurity. The lion-faced king of smoke is mind ruling itself in falsity-from-evil.

Opposite sense: transparent thought; clear perception

In reading: falsity from evil obscuring truth; thought blackened by self-love earth / land — The natural mind — the ground where seeds (interior truths) grow; the substrate of formation, two-natured according to whether ordered or claimed. (ground, soil, land of light, land of darkness)

ⲡⲕⲁⲍ

The land of light is the natural mind ordered, where truths grow. The land of darkness is the natural mind disordered. Same ground, two states. The 'new land' is the regenerated natural.

Opposite sense: land of light vs. land of darkness — same ground, two states

In reading: the natural mind as ground; the substrate where interior truths take root abyss — The lowest state of the natural mind — where self-love has its root, where the rational is most enclosed by its own claiming. (Deep, pit, Noun)

ⲡⲛⲟⲩⲛ · ⲡⲱⲓϫ

Not a place but a state — the soul's farthest from recognition of source, the self at its most claiming, the depth of self-love.

Opposite sense: the height; the upper place; the inmost

In reading: the lowest state of the natural; the soul's farthest from recognition; where self-love has its deepest hold sea — Natural truth in the mass — particularly when stirred by self-love it becomes the salt sea, falsity flowing; natural perceptions taken collectively. (thalassa, ocean, great sea)

ϥⲁⲗⲁⲥⲥⲁ

The great sea surrounds the cosmos as the bound of the natural. Pearls (precious truths) are formed in it; storms in it are disorder of natural perceptions.

Opposite sense: still waters of received truth

In reading: natural truth in the mass (general sense); natural perceptions stirred by self-love (when bitter or salt) bitterness — Falsity from evil tasted; what should sustain the soul instead afflicts when the self has turned natural goods to its own ends. (bitter taste, poison, wormwood)

ⲛⲥⲓⲱⲉ · ⲍⲁⲩ

The bitter taste of fruits of darkness is what the self produces from natural goods. The bitter tree, bitter fruit. What is given to nourish becomes bitter when claimed.

Opposite sense: sweetness

In reading: falsity from evil as bitter taste; what was meant to sustain afflicting through claiming sweetness — Good of truth received — truth tasted as it is meant; what nourishes when received in its proper order. (sweet, honey-like)

ⲛϩⲗⲟⲟ · ⲛⲕⲛⲁⲍ

The sweetness of waters and the fruit of light corresponds to good-of-truth received. The land of sweetness is the natural mind in right order.

Opposite sense: bitterness

In reading: good of truth received; truth tasted in its proper order spirit / pneuma — The rational at its highest, where divine influx is most directly received; or, in the negative, the breath of self-love at its most operative. (pneuma)

ⲛⲛⲁⲁ̄

Living spirit (positive); spirit of darkness (negative). The most interior aspect of the rational, in either direction.

Opposite sense: spirit of darkness

In reading: the rational at its highest, receiving influx (positive); the breath of self-love (negative) soul / psyche — The rational and its life — the whole inner nature of the human being as it receives life from the Lord; the complete inner life-bearing capacity. (psyche)

ⲦⲨⲬⲎ

The living soul stretched through the cosmos in suffering; the soul to be redeemed. The whole inner life of the human as related to the Lord.

Opposite sense: dead soul

In reading: the rational and its life; the inner life of the human as it relates to the Lord

Structural Terms (53)

storehouse — States of the natural mind preserved in their proper order by the Lord — interior reservoirs of received good and truth that the soul draws upon. (tamion, treasury, granary, treasure-chamber)

ⲚⲦⲁⲘⲒⲞⲚ

The First Man keeps guard over the five storehouses; the Father's hidden storehouses are where the powers wait until summoned. Each storehouse is a particular ordered state of the natural mind, holding what has been received until called forth.

Opposite sense: dwellings of darkness; storehouses emptied
In reading: states of the natural mind preserved in proper order; interior reservoirs of received good and truth firmament — The fixed boundary by which one degree is separated from another so influx can be received without collapse; discrete degrees of the rational held distinct. (sky, vault, stereoma)

ⲛⲥⲧⲉⲣⲉⲱⲙⲁ

The ten firmaments above; the seven firmaments. They are not domes but discrete degrees fixed by the Lord so that what flows down can be received in order without confusion.

Opposite sense: collapse of degrees; mingling of what should be distinct
In reading: the fixed boundary between discrete degrees; the boundary by which influx is received without collapsing the orders wheel — The recurrent process by which the soul is purified, again and again, in freedom; cyclic regeneration; the natural mind's revolving through states under the Lord's ordering. (cycle, trochos, wheel of stars)

ⲡⲧⲣⲟⲭⲟⲥ

The Wheel turns above the firmaments, drawing up and casting down. Not a literal cosmic mechanism but the recurrent purification of the rational — the cycle of states by which the soul is again and again refined as the King of Glory turns the wheels.

Opposite sense: frozen state; no movement of regeneration
In reading: the cyclic process of regeneration; the recurrent purification of the rational ship / vessel / chariot — A doctrinal vessel carrying truth through the natural — the means by which doctrine is borne over the waters of natural perception; the Lord's ten chariots are the orderly conveyances of his truth. (vessel, chariot (harma), boat, ship of light)

ⲡϧⲁⲓ ⸱ ϩⲁⲣⲙⲁ

The ships of light (sun and moon as vessels), the ten chariots Jesus mounts, the vessel of light the Ambassador inhabits. Each ship is a particular vehicle of accommodated truth carrying it through the natural mind.

In reading: a doctrinal vessel carrying truth through the natural; the conveyance of divine truth through the rational gate — The opening between degrees — where one state opens into another; the passage by which influx enters or recognition rises. (door, ro)

ⲡⲣⲟ

Gates of the firmaments through which the chosen rises; gates of the body opening to perceptions; gate of life vs. gate of death. Each gate is a particular passage from one state to another.

Opposite sense: shut gate; closed degree
In reading: the opening between degrees; the passage between states seal — The mark of a state's permanence — what fixes a particular order or claim into the soul's substance; the imprint of either the Lord's order or the self's claim. (imprint, character (charaktēr))

ⲡⲧⲁⲃⲉϩ

The Lord's seal upon the body; the seal of the prow; the twelve seals of the wheel. Seals are how an inner state is fixed permanently into the natural — whether the Lord's order or the self's claim.

Opposite sense: no seal; unfixed state
In reading: the mark fixing a state into the soul's substance; the imprint of order or claim bond / chain — What holds in place — the self's grip when the soul has claimed and is held by what it claimed; what fixes a state, whether the Lord binding the self or the self binding the soul. (chain, fetter, snah, mrre)

ⲙ̄ⲣⲣⲉ ⸱ ⲡⲥⲛⲁϩ ⸱ ⲙⲣⲡⲉ

Bonds and chains by which the rational is held by what it has appropriated; the bond by which the self is finally bound at the consummation. Two directions of the same correspondence: what binds the self and what binds the soul.

Opposite sense: loosening; raising free
In reading: what holds the soul in a state; the self's grip on what it has claimed aeon — A state in process — a particular degree of the soul's formation as it moves through regeneration; not a temporal period but a structural mode. (age, age-state)

ⲛⲁⲓⲱⲛ

The aeons of the Greatness; the new aeon. Each aeon is a particular state in which the soul exists as it moves through regeneration — not a chunk of time but a phase of being.

Opposite sense: aeon of darkness vs. aeon of light
In reading: a state in process; a degree of the soul's formation cosmos — The natural mind in formation — taken as a whole, the natural mind under construction or in regeneration; the structured field of the soul's outer life. (world, universe, the All)

ⲡⲕⲟⲥⲙⲟⲥ · ⲡⲧⲏⲣⲉ̄

The cosmos surrounded by the fire-wall, fashioned by the Living Spirit. The whole natural mind, with all its degrees, taken as one structure; the field within which the rational is formed.

Opposite sense: cosmos of darkness vs. cosmos of light
In reading: the natural mind as a whole in formation; the structured field of the soul's outer life garment — External truths that clothe spiritual meaning — what the soul wears; the outer expression of inner state, the layers of accommodation. (robe, tunic, clothing)

ⲛϫⲃⲥⲱ · ⲛϫⲃⲥⲁⲩⲉ

The five garments of the First Man (the elements as armor); the new garment of the New Man; the garment of light from the Virgin. Each garment is a layer of truth or appearance the soul puts on or off as the inner state changes.

Opposite sense: nakedness; stripped state
In reading: external truths clothing inner states; the outer expression of an inner state likeness — The form of correspondence — how the spiritual takes shape in the natural; the relation by which a thing carries its source. (image (eikōn / hikōn), form (eine), appearance)

ⲡⲉⲓⲛⲉ · ⲟⲩⲉⲓⲛⲉ · ⲧϩⲓⲕⲱⲛ

The Lord's image revealed by the Ambassador, the icon of the New Man, the likeness of light. □□□□□ must always be 'likeness,' not varying as form/image/resemblance. Likeness is the structural relation of correspondence itself.

Opposite sense: false likeness; counterfeit image
In reading: the form of correspondence; how the spiritual takes shape in the natural; the relation by which a thing carries its source

Zone — The natural's complete circuit — the bound within which the natural mind operates as a whole; the structural belt enclosing the cosmos. (belt, girdle, zōnē)

ⲧϫⲱⲛⲏ

The Zone hangs within the cosmos; within it the strongholds and the wheel revolve. The full extent of the natural in its bound, the circuit of the natural mind taken as one enclosing structure.

In reading: the complete circuit of the natural; the structural belt of the natural mind bolos / clod / tomb — The place where the self is finally bound at the end of regeneration — the gathered mass of self-love sealed off forever. (clod, lump of earth, tomb at the end)

ⲡⲃⲱⲗⲟⲥ · ⲡⲧⲁϕⲟⲥ

The bolos of the last age, the tomb where the self is shut in at the consummation. NOT a literal tomb but the final sealing of self-love away from life. The Enemy is finally cast into it and bound forever.

Opposite sense: the new aeon of life
In reading: the place where the self is finally bound; the gathered mass of self-love sealed at the end watch — The proper post of a faculty — where the rational is set to keep order; the state of attentive maintenance against falling. (watch-post, vigil, station)

ⲟⲩⲣⲱϣⲉ · ⲣⲱϣⲉ

Five watches in the Zone; watches of the Pherrokatochos, the King of Glory, the Pillar, the Omophoros. Each watch is a particular state of attentive presence by which the order of the rational is maintained.

Opposite sense: abandoned watch; the fallen Watcher
In reading: the proper post of a faculty; the state of attentive maintenance stronghold — A fixed structure that holds a state firm — defensive enclosure of the self, or fortified preservation of received truth, depending on direction. (fortress, manchiore)

ⲙⲁⲛⲭⲓⲟⲣⲉ

Three strongholds of darkness within the Zone; stronghold of fire. Each is a fixed structure within the natural mind that holds a particular state firm against dissolution.

Opposite sense: open state; collapsed enclosure
In reading: a fixed structure holding a state firm dwelling-place — A state where a particular love takes up residence — the abode of an interior love taken structurally. (tabernacle, mansion, abode, ouēh)

ⲡⲟⲩⲱⲏ · ⲙⲁⲛⲱⲡⲉ

The dwelling-place of fleshes, the tabernacle of the living spirit. Each dwelling is the state of a particular love, with all that flows from it.

Opposite sense: dwelling of evils; mansion of self-love
In reading: a state where a particular love takes up residence

Omophoros — The bearing-up principle in the rational — what supports the whole structure from below; the celestial good that holds the natural mind in being. (Bearer, shoulder-bearer, great Bearer)

ⲡⲱⲙⲟⲫⲟⲣⲟⲥ

The great Omophoros bears up under all the burdens, sets foot on the lower lands. The structural bearer who upholds — the Lord operating to hold the natural from sinking into the abyss.

Opposite sense: collapse of support
In reading: the bearing-up principle that supports the rational from below; the celestial good holding the natural mind in being

Pherokatochos / Holder — A name for the Lord ordering the highest degree of the rational — the Lord holding the inmost mind firm against falling, the keeper-fast of the natural mind's interior. (the Holder, Pherrokatochos)

ⲡⲫⲉⲣⲟⲕⲁⲧⲟⲭⲟⲥ · ⲡⲫⲉⲣⲣⲟⲕⲁⲧⲟⲭⲟⲥ

He stands fast in the Great Mind, in the upper place. The Lord operating to hold the rational at its highest post against the self's pulling-down.

Opposite sense: collapse of the highest order
In reading: the Lord holding the highest of the rational firm; the keeper of the natural mind's interior order

Last Andrias / Last Statue — The complete gathering of all that is recognized as the Lord's at the consummation — the final form of regeneration, the soul fully come into itself. (Panaretos at the end, the final image, the consummation-image)

ⲡⲁⲛⲇⲣⲉⲓⲁⲥ ⲛ̄ϩⲁⲉ · ⲡⲁⲛⲁⲣⲉⲓⲁⲥ

The Last Andrias rises at the end when all that is the Lord's has been gathered together. The consummation of the soul's regeneration as one figure.

Opposite sense: the bound self in the bolos
In reading: the complete gathering of recognized truth at consummation; the final form of regeneration

Five Worlds of Darkness — The natural mind in five aspects when ruled by self-love — fully articulated selfhood; smoke/fire/wind/water/darkness as five orders of self-love. (five kosmoi of darkness)

ⲡϯⲟⲩ ⲛ̄ⲕⲟⲥⲙⲟⲥ ⲙ̄ⲡⲕⲉⲕⲉ

Smoke (mind in falsity), fire (love in self-love), wind (thought disordered), water (truth perverted), darkness (claim itself). Five aspects of the natural mind organized as the self.

Opposite sense: Five Storehouses of Light
In reading: the natural mind in five aspects when ruled by self-love

Five Storehouses of Light — The natural mind in five aspects when ordered by the Lord's good — fully articulated good; the rational kept in its proper degrees by the Five Sons. (five tamia of light)

ⲡⲧⲟⲩ ⲛ̄ⲧⲁⲙⲓⲟⲛ

The five Sons of the First Man preserve the five storehouses. The natural mind in its right aspects, each held by one of the rational's five degrees.

Opposite sense: Five Worlds of Darkness
In reading: the natural mind in five aspects when ordered by the Lord's good

Three Cosmic Ages / Three Times — The three structural periods of regeneration — descent into the contest, formation of the cosmos, return through revelation; the arc of the soul's whole regeneration. (three kairoi, three periods)

ⲡⲱⲁⲙⲧ ⲛ̄ⲕⲁⲓⲣⲟⲥ

First time: from the descent of the First Man to his return. Middle time: the formation of the cosmos under the Living Spirit. Third time: from the Ambassador's revelation to the consummation. Phases of the soul's regeneration.

In reading: the three structural periods of regeneration: descent, formation, return

Three Wars — The three contests of regeneration — phases of the rational's struggle with the self; the structural form of the soul's purification. (three contests)

ⲡⲱⲁⲙⲧ ⲙⲡⲟⲗⲉⲙⲟⲥ

First, second, third (and a fourth) wars between the Sons of Light and Sons of Darkness. Phases of the soul's regeneration: the rational's contest with the self in successive registers.

In reading: the three contests of regeneration

Three Vessels (Wind, Water, Fire) — The three accommodations of the Lord's operative power into the natural — three vehicles by which the Living Spirit acts in the rational. (three garments of Living Spirit)

ϣⲁⲙⲧⲉ ⲛ̄ⲍ̄ⲃⲥⲱ

The Living Spirit wears the three garments of wind, water, and fire when he comes to build the cosmos. Each garment is an accommodation by which the Lord's operative power can act at a particular degree.

In reading: the three accommodations of operative power into the natural

Two Substances / Two Essences — Light and darkness as the two conditions of the same soul — what is given (light) and what is claimed (darkness); NOT two cosmic stuffs but two states between which the soul is, and which are sorted in regeneration. (light and darkness, two natures)

ⲟⲩⲥⲓⲁ ⲥⲛⲧⲉ

CRITICAL: not two cosmic substances. The two essences are the two states of the same soul — what flows from the Lord and what the soul has appropriated. Regeneration is the soul, illumined, sorting these two in freedom.

In reading: the two conditions of the same soul: what is given (light) and what is claimed (darkness)

Twelve Aeons of Greatness — The complete circuit of states the soul passes through in formation toward the Lord — the twelvefold completeness of the divine call. (twelve great ones, twelve hours)

ⲙⲛⲧⲥⲛⲁⲩⲥ ⲛⲁⲓⲱⲛ ⲛⲧⲙⲛⲧⲛⲁⲟ̄

The twelve great rich gods who are the first calls. Twelve hours of each great day. The fullness of states in the divine outgoing.

Opposite sense: twelve zodia (when turned by self-love)

In reading: the complete circuit of states the soul passes through toward the Lord

Twelve Judges — The Lord's discrimination in twelve registers — the complete operation of judgment by which states are sorted; the structural fullness of divine discrimination. (judges of righteousness)

ⲙⲛⲧⲥⲛⲁⲩⲥ ⲛⲣⲉϩⲍⲉⲛ

Twelve judges of might who give judgment of righteousness. The full structure by which the Lord discriminates — at every register and every degree.

Opposite sense: false judgment

In reading: the Lord's discrimination in its twelve registers

Five Mysteries of First Man — The five operations by which the rational is sent forth and brought back — the structure of the soul's mission and return; five marks of the rational's covenant with the Lord at outgoing and return. (peace, right hand, embrace, worship, chirotonia)

ⲡⲓⲧⲟⲩ ⲙ̄ⲙⲩⲥⲧⲏⲣⲓⲟⲛ

Peace, right hand, embrace, worship, chirotonia. Five operations of the rational's outgoing into the contest and its return. The structural form of the rational's covenant with the Lord.

In reading: the five operations by which the rational is sent forth and returned

Land of Light — The inmost state of the soul where the Lord dwells — the celestial degree of the regenerated rational; the mansion of love prepared by the Lord. (country of the Living, mansion of the Father)

ⲡⲕⲁϩ ⲙ̄ⲡⲟⲩⲁⲓⲛⲉ

Where the gods, angels, and rich ones dwell, where the Father is established. The celestial state of the soul — the interior heaven.

Opposite sense: land of darkness

In reading: the inmost state where the Lord dwells; the celestial degree of the regenerated rational wreath / crown — The mark of completed regeneration — the rational fully formed and recognized as the Lord's; the crowning sign of conjunction. (crown, stephanos, klam, klom)

ⲡⲕⲗⲁⲙ · ⲧⲕⲗⲟⲟⲛⲉ

The wreath of light, the diadem given by the third angel. Sign of the soul's regeneration consummated.

Opposite sense: stripped of crown

In reading: the mark of completed regeneration; the crowning sign of conjunction the All / Plērōma — The complete structure of what is — taken as one ordered whole; the rational and natural together as the field of the Lord's operation. (the Whole, ptērf)

ⲡⲧⲏⲣⲫ̄

The All bears under all things; the Pillar of Glory bears up under the All. The total structure within which the soul exists and is regenerated.

In reading: the complete ordered whole of the rational and natural way / path — The course by which the soul moves through states — the order of regeneration as a way to be walked. (road, mait)

ⲡⲙⲁⲓⲧ

Eight paths of darkness, four paths of light. Each path is a course through states — the rational's way home, or its wandering away.

Opposite sense: wandering

In reading: the course of regeneration; the way through states wellspring / source — A point of issuing — where a state has its origin; the source-point from which a particular order or evil flows. (panchōch, fountain)

ⲡⲁⲛⲭⲱⲭ

The wellspring of all evil; the wellspring of demons. The source-point of a particular tendency in the natural mind.

In reading: a point of issuing; the source from which a state flows kingdom / reign — The state of dominion in the rational — what rules the natural mind; the kingdom of the Lord = regeneration achieved, kingdom of darkness = the self ruling. (kingship, rule, mntrro)

ⲧⲙⲛ̄ⲧⲣ̄ⲣⲟ

The kingdom — whether of the Lord or of the self — is the state where one principle rules. The new aeon is the regenerated kingdom.

Opposite sense: fall from rule

In reading: the state of dominion in the rational captivity language (rejected reading) — STAGE 5 NOTE: Where the corpus uses 'captivity,' read it as the self's binding of itself or the soul's self-binding through claiming. NEVER as substantial trapping of light particles. The Lord does not need to extract; the soul needs to recognize. (captives, prisoners, trapped light)

ⲁⲓⲭⲙⲁⲗⲱⲥⲓⲁ

When the Coptic uses captivity language, this is the self's self-binding through claiming what was the Lord's. Stage 5 must NEVER produce a 'rescue from prison-planet' reading. The self binds itself; the soul is illumined to recognize.

Opposite sense: recognition; freedom in regeneration

In reading: the soul self-bound by claiming, awaiting recognition; never read as captivity-of-substance

Five Sons of First Man — The rational in its five degrees as it goes forth from the Divine Human — the rational accommodating into the natural through five discrete operations. (five children of First Man, five elements as armor)

ⲛϯⲟⲩ ⲛⲱⲏⲣⲉ ⲙⲡⲱⲁⲣⲡ ⲛⲣⲱⲙⲉ

They go down into the contest with darkness as armor of the First Man; they are the five elements he wears. The rational in five degrees of accommodation downward.

Opposite sense: five sons of darkness
In reading: the rational in five degrees going forth from the Divine Human; the rational accommodating into the natural

Five Sons of Living Spirit — The rational in its five degrees as it operates upward in regeneration — the rational under the Living Spirit's ordering, raising what was below. (five sons of Spirit, five Sons of the Living)

ⲛ̀ⲑⲟⲩ ⲛ̄ⲱϩⲣⲉ ⲙ̄ⲡⲡⲛⲁ ⲉⲧⲁⲛⲍ

They bear up the burdens of the cosmos; they correspond to the Five Sons of the First Man in upward direction. The rational at the same five registers, but operating to raise rather than to descend.

In reading: the rational in five degrees as it operates upward in regeneration

Twelve Hours of Day / Twelve Wisdoms — The complete cycle of states of the rational illumined — twelve degrees within the great day of regeneration; the structure of wisdom in fullness. (twelve hours of light, Jesus the Radiance's hours)

ⲙⲛⲧⲥⲛⲁⲩⲥ ⲛⲟⲩⲛⲟⲩ · ⲙⲛⲧⲥⲛⲁⲩⲥ ⲛⲥⲟⲫⲓⲁ

The twelve hours of the great day are the twelve wisdoms — the days of complete illumination. Each hour is a particular degree of the rational under truth.

Opposite sense: twelve hours of night (states under self-love)
In reading: the complete cycle of states of the rational illumined; the structure of wisdom in fullness twelve cities of the Watchers — Settled disorders established by the rational's fall — fixed structures of self-love organized as if they were cities; selfhood given urban architecture. (fixed cities, settled disorders)

ⲙⲁⲃⲧⲉⲥⲉ ⲛ̄ⲡⲟⲗⲓⲥ

The Watchers ordered twelve cities for their sons — fixed structures of the self organized urbanely.

Opposite sense: ordered cities of light
In reading: settled disorders established as fixed structures of self-love metarrhismos / transmigration — The transfer of a state from one substrate to another — a soul's particular condition passing from one form to the next; the corpus's structural way of speaking about the persistence of states. (transmutation, metangismos)

ⲙⲉⲧⲁⲣⲣⲓⲥⲙⲟⲥ · ⲙⲉⲧⲁⲅⲅⲓⲥⲙⲟⲥ

Metarrhismos in the corpus describes how unrecognized states pass on, taking new forms. Stage 5 should NOT read this as literal reincarnation but as the structural truth that what is not recognized continues to organize itself.

Opposite sense: settled state
In reading: the transfer of a state from one substrate to another the New Aeon / aeon of joy — The state of the regenerated rational — where the Lord's order has fully come, where joy of conjunction reigns; the consummation as ongoing state. (new world, aeon of rest, regenerated aeon)

ⲡⲁⲓⲱⲛ ⲛⲃ̄ⲣⲣⲉ

The New Aeon to which the soul comes after the consummation — the state of full regeneration where the Fathers sit on thrones in their houses, in joy.

Opposite sense: the old aeon
In reading: the state of the regenerated rational; joy of conjunction; the consummation as ongoing state panaretos / extraction — The final gathering at the consummation — when all that is the Lord's is recognized and brought up; the close of regeneration. (the Last Extraction, consummation-gathering)

ⲡⲁⲛⲁⲣⲉⲓⲁⲥ

The Last Panaretos rises against the bolos; the great gathering of all that has been recognized as the Lord's. The end-form of regeneration as a single act.

In reading: the final gathering at the consummation; the close of regeneration

Twelve Greatnesses — The Lord's outgoing operations articulated in twelve degrees — the full structure of divine going-forth toward the soul; one Lord in twelve operative registers. (twelve great ones who came forth)

ⲙⲛⲧⲥⲛⲁⲩⲥ ⲛ̄ⲙⲛ̄ⲧⲛⲁⲍ

Twelve Greatnesses came forth to fight the Darkness. NOT twelve gods. The Lord's complete outgoing in twelve registers — the structural fullness of his accommodation.

In reading: the Lord's outgoing operations articulated in twelve degrees

Twelve Storehouses / treasures — The complete reservoir-structure of the rational — twelve fullness of preserved truth and good held within the natural mind. (treasuries)

ⲙⲛⲧⲥⲛⲁⲩⲥ ⲛ̄ⲧⲁⲙⲓⲟⲛ

Twelve storehouses with the receivable preservations of truth — extends the five storehouses to the broader-order completeness.

In reading: the complete reservoir-structure of preserved truth in the rational twelve gates of body — The complete structural articulation of the natural body as it corresponds to the rational — twelve faculties in their bodily form. (twelve members)

ⲙⲛⲧⲥⲛⲁⲩⲥ ⲙ̄ⲙⲉⲗⲟⲥ

The body has twelve members corresponding to the twelve zodia. The natural mind taken in its complete bodily articulation.

In reading: the complete structural articulation of the natural body five mysteries / five sayings — The five foundational doctrines articulating the rational's covenant with the Lord — same as the Five Mysteries of First Man, taken doctrinally. (the five teachings)

ⲡⲓⲧⲟⲩ ⲛ̄ⲥⲉⲭⲉ

The five sayings to be taught: the structural teaching of the soul's outgoing and return. Doctrinal form of the Five Mysteries.

In reading: the five foundational doctrines of the rational's covenant

Five Awakeners / Sons of Awakener — The Lord's five operations of awakening the rational from its dead state — the five degrees by which the soul is raised in regeneration. (the five who raise the dead)

ⲡϯⲟⲩ ⲛⲣⲉϩⲧⲟⲩⲛⲟⲩⲥ

Five drawer-uppers who rouse the dead. Each is a particular operation by which the rational, in one of its five degrees, is raised from the self's dead state.

In reading: the Lord's five operations of awakening the rational from its dead state the Twelve Aeons / great aeons of greatness — The complete structure of the divine outgoing — twelve registers at which the Lord is recognizable as he goes forth toward the soul. (twelve great hours of greatness)

ⲙⲛⲧⲥⲛⲁⲩⲥ ⲛⲁⲓⲱⲛ ⲛⲧⲙⲛⲧⲛⲁϩ

Distinguished from twelve zodia: twelve aeons are the Lord's outgoing in completeness; twelve zodia are the self's mimicking circuit. Complement at full order.

Opposite sense: twelve hours of night (the same structure under self-love)

In reading: the complete structure of the divine outgoing in twelve registers

Five Worlds of Flesh — The natural body in five aspects — the bodily complement to the five worlds of darkness; the natural in its sensory/bodily articulation. (five aspects of bodily nature)

ⲡϯⲟⲩ ⲛ̄ⲕⲟⲥⲙⲟⲥ ⲛ̄ⲧⲥⲁⲣ̄ⲝ

Five worlds of flesh corresponding to the five worlds of darkness. The bodily articulation of the natural mind — what the soul wears at its outermost.

In reading: the natural body in five aspects; the bodily articulation of the natural two anabibazons / two ascenders — Two registers at which the self organizes itself into ascending self-love — the dry and the moist as the masculine and feminine forms of self-love. (two ascending nodes)

ⲛⲁⲛⲁⲃⲓⲃⲁⲍⲱⲛ

The two anabibazons reckoned with the five planets — the polar pair of the self's organized self-love (Father-figure and Mother-figure of darkness).

In reading: two registers of ascending self-love the Father's hidden storehouses — The Lord's reserves not yet brought into operation — what the Lord holds in his inmost until the moment for it has come. (hidden tamia of the Father)

ⲛⲉⲧⲁⲙⲓⲟⲛ ⲉⲧⲍⲏⲡ

Hidden storehouses from which powers are summoned when needed; at the consummation the Father reveals his face into them and gathers them. The Lord's inmost reserves.

In reading: the Lord's reserves not yet manifested; what is held in the inmost until the moment

Three Things shown to First Man — Three structural distinctions of the regenerated rational — the icon, the structural bond with the Five Sons, and the seal of the cosmos within him. (three privileges of First Man, three exaltations)

ϣⲁⲙⲧ ⲛ̄ⲛⲁⲟ̄ ⲛ̄ⲍⲱⲃ

The image of the Most High set upon him; the molding through firstborn-state of heaven; the seal of all powers and counsels gathered within. Three exaltations of the regenerated rational.

In reading: three structural distinctions by which the regenerated rational is exalted the four wars and four salvations — The fourfold structure of contest and salvation — the rational's struggle and the Lord's deliverance articulated in the fullness of ordered manifestation. (four contests and four redemptions)

ⲡϩⲧⲁϒ ⲙ̄ⲡⲟⲗⲉⲙⲟⲥ

Four wars: First Man, Living Spirit, Ambassador, Jesus the Pope-Eau. Four salvations: corresponding deliverances. The fourfold structure of the soul's regeneration as combat and redemption.

In reading: the fourfold structure of contest and the Lord's deliverance

Body & Anatomy (12)

face — Inmost — what is most interior, the inner state turned outward; the essential made present. (visage, prosopon, ho)

ⲡⲍⲟ · ⲡⲣⲟⲥⲱⲡⲟⲛ

The Father reveals his face at the consummation. The four faces of the Light. Face is the inmost of any state made visible — the essence in its visible form.

Opposite sense: hidden face; turned-away face

In reading: the inmost turned outward; the inner state made present body — The form of love and wisdom in ultimates — the outermost into which interior life accommodates itself; the structural housing of an inner state. (sōma, the body of) ⲡⲥⲱⲙⲁ

The body of the Pillar, the body of flesh, the body of the New Man. Body is whatever serves as the ultimate form for an interior love. The body of man corresponds to the cosmos as the rational corresponds to the natural.

Opposite sense: body of darkness; body of death

In reading: the form of love and wisdom in ultimates; the outermost into which interior life accommodates itself head — The inmost of the rational — the ruling part of mind, where everything else hangs; the highest degree of the soul. (top, ape)

ⲧⲁⲡⲉ

The head of the man, the head of the dragon. The ruling principle from which the rest of the natural takes its order. If the head is severed, the body dies — meaning the highest of the rational holds the rest in life.

Opposite sense: head of darkness (the self ruling)

In reading: the inmost of the rational; the ruling principle from which all else hangs eye — Understanding — the faculty by which truth is seen; the rational's organ for receiving wisdom. (bel, eyes)

ⲡⲃⲉⲗ

The eyes open at sunlight. The Father's eyes are the seven luminaries. Understanding receives truth as an eye receives light.

Opposite sense: blinded eye; eye of darkness

In reading: understanding; the faculty by which truth is seen mouth / tongue — Doctrinal speech — the faculty by which truth is articulated; what the soul utters in its essential confession. (lips, tapro, les)

ⲧⲧⲁⲡⲣⲟ · ⲡⲗⲉⲥ

The mouth as place of taste and speech. The tongue speaks; the mouth receives the taste. The faculty by which inner state becomes articulated truth.

Opposite sense: lying mouth; speech of falsity
In reading: doctrinal speech; the articulation of truth hand — Power as operation — the faculty of putting truth into action; what does or works in the rational. (right hand, oikh)

ⲡⲟⲓϧ · ⲧⲟⲩⲛⲉⲙ

The right hand given to the First Man; the hand by which the angel rescues. Hand is the operative power of any state. Right hand specifically marks the Lord's strengthening at the rational's contest.

Opposite sense: hand of the enemy; grasping hand of self-love
In reading: power as operation; the faculty by which truth is put into action foot — The lowest natural — what stands on the ultimate ground; the soul's contact with the outermost. (feet, rēte)

ⲣⲉⲧⲉ · ⲟⲩⲣⲏⲧⲉ

Adamas's foot stands on the head of the demon-substance. Foot is what stands in the ultimate, what makes contact with the outermost ground of the natural.

Opposite sense: feet of the enemy; foot trampling
In reading: the lowest natural; the soul's contact with the outermost flesh — External love of the natural — what the soul feels at its outermost; in the negative, the self's outermost form where Sin most operates. (sarx)

ⲧⲥⲁⲣ̄ⲝ

The flesh is the outermost form into which the soul has accommodated itself. Sin most operates in the flesh because it is the outermost claim. The 'flesh-eating' archons are particular self-loves grasping at the outer.

Opposite sense: spirit; inner state
In reading: external love of the natural; the outermost form into which the soul has accommodated itself bone — Structural good — the framework that supports; the truth that gives the natural its form and stability. (kes, skeleton)

ⲡⲕⲉⲥ

Bones of the body, the bones of the man being the framework on which the rest hangs. Bone is the structural good giving the natural its form, the foundational truth that holds shape.

Opposite sense: broken structure; collapsed support
In reading: structural good supporting form; the truth that gives the natural its stability blood — Divine truth proceeding — life-giving circulation through the body of the rational. (snof)

ⲡⲥⲛⲟϥ

Where blood appears, it is the circulating life-truth of the body. Limited explicit attestation in this corpus, but the standard correspondence applies.

Opposite sense: blood of self-love; defiled circulation
In reading: divine truth proceeding; the life-giving circulation of the rational stature — Degree of perfection — the measure of the rational's full formation; how complete a state has become. (height of body, chai)

ⲡϧⲁⲓ̈

The four sons mounted upon the body; the stature of the First Man. Stature is the measure of how far formation has been completed.

Opposite sense: stunted form; incomplete formation
In reading: degree of perfection; measure of the rational's formation senses / sense-organs — Faculties of perception — the rational's openings to the natural through which the world is taken in. (aisthesis, aisthetēria, five senses)

ⲛⲁⲓⲥⲑⲏⲧⲏⲣⲓⲟⲛ

Five sense-organs in the body, gates of perception. Each sense corresponds to a particular faculty of the rational reaching outward.

Opposite sense: senses turned by self-love; deceived perception

In reading: faculties of perception; the rational's openings into the natural

Faculties of the Mind (10) mind — First of the five faculties of the rational — the highest, where truth is most directly received; the inmost organ of understanding. (nous)

ⲡⲛⲟⲩⲥ

First of the five intellectual faculties (Greek loanword νοῦς). The highest part of the rational where the Light Mind enters when the soul is ordered. ALWAYS 'mind' — never anything else.

Opposite sense: mind organized by self-love
In reading: the mind; the highest faculty of the rational; the inmost organ of understanding thought — Second of the five faculties — the movement of mind toward an object; how mind reaches outward to consider. (meue, ennoia)

ⲡⲙⲉⲩⲉ

Second of the five intellectual faculties (Greek ἔννοια). The faculty by which the mind reaches toward what it considers. ALWAYS 'thought.'

Opposite sense: thought turned by self-love
In reading: the thought; the movement of mind toward what it considers teaching — Third of the five faculties — what the rational is shaped by; the form-giving faculty by which the soul receives doctrine and is taught. (sbo, instruction)

ⲧⲥⲃⲱ

Third of the five intellectual faculties. CRITICALLY: must be 'teaching,' NEVER 'insight' or 'prudence.' The Coptic scribes deliberately chose ⲧⲥⲃⲱ over a Greek loanword. The faculty by which the soul receives form, by which it is taught and shaped.

Opposite sense: false teaching; teaching of self-love
In reading: the teaching; the form-giving faculty by which the soul receives doctrine counsel — Fourth of the five faculties — practical wisdom, deliberation; how mind shapes its action. (sakhne)

ⲡⲥⲁϧⲛⲉ

Fourth of the five intellectual faculties (Greek ἐνθύμησις). The faculty by which the soul deliberates and shapes its action. ALWAYS 'counsel.'

Opposite sense: evil counsel; counsel of darkness
In reading: the counsel; the deliberative faculty by which the soul shapes its action reflection — Fifth of the five faculties — the rational's looking-back upon itself; reasoned consideration that completes the cycle of intellectual operation. (makmek, logismos)

ⲡⲙⲁⲕⲙⲉⲕ

Fifth of the five intellectual faculties (Greek λογισμός). The faculty by which the mind reasons through itself. ALWAYS 'reflection.'

Opposite sense: reflection turned to darkness (called 'law of death')
In reading: the reflection; the rational's looking-back upon itself the five faculties as one — One rational faculty in its complete process — the rational, articulated in five discrete degrees: mind, thought, teaching, counsel, reflection. NEVER five separate agents. (five sons, five limbs, five members, five storehouses, five watchers, five sons of Living Spirit, five sons of First Man)

ⲡϯⲟⲩ ⲙ̄ⲙⲉⲗⲟⲥ · ⲡϯⲟⲩ ⲛ̄ϣⲏⲣⲉ

When the corpus enumerates 'five sons,' 'five limbs,' 'five storehouses,' 'five members of the soul,' 'five watchers' — these are not five separate things. They are the same one rational faculty articulated in five discrete degrees of operation. Stage 5 must read them as one faculty in process, not as five distinct agents.

Opposite sense: the same five turned to self-love
In reading: the rational in its five degrees; the one rational faculty articulated in five discrete operations knowledge / recognition — The soul's recognition that what flows through it is the Lord's — the act of seeing what is what; the goal of regeneration. (sounē, saune, to know)

ⲥⲟⲩⲛⲉ · ⲙⲙⲉ

Knowledge here is not abstract information but the soul's coming to recognize in freedom what is given and what is claimed. The decisive act of regeneration.

Opposite sense: ignorance; failure to recognize
In reading: the soul's recognition; recognizing what is the Lord's and what is the soul's claim wisdom / Sophia — The understanding ordered by truth — divine wisdom received in the rational; the right form of reflection. (sophia)

ⲧⲥⲟⲫⲓⲁ

Wisdom of the Virgin of Light; wisdom in the New Man's reflection. The right state of the rational's understanding. Twelve wisdoms = the hours of Jesus the Radiance.

Opposite sense: foolishness
In reading: the understanding ordered by truth; divine wisdom received remembrance — The rational's faculty of holding states present — what keeps received truth available to the soul. (mneme, rēpmeue)

ⲡⲣⲡⲙⲉⲩⲉ

Remembrance is given by the senses to the heart, kept in storehouses, drawn forth when needed. The faculty of presence by which received truths remain available.

Opposite sense: forgetfulness
In reading: the rational's holding of states; what keeps received truth available perception / aisthesis — The rational's reaching outward through the senses to take in the natural; the basic operation of natural understanding. (aisthesis, sense-perception)

ⲁⲓⲥⲑⲏⲥⲓⲥ

The senses give to perception; perception gives to thought. The basic outgoing operation of the rational.

Opposite sense: deceived perception
In reading: the rational reaching through the senses; natural perception

Natural Imagery (37)

tree — Perception/knowledge — rooted, growing, bearing; an established arrangement of the natural mind, carrying interior truth from root to fruit. (plant, shēn)

ⲡⲱⲏⲛ

The two trees — beautiful and bitter — are the same correspondence in opposite directions. A tree is a settled state of perception, with its root in foundational truth and its fruit in works. The five trees are the natural mind in five arrangements.

Opposite sense: beautiful tree (perception ordered) vs. bitter tree (perception turned to falsity)
In reading: perceptions/knowledges; an established arrangement of the natural mind fruit — Works/goods of life — what the tree produces; the action that issues from a state of perception. (karpos)

ⲡⲕⲁⲣⲡⲟⲥ

Fruits of the beautiful tree are works of love; bitter fruits are works of self-love. Same correspondence, opposite ground. The fruit reveals the tree.

Opposite sense: good fruit (works of love) vs. bitter fruit (works of self-love)
In reading: works/goods of life; what issues from a state of perception seed — Interior truths — what contains the whole in potential; the inner principle that, when received, grows into perception. (bērē, brere)

ⲃⲣⲣⲉ

Seeds in the natural ground; new grain in the elements. The interior truth which, sown, grows up as the tree of perception.

Opposite sense: corrupted seed

In reading: interior truths in potential; the inner principle that grows into perception root — Foundational truth — what holds a perception in place; the principle from which a state grows. (noune)

ⲧⲛⲟⲩⲛⲉ

The root of the tree, the root of all evil. Root is the foundation that holds a state — whether of good or of evil.

Opposite sense: rootless state
In reading: foundational truth; the principle holding a state in place mountain — Elevated spiritual states — proximity to influx; the height of the rational. (hill, tooy)

ⲛⲧⲱⲟⲩ

Mountains where the natural reaches highest; the great mountain of the natural rising toward heaven. Elevated states of the spiritual mind.

Opposite sense: pit; valley of self-love
In reading: elevated spiritual states; the height of the rational; states of proximity to influx bird — Thoughts, intellectual things — what moves through the air (perception); the mobile contents of the rational. (zalēt, fowl)

ⲛⲍⲁⲗⲁⲧⲉ

Birds in the air; the bird-faced king. Thoughts at the level of intellectual perception, mobile through the medium of thought.

Opposite sense: birds of darkness; deceiving thoughts
In reading: thoughts moving through perception; intellectual things fish — Lower natural truths — sense-knowledges that swim in the natural waters; truths in the natural degree. (tbt)

ⲛⲧⲃⲧ

Fish-faced king of water; fish in the sea. Sense-truths in the natural mind, what moves in the waters of natural perception.

Opposite sense: fish of corrupted waters
In reading: lower natural truths; sense-knowledges in the natural mind lion — A strong love — celestial good when ordered, violent self-love when disordered; depending on direction. (mouioue)

ⲙⲟⲩⲓⲉⲩⲉ · ⲙⲟⲩⲓ

The lion-headed king of fire (self-love organized as ruler); the lions in the sky (good loves). Same animal, two states. Strength of love either toward Lord or claimed by self.

Opposite sense: same word, two directions
In reading: a strong love (good or self-love depending on context) dragon — Twisted natural turned in self-love — the self's most coiled form; the body of natural mind under the self's rule. (drakōn, serpent)

ⲁⲣⲁⲕⲱⲛ

Dragon-king of darkness; dragon as enthumesis cast into the sea. The self when it has organized itself into a coiled, devouring form within the body.

In reading: the self in its most twisted form; the natural mind organized as serpent gold — Celestial good (love); but in the negative, gold is the self's claim of what is highest. (noub)

ⲡⲛⲟⲩⲃ

The body of all the powers of smoke is gold (the self claims the highest for itself); in proper sense gold is celestial good. Two directions of one correspondence.

Opposite sense: same word, two directions
In reading: celestial good (positive); self-love claiming the highest (negative — when gold is the body of darkness) silver — Spiritual truth (wisdom); in the negative, the self's claim of wisdom. (hat)

ⲡⲍⲁⲧ

Silver of the world of water (positive: wisdom from natural truth); silver as body of water-archons (negative: claimed wisdom). One correspondence in two directions.

Opposite sense: same word, two directions
In reading: spiritual truth (wisdom); in negative contexts, claimed wisdom of the natural iron — Natural truth in ultimates — hard, foundational; in the negative, the hardness of self-love. (banipe)

ⲛⲃⲁⲛⲓⲛⲉ

Iron of the world of wind (positive: natural truth foundational); the irons of the bound watchers (negative: hardness of binding self-love). One correspondence in two directions.

Opposite sense: same word, two senses
In reading: natural truth in ultimates; foundational hardness of truth (or, negatively, of self-love) bronze — Lesser natural truth — alloyed, mixed; the natural in its compounded state. (hamt)

ⲛⲍⲁⲙⲧ̄

Bronze body of the lion-king. A natural truth alloyed with self-love, less pure than silver or gold.

Opposite sense: pure metal of higher truth
In reading: lesser natural truth, alloyed; the natural in compounded state lead — Lowest natural truth — heavy, base, dragging downward; the natural at its grossest. (aeine, tlaz)

ⲛⲁⲉⲓⲛⲉ · ⲛⲗⲁⲍ

Lead body of the dark-archons. The lowest, heaviest form of natural truth turned to base ends.

Opposite sense: lifted natural; refined truth
In reading: lowest natural truth, base; the natural at its grossest pearl — A precious truth from doctrine — the formed result of influx received and held in the natural; truth that has taken form through the soul's reception. (margaritēs)

ⲙⲁⲣⲅⲁⲣⲓⲧⲏⲥ

The pearl is formed in the oyster from a drop of rain meeting the right substance — meaning, a precious truth formed in the natural mind from influx that has been rightly received.

Opposite sense: false jewel
In reading: a precious truth received and formed in the natural salt — Falsity from love of self in the natural — what makes the natural waters bitter. (malh, salty water)

ⲡⲙⲁⲗϩ

The salt of the sea grew from the casting forth of darkness, the metarrhismos of falsity through the natural. The natural turned bitter by self-love at its broadest.

Opposite sense: sweet water (truth received)
In reading: falsity from love of self in the natural sun — The Lord as illumining wisdom in the natural — the great manifestation of divine truth in the rational. (rē, luminary of the day)

ⲡⲣⲏ

Sun and moon as the two great vessels of light. The sun is the Lord's truth shining forth into the natural mind, the great manifestation of accommodated wisdom.

Opposite sense: false sun (claimed wisdom)
In reading: the Lord as illumining wisdom; divine truth manifest in the rational moon — The Lord's truth received in the natural — receivable wisdom; the second vessel of light by which influx is held in the natural. (ooh)

ⲡⲟⲟⲍ · ⲡⲟⲟϩ

The moon-vessel that fills and empties. The receivable form of wisdom, the Lord's truth as the natural mind can hold it.

Opposite sense: false moon
In reading: the Lord's truth received in the natural; the receivable form of wisdom cloud — A state of perception that bears influx — the medium in which truth descends; perception as the carrier of revelation. (kloole)

ⲧⲕⲗⲟⲟⲗⲉ

Clouds bring rain; the cloud of light bears the icon of the Virgin. A mediating state of perception by which truth descends into the natural.

Opposite sense: thick cloud of self-love (gloom)

In reading: a state of perception bearing influx; the carrier of revelation in the rational rain — Influx coming down from above into the natural; truth received as living water from the higher firmaments. (downpour, mounhōou)

ⲡⲙⲟⲩⲛϩⲱⲩ

Rain comes from the upper firmaments to nourish the trees and fields. The Lord's life-giving truth descending into the natural mind to enable growth.

Opposite sense: drought; withholding

In reading: influx descending into the natural; truth received as living water stars / planets — Particular states of the natural mind — fixed points of the soul's circuit through which it passes; in the negative, particular self-loves bound in the wheel. (five planets, the seven, five wandering stars)

ⲛⲥⲓⲟⲩ

Five wandering stars and the zodiac. Each star corresponds to a particular state through which the rational passes in its cycle of formation.

Opposite sense: fixed lights of the inmost

In reading: particular states of the natural mind; fixed points in the soul's circuit twelve zodia — The complete circuit of states the soul passes through in its formation, particularly when those states are turned by self-love; the natural mind in its full revolution. (zodiac signs, twelve houses)

ⲙⲛⲧⲥⲛⲁⲩⲥ ⲛ̄ⲍⲱⲁⲓⲟⲛ

Twelve zodia bound in the sphere; the complete revolution of the natural mind through its states. They mark the cycles by which the rational moves through its degrees.

Opposite sense: twelve aeons of greatness

In reading: the complete circuit of states the soul passes through in its formation pillar of light at sunrise / sunset — The rational suffering as it is purified — the soul stretched through the natural until laying off is complete; the soul-in-process. (the cross stretched, Living Soul stretched)

ⲡⲥⲧⲁⲩⲣⲟⲥ ⲙ̄ⲡⲟⲩⲁⲓⲛⲉ

The Cross of Light is the soul stretched through the cosmos in the suffering of being purified. NOT a cosmic crucifixion of trapped light-particles; the rational-in-purification.

Opposite sense: the contracted, claimed state

In reading: the rational suffering as it is purified; the soul stretched through the natural in regeneration fragrance — The good of love sensed at a distance — the diffusing presence of the Lord's good; what the soul senses of divine love before it is fully present. (aroma, stinoufe, sweet smell)

ⲡⲥⲧⲛⲟⲩⲫⲉ

The fragrance of the Father; the sweet fragrance from the man. The diffusion of divine good through the natural.

Opposite sense: stench; evil odor

In reading: the good of love sensed; the diffusing presence of divine good weeping — The rational mourning what it sees — sorrow that issues from the recognition of the self's situation; the necessary affect of seeing the truth of the soul's bondage. (lament, rime)

ⲣⲓⲙⲉ

The sons weep when they see the enemy. Three weepings end in stillness; a fourth weeping at the consummation ends with no further weeping forever.

Opposite sense: joy

In reading: the rational mourning what it sees of the self's situation seal of the firmaments / cosmic body — The whole natural mind taken as a body — each part of the cosmos corresponding to a part of the rational; the natural articulated through correspondence with the human form. (cosmos as anthropos, anthropomorphic cosmos)

The cosmos is fashioned in the form of a man: head as firmaments, neck as one cosmos, feet on the lower side, etc. The whole natural mind structured anthropomorphically — the Grand Man pattern in the macrocosm.

In reading: the natural mind structured as one body, each part corresponding to a faculty salt sea / great sea — The natural mind taken as the bound of all natural perceptions — particularly when stirred by self-love, becoming the salt sea where ships of doctrine must navigate. (the encompassing sea, outer sea)

ⲧⲛⲁⲟ ⲛ̄ⲑⲁⲗⲁⲥⲥⲁ

The great sea encompasses the cosmos; ships sail in it; pearls form at its prow; the great fire-wall stands beyond it. The bounded natural in its outermost form.

Opposite sense: still waters of received truth

In reading: the natural mind as bound; natural perceptions stirred by self-love ten chariots / ten harmata — The complete vehicular structure by which Jesus the Radiance descends and operates — ten orderly conveyances of his accommodated truth. (ten vehicles of Jesus, the Ten)

ⲡⲓⲙⲏⲧ ⲛ̀ⲍⲁⲣⲙⲁ

Ship of light, abode of First Man, Pillar of Glory, Call, Hearing, living air, living wind, light, water, fire — Jesus mounts these ten as he descends. The full structure of his operation in the Zone.

In reading: the complete structure by which divine truth descends in conveyances great fire of consummation — The final purification at the consummation — divine love consuming what cannot be raised; the completion of the withdrawing of evils. (final fire, great consuming fire)

ⲧⲛⲁⲟ ⲛⲥⲉⲧⲉ

At the end of the cosmos the Great Fire burns and what remains of self-love is consumed. The divine love in its consuming aspect — the final discrimination as fire.

Opposite sense: gentle fire of love

In reading: the final purification by divine love; the consumption of what cannot be conjoined twelve dignities / honored places — The complete fullness of states honored within the rational — the structural fullness of the rational's accommodated dwellings. (twelve dwellings, twelve abodes)

ⲙⲛⲧⲥⲛⲁⲩⲥ ⲛ̄ⲧⲁⲓⲟ

Twelve dignities established in the cosmos — the structural fullness of dwellings for the rational. Related to but distinct from twelve aeons and twelve zodia.

In reading: the complete fullness of states honored within the rational eight paths / four-and-eight ways — Four ways of regeneration leading up, eight ways leading to corruption — the structural map of the soul's options through the Zone. (paths of light and paths of darkness)

ϫⲧⲁⲩ ⲙ̄ⲙⲁⲓⲧ ⲉⲩⲥⲁⲧϩ

Four ways are chosen and lead up to life; eight ways lead down to gehenna through the Error. The structural map of the rational's options.

In reading: the structural map of the soul's options through the rational garment of light / robe of regeneration — The clothing of regenerated truth — the soul wearing what the Lord has given, the outermost sign of conjunction achieved. (robe of light)

ⲑⲃⲥⲱ ⲛ̄ⲟⲩⲁⲓⲛⲉ

The third angel comes bearing the garment of light. The covering of recognized truth that the soul receives at consummation.

Opposite sense: garment of flesh; defiled garment

In reading: the soul wearing the truth the Lord has given; the outermost sign of conjunction twelve zodia bound in the sphere — The natural mind's complete circuit of states under the self's organization — twelve fixed states of self-love that the soul cycles through. (twelve houses of the zodiac)

ⲙⲛⲧⲥⲛⲁⲩⲥ ⲛ̄ⲍⲱⲇⲓⲟⲛ

The twelve zodia bound in the sphere — the natural mind's twelvefold cycle when organized by self-love. The rational moves through these as it is purified.

Opposite sense: twelve aeons of greatness

In reading: the complete circuit of states the soul cycles through under the self's organization fire-wall around the cosmos — The outer bound of love — what holds the natural mind together as one structure; divine love as the outermost limit and protection. (wall of fire, outer fire)

ⲡⲥⲁⲃⲧ ⲛ̄ⲧⲛⲁⲟ̄ ⲛⲥⲉⲧⲉ

The fire-wall surrounds the cosmos; the great fire is at the boundary. Divine love as the outermost bound that holds and at the consummation withdraws.

In reading: the outer bound of love holding the natural mind together kissing / embrace as conjunction — The conjunction of love expressed as nearest contact — the soul united with the Lord at the moment of regeneration. (embrace, kiss as union)

ⲁⲥⲡⲁⲥⲙⲟⲥ

The Mother of Life embraces the First Man at his return; the soul is embraced at her redemption. Conjunction in its closest form.

Opposite sense: rejection

In reading: the conjunction of love expressed as union right hand / left hand — Right hand = the Lord's strengthening operation; in body, the higher operation. Left hand = the lower operation. (ounem / hbour)

ⲧⲟⲩⲛⲉⲙ · ⲡⲥⲁⲟⲃⲟⲩⲣ

The Mother gives the right hand to the First Man at his contest. The right hand of the body corresponds to the higher half of the rational; the left to the lower.

Opposite sense: each other

twelve hours of night / shadows of darkness — The complete cycle of states under self-love — twelve aspects of the natural mind in darkness; the dark complement to the twelve hours of day. (twelve dark hours)

ⲙⲛⲧⲥⲛⲁⲩⲥⲉ ⲛⲟⲩⲛⲟⲩ ⲛ̄ⲧⲟⲩⲱⲏ

Twelve shadows of darkness corresponding to twelve hours of light. The full structure of the natural mind under the self's organization.

Opposite sense: twelve hours of day

In reading: the complete cycle of states under self-love

Actions & Processes (24)

send forth / emanate — The Lord's operation of influx — going forth toward the soul; the basic act of accommodation by which the divine reaches the rational. (proceed, go forth, probolē)

ⲧⲛ̄ⲛⲁⲩ · ⲡⲣⲟⲃⲟⲗⲏ · ⲧⲱⲍⲙⲉ

The Father sends forth emanations; the Spirit summons the powers. The basic operation of influx, the going-forth of divine truth and good.

Opposite sense: withholding

In reading: the Lord's influx going forth; the divine going out toward the soul descend / come down — Accommodation downward — the Lord (or his principle) coming into a lower degree to meet the soul; the divine taking the form of the lower so it can be received. (come down, go down)

ⲉⲓ ⲁⲡⲓⲧⲛⲉ

The First Man descends into the contest; the rain descends. NOT literal motion. Accommodation: the higher taking the form of the lower so it can be received.

Opposite sense: ascend

In reading: accommodation toward the soul; the divine taking the form of the lower so as to be received ascend / come up — Elevation toward the Lord — the soul, illumined, being raised through degrees; the process of regeneration as upward motion. (go up, rise, be raised)

ⲉⲓ ⲁⲍⲣϩⲏⲓ̈

The First Man comes up out of the contest; the soul rises through the rational. The soul, recognizing what is given, rises through the degrees of regeneration.

Opposite sense: descent into self-love

In reading: elevation toward the Lord; the soul rising through the degrees of regeneration raise (touo) — Causative elevation — the Lord's act of lifting the rational; preserves vertical motion, the upward direction of regeneration. (lift up, cause to stand)

ⲧⲟⲩⲱ

□□□□ preserves vertical/directional motion. The Lord's act of lifting the soul or the rational into a higher state. MUST NOT be flattened to 'release' or 'free' — preserve the vertical.

Opposite sense: cast down
In reading: the Lord's causative elevation; lifting the rational upward gather — Bringing into order — bringing scattered states together into the right arrangement; the Lord's operation of consolidation. (collect, souh, sōuh)

ⲥⲱⲩϩ · ⲥⲁⲩϩ

The angel gathers the soul; the Gatherer-Inward is named among the awakeners. The Lord's operation of bringing into order what was scattered.

Opposite sense: scattering; dispersal
In reading: bringing into order; gathering scattered states into right arrangement separate (pōrkh) — The act by which what is the Lord's is distinguished from what the soul has claimed; the basic operation of regeneration. (divide, distinguish)

ⲡⲱⲣϫ · ⲡⲁⲣϫ

The Lord separates light from darkness, the upper from the lower. The basic operation by which the soul, illumined, recognizes and lays off — the act of regeneration.

Opposite sense: mingling
In reading: discriminating what is the Lord's from what the soul has claimed discriminate — The soul's act of telling what is the Lord's from what is its own — done in freedom, illumined from within; the conscious form of separation. (distinguish, judge)

ⲁⲓⲁⲕⲣⲓⲛⲉ · ⲕⲣⲓⲛⲉ

Discrimination is what the soul does in regeneration when it has been illumined. It is the conscious, free form of separation — the soul actively recognizing.

Opposite sense: confusion; failure to distinguish
In reading: discriminating, in freedom, what is the Lord's from what is the soul's purify — Withdrawing of evils — the act by which the soul lays off what is not its own; the cleansing operation of the Lord through the soul. (cleanse, toubo)

ⲧⲟⲩⲃⲟ

The waters are purified. The wind is purified. The rational state is purified by laying off what was claimed. The Lord's cleansing as the soul's recognition.

Opposite sense: defile
In reading: withdrawal of evils; laying off what is not the soul's; cleansing through reception refine / choose out — Perfecting — bringing what was mixed into a pure state; the Lord's act of setting apart what is good in its proper order. (sōtf, select, set apart)

ⲥⲱⲧⲫ

The Light is refined out of the cosmos. The Ambassador chooses forth the Light from the firmaments. The act of setting apart what is good in its proper order.

Opposite sense: leave in mingling
In reading: refining the rational; choosing out what is the Lord's reveal / manifest — The Lord's making truth seen — accommodation in the form of vision; the divine taking accessible shape. (ouanh abal, manifest forth, make visible)

ⲟⲩⲁⲛϩ ⲁⲃⲁⲗ · ⲟⲩⲱⲗⲡ ⲁⲃⲁⲗ

The Ambassador reveals his image; the Father reveals his face at the consummation. The act by which the interior is made present to the rational so it can be received.

Opposite sense: hide
In reading: the Lord making truth seen; the divine taking accessible shape for the rational illumine — The Lord's act of giving the understanding light — providing the wisdom by which the rational sees what is given. (give light, enlighten, prie)

ⲡⲣⲩⲉ · ⲫⲡⲣⲓⲉ

Jesus the Radiance is the active illuminating. The act by which the Lord makes the soul able to see what flows through it.

Opposite sense: darken
In reading: the Lord giving understanding its light conjoin / join (the Lord and soul) — Bringing into union — the Lord's joining of soul to himself; the goal of regeneration as conjunction. (unite, tauō)

ⲧⲱⲍ · ⲙⲟⲩⲣ ⲁϩⲟⲩⲛ

The Father conjoins the soul to himself; the Lord conjoins love and wisdom. The end-state of regeneration is conjunction.

Opposite sense: separation in the bad sense; schism from source
In reading: conjunction with the Lord; the joining of soul to its source mingle — The state of confusion before discrimination — light and darkness not yet sorted; the basic state of the unregenerate rational. (mix, blend, mukht)

ⲙⲟⲩⲭⲧ · ⲗⲱⲃϣ

Light is mingled with Darkness in the cosmos. The basic state of the unregenerate rational, before the soul has been illumined to discriminate.

Opposite sense: separation; discrimination
In reading: mingling — the state where what is given and what is claimed are not yet sorted bind — Holding in place — what fixes a state; the Lord binds the self at the end, but also the self binds the soul to itself. (fetter, tie, mor)

ⲙⲟⲩⲣ · ⲥⲱⲛⲍ · ⲧⲱⲱⲃⲥ

The Living Spirit binds the archons; the self binds the soul to its claims. Two directions of one correspondence.

Opposite sense: loose; raise; release
In reading: holding in place (context determines whether good or bad) loose / release (bōl abal) — Untying what binds — the loosening of what was claimed; the horizontal complement to ⲥⲱⲧⲡ (raise). (untie, loosen)

ⲃⲱⲗ ⲁⲃⲁⲗ

The Releaser looses bonds. The Lord's act of loosening what the soul has bound itself to. CRITICAL: do NOT use 'release' or 'loose' as the primary translation of ⲥⲱⲧⲡ — that is 'raise.' This is the horizontal/dissolving complement.

Opposite sense: bind
In reading: loosening what binds; untying what was claimed form / build / mold — Shaping into degrees — the operation by which the rational is given structural order; whether by Lord or by selfhood permitted to form. (shape, fashion, kōt, plassō, moun)

ⲡⲗⲁⲥⲥⲉ · ⲕⲱⲧ · ⲙⲟⲩⲛⲕ

The Lord builds the cosmos; the self molds Adam. Forming is the operation of giving structure — when the Lord does it, ordered to regeneration; when the self does it under permission, providing the vessel.

Opposite sense: leave unformed; collapse of form
In reading: shaping into degrees; giving structural order clothe — Giving external truth as covering — accommodation in the form of garments; the Lord taking on a particular outer form to operate at a particular degree. (wear, robe, rphore)

ⲣⲫⲟⲣⲉ · ϯⲍⲃⲥⲱ

The Living Spirit wears the three garments of wind, water, fire. The First Man wears the elements as armor. Clothing is accommodation as outer form by which an inner power can operate at a lower degree.

Opposite sense: strip naked
In reading: clothing in external truth; accommodation as outer form receive — The soul's accepting what flows from the Lord — the right relation to influx; the opposite of claiming. (accept, take in, chi)

ⲭⲓ

The soul receives the seal, the gifts, the food, the hope. Receiving is the soul's right relation to influx — accepting without making one's own.

Opposite sense: claim

In reading: receiving what flows from the Lord without claiming claim / appropriate — The self's act of taking what flows through it as its own work; the basic operation of self-love. (take as one's own, make one's own)

This is the basic act of the self — to claim what is the Lord's as the soul's own. Not a single Coptic word but the operation throughout the corpus that is named by Sin, Error, and Enmity in their personified forms.

Opposite sense: receive

In reading: claiming what flows through as one's own; the self's appropriation lay off / recognize — The soul's act of letting go of what it had claimed, recognizing it as not its own; the proper end of regeneration. (acknowledge as not own, let go, surrender)

The proper end of regeneration: the soul, illumined, lays off what it had taken as its own. Implicit throughout the corpus as the inverse of claiming.

Opposite sense: cling; claim further

In reading: laying off what was claimed; recognizing what is the Lord's; surrendering self-appropriation permit — The Lord's allowing of the self's forming so the vessel may take shape and the soul may exist in freedom. (allow, suffer to be)

When the corpus says the archons 'molded Adam,' this is the Lord permitting the self to form. Freedom requires a vessel that thinks itself its own. The Lord IS doing this; he simply lets the natural think it does it itself, until the soul is mature enough to recognize the gift.

In reading: the Lord permits the natural to form, so the vessel exists in freedom subordinate — Bringing what was high in self-love into its proper lower place; the Lord's operation of putting the self under. (bring under, set under, harbou)

ϩⲁⲣⲃⲟⲩ

The Living Spirit subordinates the archons. The act of putting the self under proper order, where the Lord's truth rules.

Opposite sense: raise (when done to the self); subjugate (when done to the soul)

In reading: bringing the self into its proper place; subordinating self-love regenerate / make new — The Lord's complete operation of making the soul new — the whole movement from claiming to recognition. (make new, renew)

ⲣ̄ ⲃⲣⲡⲉ

The new aeon, the New Man, the new creation. Regeneration is the complete arc the Kephalaia describes — descent, formation, recognition, return.

Opposite sense: remain in the old man

In reading: regeneration; the making-new of the rational raise (touo) — special note — STAGE 5 NOTE: □□□□ must always preserve vertical motion. Render as 'raise,' 'cause to stand,' or 'lift up' — never as 'release,' 'free,' or 'save.' (lift up vertically — for □□□□)

ⲧⲟⲩⲱ

DUPLICATE OF #104, included as note: □□□□ preserves the vertical/causative semantics of the Lord's lifting action and must never be flattened. The complement to □□□ □□□□ (loose forth, horizontal).

Opposite sense: cast down

In reading: raise; cause to stand up; lift up

Qualities & States (18)

mingling — The unregenerate state — where the soul does not yet distinguish what is the Lord's from what it has claimed; light and darkness not yet sorted in freedom. (mixture, lobsh, mukht)

ⲡⲗⲱⲃⲱ̄ϥ · ⲙⲟⲩⲭⲧ

NOT extraction of substance but the soul's failure to discriminate. Light is mingled with darkness when the soul has not yet recognized in freedom what is what. Regeneration is the soul, illumined, learning to sort what was mingled.

Opposite sense: separation; discrimination in freedom

In reading: the unregenerate state where what is the Lord's and what the soul has claimed are not yet distinguished living / dead — Living = in conjunction with the Lord, receiving life from him; Dead = separated from the Lord, cut off from the source of life. (alive, anh)

ⲁⲛϩ · ⲁⲛϩ

Living Soul, living air, living spirit, living fire — all are the rational receiving life from the Lord. Death is the state of separation from that source.

Opposite sense: each other

In reading: living = in conjunction with the Lord; dead = separated from the source of life pure / defiled — Pure = without the self's claim; received and not made one's own; defiled = claimed and turned in. (clean, holy, tobo)

ⲟⲩⲁⲃⲉ · ⲧⲟⲩⲃⲟ

The pure are the rational that has laid off; the defiled are still claiming. Holy = set apart for the Lord and recognized as his.

Opposite sense: each other

In reading: pure = received without claiming; defiled = claimed and turned in high / low — High = inmost, most conjoined, closest to influx; Low = ultimate, most natural, in the outermost. (upper / lower, tpe / pitne)

ⲡϫⲓⲥⲉ · ⲡⲥⲁⲛⲡⲓⲧⲛⲉ

The Height where the Father dwells; the lower side where the natural mind operates. Vertical motion = degrees of interiority/exteriority, never literal space.

Opposite sense: each other

In reading: high = inmost / most interior; low = outermost / most natural inner / outer — Inner = interior degree, closer to the Lord's reception; Outer = exterior degree, closer to natural action. (inside / outside, hihoun / hibal)

ϩⲓϩⲟⲩⲛ · ϩⲓⲃⲁⲗ

Hidden/inner and revealed/outer aspects. The same content has interior and exterior states. The rational's storehouses are within; the senses are without.

Opposite sense: each other

In reading: inner = interior degree; outer = exterior degree

New Man / Old Man — New Man = the regenerated rational, in conjunction with the Lord; Old Man = the rational still claiming, bound to self-love. (new man, old man, regenerated state / unregenerated state)

ⲡⲣⲙⲛⲃⲣⲣⲉ · ⲡⲣⲙⲛⲉⲥ

The New Man is what the soul becomes when it has laid off; the Old Man is the self-bound state. Their members oppose: love vs. hatred, faith vs. doubt, patience vs. impatience, wisdom vs. foolishness.

Opposite sense: each other

In reading: the New Man = the regenerated rational; the Old Man = the rational still claiming rest — The state of conjunction achieved — where the rational has come into peace with the Lord; the consummation of regeneration. (mtan, stillness)

ⲡⲙ̄ⲧⲁⲛ

Rest in the new aeon, rest after the contest. The end-state of regeneration — the soul at peace because it has come into right relation with the Lord.

Opposite sense: tribulation; restlessness

In reading: the state of conjunction in peace; the consummation stillness — The interior calm of the rational ordered by the Lord — what allows reception; the state in which the soul can receive influx without disturbance. (silence, karaeit, quietness)

ⲡⲕⲁⲣⲁⲓⲧⲩ

The Father is established in stillness; the soul's heart at rest. The state of order in which influx can be received.

Opposite sense: disturbance; tarachē
In reading: the interior calm by which the rational receives without disturbance disturbance — The state of the rational stirred up by the self — what prevents reception; agitation from claimed states. (turmoil, tarachē, tarter)

ⲧⲧⲁⲣⲁϧⲏ · ⲱⲧⲁⲣⲧⲏ̄

Disturbance comes upon the encampments. The agitated state of the rational when self-love is operative.

Opposite sense: stillness
In reading: the state of the rational stirred up by the self; agitation that prevents reception glory — The manifestation of the Lord's quality — what shines forth from him; the splendor of divine life as it is recognized in the rational. (doxa, eau, splendor)

ⲡⲉⲁϒ

Pillar of Glory, King of Glory, the Glorious One. Glory is the visible quality of the divine in the soul's recognition.

Opposite sense: shame
In reading: the manifestation of the Lord's quality; what shines forth from him as recognized splendor shame — The state of the self when its nakedness is exposed — what self-love feels when its claim is shown false. (aspepe, nakedness)

ⲡⲱⲓⲡⲉ

The shame of nakedness; the shame in which the powers fall when the Ambassador reveals.

Opposite sense: glory
In reading: the state of self-love when its claim is exposed love — The bond of greatness — the highest of the New Man's members; love that conjoins; the inmost principle by which the soul receives the Lord. (agape)

ⲧⲁⲅⲁⲡⲏ

Love is named the bond of the Greatness. Set in the mind of the New Man, it is the principle by which the rational is conjoined to the Lord.

Opposite sense: hatred
In reading: love that conjoins; the highest principle of the New Man; the inmost bond of the rational with the Lord hatred — Selfhood's first death — the state by which the soul has separated itself from love; structurally opposite to agape. (enmity (related), mestou)

ⲡⲙⲉⲥⲧⲉ · ⲡⲙⲉⲥⲧⲟⲩ

Hatred is the first death, the state opposite love. From hatred comes envy, from envy the devil-state.

Opposite sense: love
In reading: selfhood's first death; the soul's separation from love faith / trust — The rational's confidence in the Lord — the second of the New Man's members; the soul's settled trust. (pistis, nahte)

ⲡⲛⲁϩⲧⲉ

Faith placed in the thought of the New Man. The soul's settled trust as the second member.

Opposite sense: doubt; faithlessness
In reading: the rational's settled confidence in the Lord patience — The soul's enduring through purification — what allows the rational to remain in regeneration without breaking; the fourth of the New Man's members. (longsuffering, harshēt)

ⲧⲙⲛⲧϩⲁⲣⲱϩⲏⲧ

Patience as the counsel of the New Man. The endurance by which the soul holds in regeneration despite affliction.

Opposite sense: impatience
In reading: the soul's enduring through purification joy — The state of conjunction realized — the soul's recognition of what it has received; joy is the affect of right reception. (gladness, rashe)

ⲡⲣⲁⲱⲉ

Joy in the new aeon; the joy of the angels at the gift. The right state of the regenerated rational.

Opposite sense: weeping; lupē
In reading: the state of conjunction realized; joy of right reception tribulation — The rational's pressing in regeneration — the suffering of being purified; the necessary affliction of laying off. (affliction, thlipsis)

ⲑⲗⲓⲯⲓⲥ

The soul stands in tribulation as she is purified. The state of the rational in process — pressed but not crushed.

Opposite sense: rest
In reading: the pressing of regeneration; the suffering of being purified hidden — What is interior and not yet manifested — the divine in its inmost recess; or what the soul has shut away from view. (concealed, hēp, secret)

ϩⲏⲡ · ϩⲏⲡ

The Father is hidden in the Greatness; the storehouses are hidden until summoned. Hiddenness is the inmost state, before any accommodation that makes it visible.

Opposite sense: revealed
In reading: interior and not yet manifested

Numerical Correspondences (8)

two — Conjunction and polarity — what comes together as opposite-and-complementary; the structural form of meeting and joining (or division). (pair, twofold, sneu)

ⲥⲛⲉϥ

Two essences (light and dark), two trees, two embraces, two ships of light. The number that calls for joining or distinguishing.

In reading: conjunction and polarity three — Fullness of process or degree — completeness of unfolding through three states; beginning, middle, end. (ternary, shamt, threefold)

ⲱⲁⲙⲧ · ϣⲁⲙⲧ

Three days, three wars, three vessels (wind/water/fire), three plagues, three cosmic ages of regeneration. The structural unity of unfolding.

In reading: fullness of process four — Fullness in extension and ordered manifestation — completeness through four directions, four climes, four stages. (fourfold, ftau)

ϩⲧⲁϥ

Four great days, four faces, four wars, four climes, four salvations. The fullness of what extends through ordered manifestation in the natural.

In reading: fullness in extension and ordered manifestation five — The complete structure of the natural/rational interface — the rational articulated in five degrees, or the natural mind in its five aspects; the number of full structural articulation at the rational/natural meeting. (fivefold, tiou)

ⲧⲟϥ

Five faculties (mind, thought, teaching, counsel, reflection); five sons; five worlds; five storehouses; five elements; five members; five mysteries; five fathers; five awakeners. ALWAYS read as articulation of one structure in five discrete degrees, NEVER as five separate things.

In reading: the complete structure of the natural/rational interface; the rational in five degrees or the natural mind in five aspects seven — Fullness in ultimates and holiness — the complete cycle of accommodation in the natural; the holy completeness. (sevenfold, sashf)

ⲥⲁϣϥ̄ · ⲥⲁⲱϥ

Seven firmaments, seven heavens, seven judges, seven seals, seven storehouses, seven days, seven works of the Living Spirit. The number of completeness in the holy ultimate.

In reading: fullness in ultimates and holiness eight — New beginning beyond the seven — the eighth firmament, the new aeon; what comes after completeness. (eightfold, shmoun)

ϣⲙⲟⲩⲛ

Eight thrones, the eighth firmament where the King of Glory sits, the eighth garment-state. The transition into the new.

In reading: new beginning beyond the seven; the new aeon ten — Completeness in broader orders — full extension beyond the inner cycle; the structural completeness of the broader order. (tenfold, mēt)

ⲙⲏⲧ

Ten chariots that Jesus mounts, ten firmaments. The number of broad completeness in extension.

In reading: completeness in broader orders twelve — Completeness in the broadest order — the fullness of states the rational passes through in its formation; the structural fullness of the cycle of regeneration. (mntsnaus)

ⲙⲛⲧⲥⲛⲁⲩⲥ

Twelve great aeons, twelve hours of the day, twelve judges, twelve zodia, twelve wisdoms, twelve doctrines, twelve dignities. The fullest structural number in the corpus.

In reading: completeness in the broadest order

ARCHITECTURAL OBSERVATIONS

Structural patterns observed in the corpus across all 104 teachings.

Structural Overview

The book is the regeneration cycle in seven movements, each section corresponding precisely to one of the seven states the Song of Solomon and the Kephalaia substrate independently narrate. The proportions are themselves the architecture: Section 1 stands alone (1 teaching, 1 chapter) — the threshold awakening, the eyes opening within the molded vessel. Section 2 is long expository seeking (17 teachings, 8 chapters) — the soul going through the streets of the city, mapping the structures of doctrine the watchmen represent. Section 3 is brief and intense (4 teachings, 2 chapters) — the sealed garden opens, the Beloved is in his garden; the Lord at his inmost is named, the Land of Light entered, the eternity of what is given confessed. Section 4 is the longest section (28 teachings, 10 chapters) — the alternation of states, the deeper work the first conjunction has exposed: the self's auto-genesis, the watchmen now wounding, the soul bound in the twelve members, the three malformations and their cleansing. Section 5 is the parallel survey (23 teachings, 8 chapters) — the same divine outgoing now reviewed in its growth, the wheel turning peacefully through the heavens, the cosmic body and the inward gathering. Section 6 is the second culmination (26 teachings, 9 chapters) — the kiss without shame, the daily purification, the Virgin and Continent, the three forms in the perfect man, the full integration achieved at a depth State 3 could not reach. Section 7 is the coda (5 teachings, 3 chapters) — the seal upon the heart and the arm, the prayer that bears the whole, the two essences forever distinguished, the Yes and Amen identified. The book's central architectural feature: two long sections (4 and 6) flanking two brief peaks (3 and 7), with two transitional sections (2 and 5) carrying the soul between the wounds and the sealings. This is exactly the alternation pattern the thesis identifies as the signature of genuine regeneration narrative — and it is here found at the macro scale of the entire corpus.

Reading Order

The corpus order is preserved exactly. The 104 teachings are read in their original sequence, and the seven section boundaries fall at the precise teaching numbers the application block specifies (T1; T2-T18; T19-T22; T23-T50; T51-T73; T74-T99; T100-T104). No teaching has been moved, excluded, or grouped against the corpus's own ordering. The natural fit between teaching content and seven-state arc constitutes independent confirmation of the thesis: the Kephalaia substrate is itself a passage through the seven states at the macro scale, not a static catalogue but a regeneration cycle that unfolds in reading order. The corpus does not need rearrangement because the corpus is itself the cycle.

The Two Long Sections Flank the Two Brief Peaks

Sections 4 and 6 are the two longest in the book (28 and 26 teachings). They flank Sections 3 and 7, which are the two brief, intense peaks (4 and 5 teachings). This is not editorial accident; it is the alternation-of-states pattern at the macro scale. Section 3 is the first conjunction (entry into the inmost), brief because the inmost cannot be elaborated; Section 4 is the long deeper work that the first conjunction has exposed; Section 6 is the second, fuller conjunction; Section 7 is the brief permanent seal. The corpus enacts at scale what the Song narrates in eight verses (5:2-8): conjunction, withdrawal, deeper work, deeper conjunction, permanent sealing.

Two Macro-Redemptive Narratives at T15 and T100

T15 (Twelve Greatnesses descending to Adam) is the longest single teaching of Section 2. T100 (First Man's prayer in distress) is the longest single teaching of Section 7. Both narrate the entire redemptive descent and ascent — but from different vantages. T15 narrates from outside, in the Silver Church register: the cosmological architecture of the descent from the hidden Father through the Mother of Life, First Man, Living Spirit, Third Ambassador, Jesus the Radiance, down to Adam and home in the Last Andrias. T100 narrates from inside, as prayer: the cry from affliction, the petition, the powers sent, the conjunction sealed. The same cycle perceived through truth (T15) and through good (T100), each placed exactly where the seven-state arc requires it: the cosmic descent at the end of seeking, the soul-level prayer at the seal.

Teachings: T15, T100

The Two-Essences Frame Opens and Closes the Book

T2 (Two Trees) at the start of Section 2 establishes the foundational dualism the seeker must first recognize: life and death as two trees with corresponding members, one rational faculty in five degrees met by the same five turned the other way. T103 (Two Essences) at the end of Section 7 closes the same dyad: 'Two substances are those existing from the beginning: the Light and the Darkness, the beautiful and the bitter one and the life and the death.' The dualism opens the seeking and closes the seal. What State 1 only opens the eyes to see, State 7 finally and forever distinguishes — the beautiful separated forth from the darkness, no waters able to mingle them again.

Teachings: T2, T103

The Watchmen Pattern: Same Doctrine, Different Wound

The teachings that lay out the structure of divine outgoing in Section 2 (the 'watchmen' the seeker meets in the city) — the four days, five faces, twelve greatnesses, three times, four wars, four salvations — are paralleled by structurally identical teachings in Section 4: the twelve judges (T28), twelve thrones (T29), three days and two deaths (T41), three plagues (T43), four ages of separation (T48). The same architecture that guided in State 2 now wounds in State 4, exactly as the Song's watchmen 'go about the city' first finding (3:3) and later wounding (5:7). The corpus recognizes this and treats the doctrinal architecture twice — once as map for the seeker, once as instrument of the deeper discrimination.

The Five-Faculty Structure as Deepest Substrate

Across all seven sections, one substrate holds: the rational in five degrees (mind, thought, teaching, counsel, reflection). The Two Trees (T2) map life and death through these five members. The Five Faces (T5), Five Fathers (T7), Five Mysteries (T9), Five Awakeners (T13), Five Sons of First Man (T15), Five Forms of Darkness (T27), Five Living Fires (T75), Five Mysteries of First Man again (T94), Five Births of the Body (T90), the fivefold cosmos that cannot stand if one degree is missing (T97), and the five-articulating-degrees by which the word becomes audible (T92) — all draw on the same fivefold articulation. This is not redundancy; it is the corpus showing one ontological structure recognized at every register where it appears. The five-faculty pattern is what the soul is, what it traverses, and what it returns to.

Compassions and Weepings as Sign of the Cycle's Reality

T59 (Three Griefs of Mother of Life) and T60 (Four Weepings of First Man's Garments) are placed in Section 5, the Garden Inspected. They are not lamentations of failure; they are the recognition that the regeneration cycle costs at every register. The Lord, going forth, weeps three times in descent under necessity (knowing what the self will do) and a fourth time at the consummation, mourning those who prepared themselves for falsity. The three compassions and four weepings are signs that the cycle is real and not theoretical: the divine outgoing actually grieves. State 5's inspection of growth includes the inspection of what was sorrowful in the doing of it.

Teachings: T59, T60

Damaged Teachings Carry the Sealing Function

Several teachings near the corpus's close are heavily fragmentary — T95 (hidden things in the eye), T102 (mystical seeing), T104 (cherubim, pillars, garments). The damage does not weaken the book; it confirms it. State 7 is the seal, and the seal is not narrative — it is stamp, imprint, fixed character. What survives in T102 and T104 carries the doctrinal close exactly: the Yes and Amen identified as Calling and Hearing, the supports of the regenerated rational named, the inner sight opened in the soul's appointed time. The Song's State 7 likewise closes not in narrative but in declarative imprint: 'Set me as a seal… love is strong as death… many waters cannot quench love.' The corpus and the Song agree on form as well as content: the seal is given, not narrated.
